FOREWORD

The Government of West Bengal started the Department of Post-Graduate Training and Research at the Sanskrit College, Calcutta, in 1951, and made arrangements for the publication of a half-yearly bulletin entitled "Our Heritage" embodying the contributions made by its members. Last year the Government decided to undertake the publication of a series of Texts and Studies. The present work, Studies in the Upapuranas, the first in the Studies Series, is from the pen of Dr. R. C. Hazra, Professor of Smrti and Purana at this College. The work is expected to consist of four more volumes of equal length, and will cover the entire Upapurana literature, about which very little was known to scholars. The value and importance of the Purana literature for the study of social, religious and even political history of ancient and mediaeval India have been widely felt and recognised by all Indologists. In the present volume, Dr. Hazra deals with the Saura and Vaisnava Upapuranas examining fully the various problems connected with the individual texts, and also giving analysis of their contents. I have reasons to believe that this and the other volumes to be published subsequently will remove a long-felt want and bring out the manifold interest of an important but much neglected branch of Sanskrit literature.

Gaurinath Sastri
General Editor.

PREFACE

It is a long-standing, but erroneous, belief of wide popularity that the Upapuranas are 'later and inferior works' and scarcely deserve any serious attention. My chief object in the present work has been to point out to the scholarly world that the Upapuranas are rich as much in number as in content, that some of them are much earlier than many of the so-called Mahāpurāṇas, and that, like the extant Mahāpuranas, they are of capital importance not only for the study of the social and religious institutions of the Hindus from the pre-Gupta period downward but also for varied information of literary, historical, geographical and cultural interest. I have, therefore, taken pains to analyse briefly the contents of those Upapuranas which have been available to me either in printed forms or in mansucripts and to furnish as much useful and interesting information as possible on these points. I could not overlook the fact that it is by no means easy for many ardent and inquisitive students of ancient Indian history and culture to get access to the printed editions or manuscripts of the different Upapuranas, which are often very difficult to procure, or to go conveniently and profitably through these mostly extensive works written in Sanskrit. Feeling that without any idea of the period of origin and development of a work, especially of the Purana literature, it is neither possible nor safe to enter into a critical and scientific study of its contents, I have tried to determine the approximate dates of the individual Upapuranas, or parts thereof, by thoroughly utilising all such materials, including those contained in the works themselves, as have been found helpful in determining their relative and absolute chronology. I have also taken full notice of the references and quotations from these works in the Smrti commentaries, Nibandhas, etc. But in the case of those Upapuranas which have been drawn upon profusely by the comparatively early Nibandha-writers, the quotations made from them in the later Nibandhas have generally been overlooked. Those references and quotations, however, which I have been able to trace in the respective Upapuranas, will be enlisted in Appendix I at the end of the final volume. As regards the lost Upapuranas,

I have tried to give as much information as possible about their contents, dates and provenance, on the basis of the references and quotations contained in the Nibandhas and other works. Sanskrit or otherwise. I should mention in this connection that in examining the different Upapurāṇas I have found some (viz., Devī-purāṇa, Krijā-yogasāra, Kālikā-purāṇa, Mahābhāgavata, Dharma-purāṇa, Bṛhaddharma-purāṇa, etc.) which contain highly valuable materials for the reconstruction of the social and religious history of Eastern India, especially of Bengal and Kāmarūpa.

As the Purana literature consists of the eighteen Mahapuranas as well as of the numerous Upppuranas, a complete idea of this vast literature is not possible without the study of both these classes of writings, My present work, therefore, has been devoted exclusively to the latter class of books, my previous one entitled 'Studies in the Puranic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs' being concerned with the Mahapuranas only. I should point out here that in the present volume as well as in the others to be published subsequently. I have collected materials which support my views, set forth in the second part of my Puranic Records, regarding the different stages in the development of the Hindu rites and customs.

In writing these volumes I have utilised the works of various modern authors in different connections, but I am specially indebted to the veteran scholar Mahāmahopādhyāya Dr. P.V. Kane, M.A., LL. M., D. Litt., whose monumental work, viz., History of Dharma-sāstra, has been a great source of inspiration to me and encouraged me to take up a vast subject for critical study. As regards the dates of the Smṛti works, I have followed Min. Dr. Kane's conclusions almost invariably.

I feel much hesitation in treading upon a field which is almost untrodden, in writing upon a subject on which very little has been written; but I leave my work, which has extended over a number of years, to speak for itself. I venture, however, to claim that my efforts will add to the knowledge of the much neglected subject and bring out its many-sided importance. I have tried to confine myself, from direct reading, strictly to available facts and avoid vague or sweeping generalisations, always bearing in mind that the chains of historical research can never be forged without the links supplied by individual facts.

For reasons stated in the Preface to my Puranic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs and for the sake of uniformity I have used, in a few cases, the Vangavāsī Press (Calcutta) editions of the Puranas and Upapuranas, printed in Bengali characters, in preference to the more widely used Devanāgarī editions, but in doing so I have always taken particular care to give full references to, or add comparative notes on, the different editions of these works, so that scholars may not find any difficulty in tracing the references in the South Indian and other Devanāgarī editions.

I take this opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to the Board of Editors of the Calcutta Sanskrit College Research Series for accepting the present work for publication and also to our principal Dr. Gaurinath Sastri for recommending it to the Board.

Certain portions of this work were published as isolated articles in different oriental journals. But I have spared no pains to improve considerably upon these published portions with fresh materials collected by more recent studies.

STUDIES IN THE UPAPURĀŅAS VOL. I

CHAPTER I

THE UPAPURANA LITERATURE—ITS EXTENT, ANTIQUITY AND ORIGIN

In these days when all Indologists are feeling the want of a true history of Indian life and thought of the past and our able antiquarians are directing their attention and energy towards its reconstruction, it is a matter of great surprise and disappointment that very little is known and still less has yet been said about those valuable records of Indian life and thought which are known as Upapurāṇas (or secondary Purāṇas¹). The whole responsibility for such apathy of scholars towards these valued treasures must be laid on the high importance

I The work done by scholars on the Upapuranas is very meagre and scarcely deserves any serious mention H. H. Wilson, who, in his Essays Analytical, Critical and Philological, and in the Preface to his translation of the Visnu-purana, says much on the Puranas, devotes only about five pages to the Upapurānas (see Wilson, Vishnu Purāna, Preface, pp lxxxvi-xci), Haraprasad Shastri's treatment of some of the Upapuranas in the Preface (pp cc-ccxv) to his Descriptive Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Collections of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol V (Purāna Manuscripts), is no better than mere cataloguing; M Winternitz devotes on the whole about seven pages to the treatment of only a very few of the Upapuranas in his History of Indian Literature, Vol. I, J N. Farquhar gives, in his Outline of the Religious Literature of India, very short and scrappy information about a few Upapurānas only, the Cambridge History of India, Vol I spares only about half a page for the treatment of these works, the Bengali encyclopaedia Viśvakosa, which devotes as many as 165 pages to the principal Puranas, deals with the Upapuranas in 3 columns only (see Viśvakosa, Vol. II, pp 419-420), A. A. Macdonell finishes his treatment of the Upapuranas in four lines only, without mentioning even a single name (see Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, p. 302), and the Encyclopâedia of Religion and Ethics (Vol. X, p 455) has fourteen lines devoted to the Upapurānas Besides these there are the Notices and the Catalogues of Sanskrit Mss, especially those of R. L. Mitra, J. Eggeling and Th. Aufrecht, as well as about a dozen isolated articles (except those of the present writer) on only a few of the Upapurānas. This is practically the whole work that has been done on the Upapuranas up to the present time.

which has been attached, deservedly or undeservedly, for hundreds of years to the eighteen 'great' (Mahat) Purānas' as well as on the disparaging prefix 'npa' attached to the common title (Purāna) to characterise those Purānic works which are different from the 'great eighteen'. Whatever the reason may be, we should not, with our critical outlook belitting the present age and its culture, be swayed by mere tradition and baseless impression but be ready to give due consideration to this long neglected branch of Sanskrit literature.

Following the tradition of the Mahapuranas, orthodox opinion tries to limit the number of the Upapuranas rigidly to 'eighteen's even in those cases where the promulgators of such opinion are fully conscious of the existence of a larger number; but while in the enumerations

- 2 Though the name 'Mahāpurāṇa' for the 'eighteen' principal 'Purānas' is of very late origin, being found only in Bhāg XII 7. 10 and 22 and Bv IV. 131. 7 and 10, it has now become very popular and is universally used for the older name 'Purāna'
- 3 See Pd, Pātāla-khanda 111. 94b-98, Kūr, I 1 16-20, Sk V. 11 (Revā-khanda). 1. 46-52; Sk VII. 1. 2. 11-15; Siva-māhātmya-khanda (of the Sūta-samhītā of the Skanda-p) 1. 13b-18 (for which see also Eggeling, Ind. Off. Cat., VI., p. 1378), Saura-samhītā of the Skanda-p. (Eggeling, Ind. Off. Cat., VI., p. 1382); Revā-māhātmya (which claims to be a part of the Vāyu-p and is very much the same as the Revā-khanda occurring in Sk V; see Aufrecht, Bod. Cat., p. 65, Nos. 114-116), Dbh I 3. 13-16; Gd I. 223. 17-20 (=)īvānanda's edition I. 215 17-20 = Vangavāsī edition I 27 17-20), Brhaddh I 25 18-19 and 23-26; Parāšara-upapurāna 1. 28-31 (for which see also Eggeling, Ind Off. Cat., VI., p. 1230), Gan., I. 1. 8, Bhāg XII 7 22; Bv IV. 131. 22; Ekāmra-p. 1. 20b-23; Vindhya-māhātmya, chap. 4 (ASB Ms No 8091, fol 8a), Vārunopapurāna, chap 1 (Sastri and Sastri, Madras Cat., XXVII, p. 10331), Bhakti-ratnākara of Gopāla-dāsa (Mitra, Notices, IX, No 2918, p. 32).

For the lists of eighteen Upapurānas contained in verses quoted from the 'Kūrma-p', 'Brahmavaivarta-p' etc., also see Nityācāra-pradīpa, I. p. 19, Smrtitattva, I. pp 792-3, Vīramitrodaya, Paribhāsā-prakāśi, pp 13-15, Caturvarga-cintāmani, I (Dāna-khanda), pp. 532-3 and II (Vrata khanda). i, p. 21, and Prasthāna-bheda, p. 10

Mat. 53. 59-62 mention only four Upapurānas, viz., Nārasimha, Nandipurāna, Sāmba and Āditya, and seem to be ignorant of the group of 'eighteen'.

4 For example, after expressly mentioning that the Upapuranas are of the Puranas there is almost complete agreement with regard to the titles, this is by no means the case with the titles of the Upapuranas. In order to acquaint ourselves with the nature of the disagreement we give below a number of lists of 'eighteen' Upapuranas which we have been able to collect from different sources.

'eighteen' in number and then giving the titles of the 'eighteen' Upapurānas, the Brhaddharma-p (I. 25 27) says \cdot anyāś ca samhītāh sarvā mārīca-kāpīlādayah/

sarvatra dharma-kathane tulya-sāmarthyam ucyate//, thus intimating its knowledge not only of the Mārīca and Kāpila Upapurānas but also of others which were considered as much authoritative as the famous 'eighteen'. (Note the word 'ādayah' in 'mārīca-kāpilādayah')

5 In some of the lists of 'eighteen' principal Purānas the title 'Siva' or 'Šaiva' is found in place of 'Vāyavīya'. See, for instance, Vis III 6 21ff, Bhāg. XII 7 23ff and XII 13, 4ff, Kūr. I. 1, 13ff, Pd I. 62, 2ff, IV 1111. 90ff, VI 219 25ff, and VI 263 77ff, Var 112 69ff., Mātk 137. 8ff. (=Venkat. edition 134 8ff.), Lg I. 39 61ff., Šiv V (Vāyavīya-samhitā) 1, 1 38ff., Šiva-māhātmya-khanda (of the Sūta-samhitā of the Skanda-p) 1. 7-10 (for which see also Eggeling, Ind Off. Cat, VI, p. 1377), Saura-samhitā of the Skanda-p (Eggeling, Ind Off. Cat, VI, p. 1382), Sambhava-kānda of the Siva-rahasya-khanda of the Samkara-samhitā of the Skanda-p. (Eggeling, Ind. Off. Cat, VI, p. 1363), and so on Dacca Univ Mss (Nos 319, 4196 and 4649) of the Brhaddharma-p. (I 25) give the titles of the 'eighteen' Purānas thus Brahma-p, Pādma, Brahmānda, Vaisnava, Brahmavaivarta, Mahābhāgavata, Bhavisya, Gāruda, Lainga, Saiva, Vārāha, Mārkandeya, Skānda, Kaurma, Matsya-p., Āgneya, Vāyavya and Srībhāgavata. (It is to be noted that this list omits the Vāmana and the Nāradīya and names the Mahābhāgavata and the Saiva in their stead).

The ASB edition of the Brhaddharma-p (I 25 20 22) mentions the Mahābhāgavata but omits the name of the Śribhāgavata, the number of Purānas named in it being thus seventeen But the Vanga edition, which mentions the Śribhāgavata, wrongly replaces the Mahābhāgavata by the 'Nrsimha', which is reckoned again in a subsequent verse as one of the eighteen Upapurānas.

In the verses of a 'Kālikā-p'. quoted in Caturvarga-cintāmani, I, p. 531, the 'Saiva', Kālikā (for Bhāgavata), Saura and Vahnija (i.e. the genuine Agneya-p passing under the title 'Vahni-purāna') are included among the eighteen principal Purānas

- V. 'Kūrma-p.' quoted in Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmani, I, pp. 532-3--
 - 1. Ādya, declared by Sanatkumāra; 2. Nārasiṃha; 3. Nānda, spoken out by Kumāra (v. l. 'nāradam' for 'nāndaṃ'); 4. Sivadharma, declared by Nandīśa in person, 5. Durvāsasokta (called Āścarya?—durvāsasoktam āścaryam); 6. Nāra-

Raghunandana reads 'daivam sarvārtha-siddhidam' and 'parāśaroktam aparam' for 'sauram sarvārtha-samcayam' and 'parāśaroktam mārīcam' respectively of the Kūrma-p. (for which see the immediately preceding foot-note).

The verses of the Kūrma-p, as given in the Vanga, edition (pp. 264-5) and Candicarana Smrtibhūṣana's edition (pp. 212-3) of the Malamāsa-tattva, reads 'šāmbam' for 'cātha' (in the line 'kāpilam vārunam cātha'), and 'pādmam' for 'sāmbam' (in the line 'māheśvaram tathā śāmbam etc'). As these readings make the number of the Upapurānas nineteen, they should be rejected

8 Thus the Parāśara-upapurāna seems to be distinguished from the Visnup, or the spurious 'Vaisnava' (mentioned by Vallālasena in his Dānasāgara, p. 7, verse 63), which was spoken out by Parāśara.

VI 'Kūrma-p.' quoted in Hemādri's Caturvarga cintāmani, II. i, p. 21—

1. Ādya, declared by Smatkumāra; 2. Nārasimha; 3. Nānda, spoken out by Kumāra, 4. Sivadharma, declared by Nandīśa in person (1 l'nandikeśvara-yugmam' for śivadharmākhyam'); 5. VII. 'Kūrma-p.' quoted in the Sabda-kalpadruma (under 'Upapurāṇa')'—

1. Ādya, declared by Sanatkumāra; 2. Nārasimha; 3. Vāyavīya, spoken out by Kumāra (kumāreņānubhāṣitam);

4. Sıvıdharma, declared by Nandīśa in person, 5. Durvāsasokta (called Āścarya?—durvāsasoktam āścaryam), 6. Nāradīya; 7. Nandikeśvara-yugma; 8. Uśanaserita; 9. Kāpila, 10. Vāruna, 11. Sāmba, 12. Kālikā; 13. Māheśvara, 14. Pādma, 15. Daiva, which accomplishes all the ends of life (daivam

g It is to be noted that although the verses of the Kūrma-p quoted in the Sabda-kalpadruma agree almost literally with the verses of the 'Kaurma' quoted in the Vanga ed (pp. 264-5) and Candicarana Smrtibhūsana's ed (pp. 212-3) of the Malamāsa tattva of Raghunandana, the mention of the 'Nandikeśvara-yugma' and the 'Pādma' (occupying the seventh and the fourteenth place respectively in the list) makes the number of the Upapurānas nineteen. If the two Nandikeśvara-purānas are taken to form one Upapurāna, then, of course, the number becomes eighteen.

It should be mentioned here that these verses are quite different from those ascribed to the 'Brahmavaivarta' in Mitra Miśra's Viramitrodaya, Paribhāsā-prahāśa, p. 14

20 The relevant line naming the 'Kālipurāna' is "tatah kālipurānākhyam vāsistham muni-pumgavāh," in which 'vāsistham' may be a wrong reading for 'višistam'. This latter reading ('višistam') is found to occur in the Siva-māhātmya-khanda (of the Sūta-samhitā of the Skanda-p) whose verses on the titles of the eighteen Upapurānas agree with those quoted in the Prasthāna bheda,

A glance over the above lists will show how greatly divergent the lists sometimes are. Though, as will be shown hereafter, the same Upapurāna is in some cases mentioned in different lists under different titles, the obove lists supply us with the titles of many more Upapurāņas than eighteen.

Besides the Upapuranas mentioned in these lists, there were many others, of which some are available in printed forms, some still exist in manuscripts, some are known only from references and quotations,²⁴ and some must have been lost altogether without leaving any trace of their existence. In spite of the serious loss that has been

- 21-22 The 'Gāruda' and the 'Nāradīya' have not been named in the list of Mahāpurānas given in the Ekāmra-p (1 18-20a). They have been replaced by the 'Saiva' and the 'Nārasimha,' which are really Upapurānas.
- 23 For the relevant verses see Sastri and Sastri, Madras Cat, XXVII, No 15663, p 10331
- 24 From an examination of a large number of works, especially of the Sanskrit literature, we have been able to collect the names of more than one hundred Upapurānas including those mentioned in the above lists, Questions relating to the identification, date and contents of these Upapurānas will be dealt with as fully as possible in their respective cases, brought upon the Upapurana literature by the progress of time and the consequent changes in political administration as well as in the ideas, manners and customs of the people, the Upapurāņic works are still rich in number and content.

Though it must be admitted that in this extensive Upapurana literature there are works which are of comparatively late dates, it is by no means wise to suppose that the whole literature cannot lay claim to an early beginning. The verses of the Kürma-p., which contain the list of 'eighteen Upapuranas', are found quoted in Raghunandana's Smrti-tattva (I, pp. 792-3), Mitra Miśra's Viramitrodaya (Paribhāsā-prakāśā, pp. 13-14), and Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmaņi (I, pp. 532-3 and II. 1, p. 21). The titles, as occurring in this list, are also given as derived from the 'Kūrma-p' in Narasimha Vājapeyın's Nityācāra-pradīpa, I, p. 19. A list very similar to that of the Kurma-p. is found in the Saura-samhita of the Skanda-p.,25 in Sk VII. 1. 2. 11-15, in the Siva-mahatmya-khanda of the Suta-samhita (which belongs to the Skanda-p, and of which all the four Khandas have been commented on by Madhavacarya), in the Parasara-upapurana (1. 28-31),28 and in the Garuda-p. (I. 223. 17-20).27 In his Danasagara Vallalasena refers to the lists of Upapuranas occurring in the Kurma and the Adi-p.28 These and similar other evidences, which can be adduced from different sources, are perhaps sufficient to show that the date of formation of the group of 'eighteen' Upapuranas as found in the Kurma-p. should be placed not later than 850 A.D. The upper limit of this date seems to be supplied by Matsya-p., chap. 53, which, by its mention of only those four Upapuranas (viz., Nārasimha, Nandī-p., Samba and Āditya) which were

'well-established in society', 28 betrays its knowledge of a few more Upapuranas and at the same time its ignorance of any group of 'eighteen'. The probable date of Matsya-p., chap 53 being 550-650 A. D. and the verses (59-63), in which these four Upapuranas have been mentioned, appearing to be spurious but by no means very late additions, 30 the date of formation of the group should be placed approximately between 650 and 800 A D.31

- 29 Cf upābhedān pravaksyāmi loke ye sampratisthitāh Mat. 53 59a
- 30 Mar 59-63, which give the titles and contents of the Upapuranas, appear to be spurious for the following reasons.—
 - (1) Nothing is said about the gift of any of the Upapurānas, although the chapter is on dāna-dharma,
 - (11) there is no mention of the Upapuranas in verses other than those mentioned above,
 - (111) though in the verses following verse 63 the classification and contents of the Purānas and the titles and extents of the epics are given, there is not even a single word on the Upapurānas

These verses are, however not very late additions; for, Narasimha Vājapeyin, who quotes all these verses except 59a in his Nityācāra-pradīpa, refers to Laksmīdhara's explanation of verse 63 (astādaśabhyas tu prthak purānam etc) as meaning the Kālikā-p etc (see Nityācāra-pradīpa, I, p 18) As a matter of fact, Laksmīdhara quotes Mat 53 59b-63 in his Krtya-kalpataru, I (Brahmacāri-kānda), p 30 and takes the expression 'tad etebhyo vinirgatam' of Mat. 53 63 (astādaśabhyas tu prthak purānam yat pradisyate, etc) to mean the Kālikā-p etc. Candeśvara and Hemādri also quote verses 59b-61 and 62c-63 in their Krtya-ratnākara, pp 31-32 and Caturvarga-cintāmani, II 1, pp 21-22 respectively Following Laksmīdhara Candeśvara also explains the words 'tad etebhyo vinirgatam' (occurring in Mat 53 63) as 'vinirgatam udbhūtam yathā kālikāpurānādi'

The omission of these verses by Aparārka who quotes verses 3-4, 11-20, 22-25a and 26b-56a in his com (pp. 392-6) on the Yājñavalkya-smrti, by Vallālasena who quotes verses 3-4 and 11-56 in his Dānasāgara (pp 463-6), and by Govindānanda who has a few lines in his Dāna-kaumudī (p 70), should not be taken seriously. These authors, who drew upon Mat. 53 in connection with donation, had nothing to do with verses 59-63 in which there is no mention of donation.

31 Kūr. I. 1 16-20, which deal with the origin and titles of the eighteen Upapurānas and are given immediately after the list of the principal Purānas, do not seem to have belonged to the present Kūrma-p. 10 its Pāñcarātra

This approximate date of the grouping must not be taken to be the date of composition of the individual works forming the group, because all the eighteen Upapurāṇas, which do not belong to the same sect, could not have been written at the same time. The mention of the Nārasiṃha, Nandī-p., Sāmba and Āditya in Matsya-p., chap. 53 shows that there were Upapurāṇas which were written much earlier than the date of formation of the group; and such formation could be possible only when, in course of time, the Upapurāṇas attained the number of eighteen. It can be taken, therefore, that the age of the Upapurāṇas began approximately from the Gupta period. Orthodox opinion, however, is sometimes in favour of tracing the Upapurāṇas to a much earlier date. 35

As to the origin of the Upapuranas the Kūrma-p., Siva-māhātmya-khanda (of the Sūta-samhitā of the Skanda-p.) and Parāśara-upapurana record a tradition that the sages proclaimed the Upapuranas after listening to the eighteen Puranas from Vyāsa.⁵⁴ This tradition, which character; because the line 'idam tu pañcadaśamam purānam kaurmam uttamam', which occurs after the list of the Upapurānas, clearly shows that it immediately followed the list of the principal Purānas and could not be separated by the list of the Upapurānas

For the date of the Kurma-p see Hazra, Puranic Records, pp 57ff

- 32 That this presumption is not totally baseless, we shall see when we analyse the Upapuranas individually.
- 33 For instance, in connection with the Upapurānas Mitra Miśra says in his Vīramitrodaya (Paribhāṣā-prakāśa, p. 15) "etāny upapurānāni puranebhya eva nirgatānīti yājñavalkyena purānatvena samgrhītāni", thus implying that the Upapurānas were known to Yājñavalkya is accepted as true by the Nibandha-writers and others, as assigns the Upapurānas to a date posterior to that of the Purāṇas and consequently to a position inferior to that of the latter. The Matsya-p. goes a step fatther when it calls the Upapurānas mere subsections (upabheda) of the Purāṇas and propounds the theory that any Purānic work, which will be found to be 'different' (prthak) from the eighteen Purāṇas, must be known to have originated from one or other of these Purānas. The great popularity of this theory is evidenced not only by its verbal reproduction in some of the Purāṇic works themselves but also by the fact that the Nibandhakāras and others refer to, or reproduce, the lines of the Matsya-p. either in explaining the origin and nature of the different Upapurāṇas in accordance with this theory or in including, in the class of Upapurāṇas, those works of Purānic character which were not mentioned in the lists known to the respective writers, so that these last-mentioned works might be regarded as equally authori-

Upapuranas themselves shows that these works do not often look upon this theory with the same respect as the principal Puranas or other works do. In a large number of cases the Upapuranas are found to style themselves simply 'Purāṇa' and not 'Upapurāna' and to try to pass on their own merit without caring to attach themselves for the sake of authority to any of the principal Puranas,40 and in a few cases they even vie with the principal Purāṇas by laying claim to their position.41 Sometimes they are found to go a step farther and claim to be superior to the Mahāpurānas 42 It is to be noted that the older of the extant Upapuranas do not give any list of Upapuranas, nor do they seem to be familiar with their common title 'Upapurana' or with the theory of their origin which makes them mere supplements to the principal Puranas.43 This disagreement between the time-honoured theory and the actual practice of the Upapuranas, especially of the older ones, naturally raises doubt as to the amount of truth contained in this theory. So, in order to acquaint ourselves with the actual state of things and thus to explain successfully this disagreement between theory and practice, we shall have to investigate into the origin of the present Puranas and Upapuranas.

In connection with our study on the present form and character of the principal Puranas we have said elsewhere⁴⁴ that the Purana

- 40 For examples we may refer to the Narasımha-p, Devi-p, Kālikā-p. etc.
- 41 For instance, in its Vāyaviya-samhitā (i. i 41) the Šiva-p. lays claim to the position of a principal Purāna by saying that the Devi-bhāgavata (1 3 16) includes the Bhāgavata-p. among the Upapurānas, obviously in order to establish its own claim to the status of a Purāna, the 'Kālikā-p' claims to be the real Bhāgavata-p probably, because of its dealing with the exploits of Bhagavatī (see the verse of the 'Kālikā-p' quoted in Caturvarga-cintāmani, I, p 531), and so on

- 44 Problems relating to the eighteen Purānas have been dealt with elaborately in our Purānic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs, published by the University of Dacca See also B C. Mazumdar's article on the origin and character of the Purāna literature in Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee Silver Jubilee Volumes III, Orientalia—Part 2, pp. 9-30.

literature, which can be traced back to the Vedic period and was as sacred and important to the Vedic Aryans as the Vedas themselves, dealt with five subjects in its earlier (but most probably not in its original) form, and that, in course of time, its character was changed by the Smarta Brahmin sectaries who took it up for successfully propagating their own ideas among the people who were gradually losing respect for the Vedas and the Brahmanical rules of life and conduct under the influence of the heresies as well as of the popular systems of religion then prevailing in the country. Hence the question arises—who among the Smarta Brahmin sectaries first concerned themselves with the writing and rewriting of the present Puranas?

From a study of the historical records of ancient India as well as of the Mahābhārata⁴⁶ and other early works of the Sanskrit literature we understand that in the pre-Gupta days the most powerful and popular systems of religion, except the heresies, were those of the Brāhmas (i.e. Brahmā-worshippers), the Pāūcarātras and the Pāšupatas. So, it may be supposed that it was the Smārta adherents to these religious systems who first took up the Purāṇas for establishing the Varnāśramadharma and the authority of the Vedas among the people and increased the number of the already existing Purāṇas by fresh additions of Purāṇic works which were often characterised by the names of the sectarian deities or their chief forms. This supposition gai is ground when we see from our examination and analysis of the contents of the extant Purāṇas⁴⁷ that those portions of these works which are to be dated

(1) sarga (creation), (11) pratisarga (re-creation, 1 e the periodical annihilation and renewal of the worlds, including the geography of the earth and the atmosphere as well as the distribution of different races on the surface of the earth), (iii) vamia (genealogies of gods, kings and sages), (1v) manuantara (cosmic cycles or the Manu-periods of time, 1 e those great periods each of which is reigned over by a Manu or primal ancestor of the human race), and (v) vamianicarita (history of the royal dynasties and of the families of sages)

carlier than 500 A. D. exhibit prominently the influence of the Smarta Brahmas, Smarta Pancaratras and Smarta Pasupatas. 48

The next most important and powerful group of sectaries to concern themselves with the composition of the Purāṇas were the Bhāgavatas who rose to great prominence during the Gupta period. It was undoubtedly the Smārta adherents to the Bhāgavata system who wrote the Bhāgavata-p.

Though it is next to impossible to say definitely when the Smārta adherents to the four systems mentioned above first began to use the Purānas for controlling the masses who had become seriously influenced by these⁴⁹ and other systems of religion, and what the number of the prevalent Purānas was when these sectaries first set their hands to them, it can scarcely be denied that more Purānas than one had come into existence long before the beginning of the Christian era. By its mention of a 'Bhavisyat-purāna' the Āpastamba-dharmasūtra shows that at the time of composition of this Sūtra work 'the term Purāṇa had become so thoroughly specialised as to have lost its proper meaning, and had become merely the designation of a particular class of books. It would have required the existence of a number of books called Purānas to produce that change, and manifestly they must have had their own special names to distinguish from one another and so

⁵⁰ The term 'Bhavisyat-purāna' is self-contradicting, because the word 'purāna' originally means 'ancient', and then, as a name in literature, it signifies not an ancient book but an ancient subject, Archaica convert their common title Purāṇa into a class designation.'51 Hence it must be admitted that the number of Purānas had begun to multiply even before the time of Āpastamba. An examination of the titles of the 'eighteen' Purāṇas shows that this growth in their number must have been accelerated by the activities of the sectaries mentioned above, and when, in course of time, their number became 'eighteen,'53 it was rigidly fixed.

Here a question may be raised as to how the eighteen Purāṇas, which were the mouth-pieces of sectaries following different faiths, could be grouped together and regarded as equally important and authoritative by all of them and how they came to believe deeply in this group even at the sacrifice of their respective sectarian interests in reply to this question we may refer to the spirit of religious syncretism, ⁵⁴ as well as that of sectarian rivalry, ⁵⁵ that went hand in hand in ancient India ⁵⁶ and is to be found in the Hindu society even at the present day. These tendencies must have been incentives to the recasting of the same Purāṇa sometimes by different sects as well as as to the interpolation of chapters on different detties in a particular Purāṇa; and in this way all the Purāṇas had come to attain equal, or almost equal, importance in the eyes of the worshippers of Brahmā, Viṣnu and Siva before the grouping was made.

- 51 Pargiter, Ancient Indian Historical Tradition, pp 50-51.
- 52 For instance, the titles 'Brahma-purana,' 'Padma-purana,' etc. connect these works with Brahma, who came out of the Lotus issuing from Visiu's navel. Similarly, Matsya, Kūrma, Vāmana, etc. are the names of Visiu's incarnations, Garuḍa is Visnu's mount, and so on.
- 53 Among the numerals used for summing up a multitude of concrete objects, a line of abstract ideas, a number of traditional texts, and the like, the numeral 'eighteen' is often used in the position of a sacred number

For a detailed study on this numeral see O. Stein in Poona Orientalist, Vol. 1, No. 3, PP 1-37.

- 54 Cf. for example, the great influence of the Sāmkhya and Vedānta systems as well as of the doctrine of Trimūrti on the Purānas
- 55 See, for instance, Varāha-p, chaps. 70 and 71, Padma-p (Srsti-kh). chap. 17, Linga-p. I. 107, 41-42, and so on See also Hazra, Purānic Records, pp. 8ff.
 - 56 The present Puranas amply testify to both these tendencies

The non-inclusion of the word 'upapurāna' in the Amarakoşa which defines 'Purana' as 'panca-laksana', and the mention of the titles of the 'eighteen' Puranas in the Visnu-p., Markandeya-p. etc. without any reference, direct or indirect, to any Upapurana, tend to show that the group of the 'eighteen' Puranas had been formed before the Upapuranas came into existence 57 After this grouping had been complete, there came into prominence many sub-systems which arose from the main systems of religion, mentioned above, either directly or by identifying the local deities with one or other of the prominent deities of the main systems. In addition to these, there were also other independent systems, viz, Saura,58 Sākta etc, which began to hold the field and attain rivalry with the systems already established in the country. These sub-systems and independent systems also had their Smarta adherents who interpolated chapters in the Puranas of the already established group, and, in some cases, wrote new and independent Puranic works styled 'Purana's in order to propagate their own ideas. Thus, with the progress of time the number of the Puranas was further increased with fresh additions. But as the followers of the famous group of the 'eighteen' Purānas believed deeply that there could be no 'Purana' beyond the famous 'eighteen', they were unwilling to assign these new Purante works to a status equal to that of the famous Puranas. On the other hand, these new Purānic works had become too well-known and popular to be ignored totally. So, they introduced verses into the Matsya-p. to the effect that any Puranic work, which would be found to be different

⁵⁷ The tradition recorded in the Kūrma-p, Šiva-māhātmya-kh, etc also says that the Upapurānas were written by different sages after the eighteen Purānas had been completed by Vyāsa. (See footnote 34 above)

Though Sun-worship is of very ancient origin, the Saura sect, with Persian elements in the cult of the Sun, became prominent in India much later. See Farquhar, Outline of the Religious Literature of India, pp. 151-3, Bhandarkar, Vaisnavism etc., pp. 153-5, J. N. Banerjea, Development of Hindu Iconography, pp. 137-140, 198-9, 430-445 from the established eighteen, would be known to have originated from the latter. Thus, we think, the original position of the 'eighteen' Puranas and the rigidity of their number were maintained, and the Upapuranas also were given a position.

The theory, thus propounded and introduced into the Matsya-p by the staunch believers in the 'eighteen' Purāṇas, influenced not only the later Purāṇas but also the Upapurānas in some cases and was the root cause of giving rise to the common title 'Upapurāna'ao for the new Purāṇic works by calling them mere supplements (upabheda) of the famous eighteen. It is for this reason that these new Purānic works are grouped under the common title 'Upapurāṇa' in some of the extant Purāṇas and that in a few cases the new Purāṇic works are found to attach themselves as supplements to one or other of the eighteen Purāṇas⁶¹ or to call themselves 'Upapurāṇas' in spite of their independent character. 62

As to the contents of the Upapurāṇas the Saura-p. says. "A Purāṇa has five characteristics, viz., creation, re-creation, genealogy (of gods, kings and sages), Manu-periods of time, and history of the royal dynasties and the families of sages. These are the characteristics of the Purāṇas such as the Brāhma etc. These, again, are known to be the characteristics of the Upapurānas because of their supplementary character." The Bhāgavata and the Brahmavaivarta-p. also express the same opinion though from a different standpoint. Of these too works, the former says: "According to the Purāṇa-experts,

⁶⁰ The Bhagavata-p, (XII 7. 10 and 22) divides the Puranic works into two classes, (1) Alpa or Ksullaka and (11) Mahat. But the passage, in which this classification occurs, is of a very late date

⁶¹ For instance, the Saura-p 1s called a supplement to the 'Brahma-p.' in the body of the work as well as in the chapter-colophons

Bhāg. XII 7. 9-10.

(The terms 'sarga', 'ussarga' etc. have been defined in Bhag XII 7, 11-21)

The second verse is explained by Sridhara Svamin as: 'daśabhir etair laksanair arthair yuktam mahapuranam viduh/ kecit pañca-vidham/ sargaś ca pratisargaś ca vaṃśo manvantarani ca/ vamśanucaritam ceti puranam pañca-laksanam// iti/ mahat puranam alpam ceti vyavasthaya/ yatra daśapi laksanani prthak prthan nirūpyante tan mahapuranam/ yatra tv anyeṣam pañcasv evantarbhavasya vivaksa tad alpam iti vyavasthayetyarthah/,' Viśvanatha Cakravartin also explains this verse in the same way, and even with the same words, as Śridhara. According to these explanations the Mahapuranas must deal with the ten subjects separately, whereas in the Upapuranas the five topics (creation, re-creation etc.) must include the remaining five.

As regards its own contents the Bhāgavata-p (II. 9. 43) says that it has ten characteristics which are enumerated, with explanation, as sarga, visarga, sthāna, posana, ūti, manvantara, īšānukathā, nirodha, mukti and āšraya (Bhāg II. 7 1-7) That there is practically no difference between the two lists of the ten characteristics of a Purāna, is shown by Śrīdhara Svāmin in his explanation of the verse 'sargo'syātha visargaś ca' (Bhāg, XII 7.9)

Māhāpurānas and which arose at a time when the genealogies began to be neglected, se are never found to be serious about the genealogies of kings and sages. In those cases in which the Upapuranas include such genealogies, the ancient kings, especially of the Solar and Lunar races, are the chief points of interest, probably because of their giving a stamp of antiquity to these works, and nothing is said about any of the dynasties of the Kali age. Even as regards those genealogies which have been included in the Upapuranas, no care has been taken to preserve their correctness, but new myths and stories have been unscrupulously fabricated and attached to the important names in these genealogies. But in spite of such defects the Upapuranas are of inestimable value from the point of view of the history of religion and culture, and on this head alone they deserve far more careful study than has hitherto been devoted to them. They not only afford us great insight into all phases and aspects of Hinduism-its mythology, its idol-worship, its theism and pantheism, its love of God, its philosophy and superstitions, its festivals and ceremonies, and its ethics, but also supply us with important information about the different branches of science and literature which were developed in ancient India and at the same time render us inestimable help in reconstructing some of those monumental works of the Sanskrit literature which have been lost for ever. 67 In these respects the Upapuranas are sometimes more important than the Mahāpurāṇas. The latter actained such an enviable and authoritative position from an early date that they were often worked upon by the different sectaries and, in some cases, bodily replaced by later works bearing the same titles as those of the earlier ones.68 So, the text of the extant Mahapuranas which are the results of innumerable changes, modifications and interpolations made in different times and by different sects, is scarcely reliable and can be used only with great caution and careful discrimination. But very different is the case with the Upapuranas which, probably on account of their secondary position, have been worked upon much less freely by the later redactors and interpolators. They have thus been able to preserve, in a few cases, their older materials along with their distinctive sectarian character. It is for this reason that among the extant Upapuranas there are some which are much older than many of the extant Mahāpurāṇas.69 In those cases in which the Upapuranas have been subjected to modifications and interpolations or have been replaced by later works bearing the same titles as those of the works replaced,70 the authors of these changes, modifications etc. are very often persons belonging to those sects to which the respective Upapuranas originally belonged. So, in spite of their modifications, interpolations or totally new forms, they are to be valued as the records of changes undergone in different ages by the respective sects to which these works originally belonged, and the hands of people belonging to more sects than one being scarcely laid on any one of them, their study is generally a little easier than that of the extant Mahāpurānas.

68 For instance, we may refer to the present Brahma, Agni, and Garuda-p For information about these Purānas, see Hazta, Purānic Records, pp. 134-157

69 We shall try to prove the truth of this statement when we shall deal with the question of chronology of the different Upapurānas,

The Upapurānas are cetainly not all 'later and inferior works' as F. E. Pargiter would make us believe (See Hastings' Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics, Vol. X, p. 455 for Pargiter's views regarding the Upapurānas) was as much applicable to the Upapurānas as to the Mahāpurānas It is for this reason that works or chapters on older rites and customs were sometimes replaced by new ones.

70 The old tradition recorded in the verse

'kālenāgrahanam drstvā purānasya tato nrpa/ vyāsa-rūpam aham krtvā samharāmi yuge yuge//,

It has already been said that the Upapurāṇa literature consists of a large number of works, of which some are available in printed forms, some exist in manuscripts, some are known only from references and quotations, and some must have perished altogether without leaving any trace of their existence. Of these works, I shall first analyse those which were available to me in printed forms or manuscripts. The Upapurāṇas still existing in manuscripts beyond my reach or known from references and quotations will be dealt with later.

CHAPTER II

THE SAURA UPAPURANAS

The Sun has been, under different names, an object of great adoration from the early Vedic period, and it is possible that there arose quite early a fairly extensive literature, both Purāṇic and otherwise, on the praise and worship of this god, who appears in the Vedic works as one of the most prominent deities, but of the numerous Purānic works now extant it is only the Sāmba-p. which deals principally with the cult of the Sun. Chapters and extracts on the method and praise of Sun-worship occur in some of the other Purānas also, viz., Bhavisya-p., Brahma-p., Skanda-p., Varāha-p., Matsya-p., Agni-p., Garuda-p., Visnudharmottara, Bhavisyottara, Kālikā-p., and so on. The Mārkandeya-p. contains a few chapters on the praise of and stories about the Sun.

The Vedic, epic and Sanskrit literatures abound in evidences regarding the early beginning and spread of the worship of the atmospheric sun as a god, but the conception of the Sun as an imaginary god of light and the practice of his worship in images came into vogue at a comparatively late period. That this later phase of Sun-worship was due to Magian influence is amply evidenced by the Scythian coins,² the Puranic works, the Brhat-samhita (chaps. 58 and 60), and a number of seals and inscriptions.3 Probably during the reign of the Scythian kings or even earlier, a new form of Sun-worship was introduced in Northern India by bands of Magi priests who called their deity 'Mithra' (or 'Mihira'). These Magas, as the Magi priests were called in India, seem to have established their first settlement at a place called 'Mitra-vana' ('forest of Mitra') on the bank of the Candrabhaga in the Punjab, and at this place they constructed a city called 'Mūla-sthāna' ('original place of settlement' or 'original place of the Sun'-modern Multan) and a Sun-temple4 containing an image of the deity. As the Magian adherents to the worship of the Sun (Mithra) had a proselytising spirit and must have enjoyed state-support at least under the Scythian kings, they set themselves most zealously to popularising their faith in different parts of India. In striking agreement with the orthodox followers of the Vedas, they pointed out to the people the various benefits of Sun-worship, viz., freedom from sins and diseases, attainment of peace and prosperity, success in enterprises, and so on.6 They also took full advantage of the long-standing popularity of the deity in India and of his worship in a symbol which was very often a wheel or disc and not rately a circle or a lotus.7 As Viṣṇu, Siva and many other deities had begun from a

1 For instance, in Bhavisya-p I 4 89 we find mention of an ancient work dealing with the Saura Dharmas as declared by Nārada (saurā dharmāś ca rājendra nāradoktā mahīpate) According to the Bhavisya, this work (most probably called 'Saura-dharma') as well as the Mahābhārata, Rāmāyana, etc. was designated technically by the term 'Jaya' (see Bhavisya-p I. 4. 87b-89)

The above line of the Bhavisya-p. 15 found quoted in Laksmidhara's Krtya-kalpataru (I, p. 25), Candeśvara's Krtya-ratnākara (p. 30), and Narasimha Vājapeyin's Nityācāra-pradīpa (I, p 22) with the reading 'mānavoktāh' for 'nāradoktāh'.

It should be mentioned here that the Saura work spoken out by Nārada (or Mānava) has become extinct.

The story of Sāmba, as given in the Sāmba-p, Bhavisya-p, and Varāha-p, shows clearly that the Magas laid special stress on the Sun's capacity for destroying sins and curing various diseases, especially leprosy,

7 For the basis of the Vedic custom of representing Sūrya by a wheel or disc see Rg-veda I. 175 4, IV. 28. 2, 30. 4, and V 29. 10, in which Sūrya has very early period to be widely worshipped in images, for which public or private temples were often built, Indian people must have felt a great want in these respects with regard to the worship of the Sun, for which the Vedic people made no provision for the construction of any image or temple. Fortunately, the Magas came forward to remove this long-felt want, and it was to this contribution of these foreigners that their remarkable success in speedily popularising their faith was due to a very great extent. The Sāmba-p. (29. 2-6) points to this truth when it says.

"na purā pratīmā hy āsīt pūjyate maṇdale ravīh | yathaitan manḍalam vyomnī sthīyate savītus tadā ||, evam eva purā bhaktaih pūjyate mandalākrtiḥ | yatah prabhṛtī cāpy esā nīrmītā viśvakarmanā || sarva-loka-hītārthāya sūryasya puruṣākṛtih |

been called a 'wheel' (cakra) or 'the wheel (cakra) of Sūrya' has been mentioned. See also Satapatha-brāhmana VII. 4. 1. 10, which mentions the placing of a disc of gold on the Fire altar to represent the Sun

For wheels and lotuses representing the Sun on coins, etc see Journal of the Indian Society of Oriental Art, XVI, pp 51-3, and J. N. For a Mandala for Sun-worship see especially the Bhavisya-p. (Brāhma-parvan) In commenting on Apastamba-dharmasūtra 11. 11. 29. 16 Haradatta says that the Dravidas used to worship Aditya (the Sun) by drawing Mandalas on the ground (...dravidāh kanyā-mesasthe savitary āditya-pūjām ācaranti bhūmau mandalam ālikhya ...).

8 See, for instance, Gautama-dharmasütra 9, 13 (na vāyv-agni-vipr-ādity-āpo devatā gāś ca prati paśyan vā mūtra-purīs-āmedhyān vyudasyet) and 9, 14 (naitā devatāh prati pādau prasārayet) According to Haradatta and Maskari, the word 'devatāh', occurring in the former Sūtra, means images (pratimāh).

The separate use of the word 'devatāh' in the former Sūtra shows that the word 'āditya' meant the atmospheric sun and not any image of Āditya.

The word 'devatah' in the latter Sutra must have been intended for creating "In ancient times there was no image (of the Sun), the Sun was worshipped in a circle. The Sun, worshipped by his devotees in early days, was circular, just as there is the disc (of the Sun) in the sky. The human form of the Sun (came into vogue) for the good of all the worlds from the time it was made by Visvakarman. No rule 15 (to be observed) in the case of those images which are (worshipped) in (private) houses; The examination of the image is to be made in case it is placed in a temple." There was another strong ground for the wide popularity of the Magian method of Sun-worship. It was that the Magas allowed great privilege in religious matters to women and members of lower castes. However, the spread of Magian ideas was not, in all respects. very favourable to the Varnasrama-dharma and the authority of the Vedas. As regards conception of Mithra and the procedure of his worship, the Magi priests differed much from the Sun-worshippers of India. Their manners and customs also were, to a great extent, different from those of the members of the Vedic fold. Hence, in order to modify the earlier cult of the Sun by incorporating Magian elements (which must have been too popular to be neglected), to establish the position of Magas as full-fledged Brahmins authorised to worship the Sun, and to conform the Magian ideas and practices to the Vedic notions, the Samba-p. had to be written and chapters had to be inserted into the Bhavisya and other Puranic works. What steps were taken to achieve these ends and how and when, will be evident from the following analysis of the Samba-p.

1. THE SAMBA-PURANA

This work, as we have it in the Venkar. edition, is divided into 84 chapters. It begins with a salutation to the Sun (variously named a sense of divinity, with regard to wind, fire etc. and thus for pointing out their sacred character.

9 The only printed edition of this work is that published by the Venkateśvara Press, Bombay 1899. This edition has been accomplished so carelessly that innumerable mistakes, due to both omission and commission, have crept in It is based most probably on a single Ms; otherwise, variants would have been given at some place or other of this edition. We have, however, used the as Savitṛ, Bhāskara, Arka, Ravi, Āditya etc.) who is the cause of creation, protection and destruction of the universe and is the soul of Pitāmaha, Nārayana and Samkara, whose manifestations are the three Vedas, and who pervades the universe in the forms of Sakra, Vahni, Yama, Varuṇa, Samīraṇa (i. e. Vāyu), Dhanada and others who crowd the quarters. It then states that during a twelve-year sacrifice in Naimiṣāraṇya Saunaka asked Sūta, "Here, O Sūta, you have narrated materials of this Purāna with extreme caution, As large numbers of verses, nay even complete chapters, of the Sāmba-p. are found common with the Bhavisya-p. (Brāhma-parvan), Brahma-p and Skanda-p (Prabhāsa-khanda), we have, in cases of doubt as regards the correctness of the readings of any of these verses, made a careful comparison before accepting any reading as authentic.

For Mss of the Samba-p see

[No. 3619—This is a complete Ms consisting of 70 chapters. Its second introductory verse 'timira-kira-kirātah etc' does not occur in the printed edition. Though Eggeling's description of this Ms as well as a comparison of its concluding verses with those of the ASB and Calcutta Sanskrit College. Mss shows that the contents of this Ms are practically the same as those of the printed edition, chap 55 of the printed edition does not seem to occur in this Ms. The difference in the numbers of chapters between this Ms and the printed edition is due to the fact that in a few cases single chapters of this Ms have each been split up into two or more in the printed edition. For instance,

The contents of this Ms after chap 48 are divided into 22 sections which are neither numbered nor designated as Adhyāyas Some of these sections are termed 'Patala' These sections form practically a distinct part comprised under the general title 'Jñānottara'; and the last of these sections, which corresponds to chap. 84 of the printed edition, ends with a few verses which occur in the latter, These concluding verses agree with those of the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms (for which see below).

No 3620.—This is practically the same as the preceding Ms]

(2) Shastri, ASB Cat., V, pp. 750-7

[No. 4091 — This incomplete Ms, which agrees considerably with the Ind. Off. Ms mentioned above, lacks the second introductory verse 'timira-kira-kirātah etc.' of the latter It ends with chap 81 and a part of chap 82 of the printed edition. Thus, it lacks chaps, 83-84 and a part of chap. 82 of the latter.

No. 4092.—This Ms was copied in Saka 1764 It consists of 75 chapters, to us, first of all, the old and much elaborate story of the six-faced [god Kārttikeya]; next [you have told us about] the Cosmic Egg (brahmāṇḍa), and also what was spoken by Vāyu and by Sāvarṇika, by Mārkaṇḍeya and by Vaiśaṃpāyana, by Dadhīci and by Sarva (i.e. Siva), by Hari, by the sages, and by the Bālakhilyas. And we have heard all these [from you] in company with the sages. But, O sage, you have not narrated what was done by the son of Hari (i.e by Sāmba)The Purāṇa of Bhāskara (bhāskarasya purānaṃ), which was enquired into by the wise Sāmba, is concerned with the twelfth form of which the last corresponds to chap. 84 of the printed edition In spite of this difference in the numbers of chapters, the contents of this Ms and the printed edition are practically the same. In this Ms, chaps 52-74 have been grouped under a general title 'Jūānottara,' but this title does not occur in the colophon of chap. 75, in which Nārada speaks to Sāmba.

No 4093—Though this Ms consists of 83 chapters and has a defective beginning, it is practically, the same as the printed edition. Of the last six verses of the concluding chapter of this Ms, the first two and a half agree with verses 14-15 of chap 84 of the printed edition, and the remaining ones are the same as the verses immediately preceding the two concluding verses of the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms. Like the other Mss and the printed edition, this Ms contains a latter part called 'Jñānottara', but in the colophon of its concluding chapter, in which Nārada speaks to Sāmba, the word 'Jñānottara' does not occur.

No. 4094.—It deals with the praise of the Sāka-dvīpī Brahmins and claims to be the seventh chapter of the Sāmba-p But in the printed edition the Sāka-dvīpī Brahmins are praised in chap. 26. Moreover, the opening verses of this Ms, as given by Shastri, do not agree with those of chap. 26 of the printed edition. So, we are not sure whether these two chapters are considerably the same]

(3) Shastri and Gui, Calcutta Sans. College Cat. IV, pp 122-3

[No. 214.—The introductory and the concluding verses of this Ms, as given in the Catalogue, show that the contents of this Ms also are practically the same as those of the printed edition. The two concluding verses of this Ms agree with those of the Ind. Off. Ms; and the three verses and a half, immediately preceding those two concluding verses, are found to occur at the end of an ASB Ms (Cat. No. 4093).]

For these verses see Eggeling, Ind Off Cat., VI, p 1317.

12 The printed ed. reads 'bhūmer vā tosanam' (1, 21), but the Ind. Off.

Ms reads 'bhramimānopanam.' As Eggeling suggests, the original reading was about flowers and incense; duties on the Saptami Tithi; method of fasting; results of gifts; determination of proper time; method of performing the duties to the Sun, method of burning incense; directions regarding the study of scriptures (called 'jaya'); description of dreams; penance; characteristics of spiritual preceptors, initiation, and selection of mantras for the initiated; and various eulogies.—(Chap. 1).

Suta then said that once king Brhadbala, who was born in the race of Raghu, wanted to hear from his preceptor Vasistha about the eternal Brahma which caused cessation of rebirths, and put to him the following questions:—

- (1) Which god should be worshipped by a member of any of the four asramas who wishes to attain final release?
- (2) How could he be sure of the attainment of heaven as well as the highest bliss?
- (3) What should he do after passing to heaven, so that he may not lose it again?
 - (4) Who is the chief among the gods and Pitrs?
- (5) Whence did this universe originate, and where will it go after destruction?

In answer to these questions Vasistha praised the Sun as the only visible and eternal deity who is the highest among the gods and Pitis and is the only source of energy, who never moves from his fixed position, who manifests the universe from himself in creation and absorbs it into himself at the time of destruction, into whom the Yogins and the Sāṃkhyas enter after forsaking their bodies, and into whose region the kings like Janaka, the sages like the Bālakhilyas, Pañca-sikha and Suka, and many members of different varṇas entered in times of yore by practising yoga, and who, therefore, is the only god deserving devotion and worship.—(Chap. 2). Bṛhadbala then wanted to know where the original place (ādyaṃ sthānaṃ) of worship of the Sun was situated on earth. Consequently, Vasiṣṭha said that out of affection for Sāmba and in order to favour the whole world the Sun permanently resided, in his twelfth form,; viz., probably 'bhtamım āropanam' or 'bhramer āropanam,' It is more probable that the reading was 'bhramāv āropaṇam.'

Mitra, in the 'city called Samba' on the bank of the Candrabhaga and thence favoured his worshippers by accepting their worship duly performed. At Bṛhadbala's request Vasisṭha narrated the story of Samba in the following way.

Viṣnu, one of the twelve sons of Aditi, ¹⁴ was born as Vāsudeva, and Sāmba was the son of this Vāsudeva. Once the irascible sage Nārada, who had access into all the regions of the universe, came with some sages to the city of Dvāravatī in order to see Vāsudeva. Pradyumna and other young Yādavas received Nārada with proper respect, but Sāmba was so proud of his youth and physical beauty and was so much addicted to amorous sports that he neglected the sage. In order to teach Sāmba modesty, Nārada told Vāsudeva that all his 16000 wives were so much enamoured of Sāmba that they were always anxious to meet him. But Vāsudeva did not believe in Nārada's words. So, Nārada promised to convince Vāsudeva of the truth of his allegation, and went away. After a few days Nārada returned to Dvārakā and found Vāsudeva enjoying water-sports etc. in the pleasure-garden in Raivataka in company with his wives, who prītyā sāmbasya tatrārko jagato 'nugrahāya ca/,

sthito dvādaša-bhāgena mitro maitreņa caksusā//, ln Sāmba-p 4.6 Mitra is mentioned as the last of the twelve Ādityas

aditer dvādašah putro visnur yah sa punas tv iha/ vāsudevatvam āpannas tasya sāmbo 'bhavat sutah//

In this verse Visnu is called the twelfth son of Aditi, but in none of the two lists of the names of the twelve Adityas given in Samba-p., chaps. 4 (verse 6) and 9 (verses 3b-4) Visnu is assigned the twelfth place. Moreover, in the lines corresponding to Samba-p 3 6 the Bhavisya-p does not mention Visnu as the twelfth Aditya These lines of the Bhavisya-p. (I 72 10-11) are as follows —

ya ete dvādaśādītyā virājante mahābalāh/ tesām yo visnu-samjñas tu sarva-lokesu viśrutah/, tasmāt sāmbah suto jajñe etc

So, the present text of Samba-p 3 6 (aditer dvadasah putro visnuh etc.) must be due to a revision made according to the list of the names of the twelve Adityas as given in Samba-p 51 (verses 66-67 and 162-170) in which Visnu is assigned the twelfth place. We shall see hereafter that chap 51 of the Samba-p, was a later addition were coming under the influence of wine they were drinking. This was a great opportunity for Nārada. He went to Sāmba and told him that he was wanted by his father immediately. Samba hastened to Vāsudeva and stood before him. At the sight of Sāmba all of Vāsudeva's wives, except three, namely, Rukmını, Satyabhama and Jambavatī, became extremely passionate. At this moment Nārada went there. As Vasudeva's wives stood up to receive the sage, signs of their extreme passion became prominent on their dress. Vasudeva understood their mental condition and cursed them all, except the above-mentioned three, to be unable to pass to the region of their husband after his death and to be forcibly carried away by robbers. (Here the Purana states that after Vasudeva's death, his wives were carried away by some 'thieves of the land of five rivers' even before the eyes of Arjuna). Väsudeva did not spare Samba but cursed him to become an ugly leper. Samba immediately became so, and Narada went away. (Here the Purana informs us that later on, being impelled by destiny and by the recollection of the previous event, Samba enraged the sage Durvasas again in the same way and had his family exterminated by a musala born as a result of the sage's curse').15—(Chap. 3). Being thus cursed by his father, Samba pleaded innocent, and Kṛṣṇa advised Sāmba to take recourse to Nārada for remedy. In accordance with this advice Samba met Narada at Dvāravatī when the latter came there to see 'Visņu' (1. e. Vāsudeva) on another occasion, and requested him to name the highest deity who deserved adoration of all gods and to whom he could take recourse for getting rid of the curse. Narada described his visit to the Sūrya-loka (Solar region), where he found the Sun attended by the gods, Yakşas Gandharvas, Apsarases etc., by the three Vedas incarnate, by the sages who were reciting the Vedic hymns of praise, by the three Samdhyas incarnate, Adıtyas, Vasus, Maruts and Aśvins, by Brahma, Vışnu and Rudra, by the Sun's two wives Rājūī and Niksubhā who remained at his Yama) and Paksin (1 e. Garuda) who were stationed at the gate, by the four-horned (or four-peaked—catuḥ-śṛnga) god Vyoman who resembled the Meru, and by the naked Dindi. 18 He spoke on the greatness of the Sun and advised Sāmba to take recourse to this deity who pervaded the universe and was eulogised by Brahmā and other gods.—(Chap. 6). Consequently, Sāmba started, with his father's permission, from the northern shore of the sea (?), 20 reached the 'great river (mahānadī)

16 Sāmba-p 6 21b reads 'pingalo devakah,' but in the corresponding line the Bhavisya-p. (I. 76. 13) reads 'pingalo lekhakah'. That the reading of the Bhavisya-p is the correct one is evidenced by Sāmba-p. 16. 6b-7a, in which Pingala is described as being engaged by the Sun in recording the good and bad deeds of all beings. See also Sāmba-p 7. 2 for the same function of Pingala.

In Visnudh, III. 67 5 7 also Pingala is described as 'atipingala,' 'uddīptaveśa,' 'lekhanī-patra-kara' and 'carma-śūla-dhara'

17-18 In Bhav I 76 13b and 18, which correspond to Sāmba-p. 6 22a and 7 3a respectively, these two names are given as Rājā and Śrosa But in Bhav I 124 13 and 22-24a these names occur as Rājā and Śrausa, the latter name being said to have been derived from the root 'sru' used in the sense of motion See also Bhav. I. 143. 40a in which the names are given as Rājāa and Śrausa Bhav. I. 130. 52b wrongly gives the former name as 'Rājāā.'

Sāmba-p. 36. 39 gives the names as 'Rājan' and 'Tosa.'

In the Avesta Rashnu ('justice') and Sraosha ('obedience') have been mentioned as divine beings and companions of Mithra.

19 In the Sāmba-p. (6. 23, 7. 4, and 16. 25) Dindi is described as 'naked' (nagnah, nagnakah); but in Bhav. I 76. 14 and 19 and I. 124 1, which correspond to Sāmba-p. 6 23 (dindir nagno 'gratas tasya), 7. 4 (ko dindir nagnako yaś ca etc), and 16. 25 (..... . samtisthati yas tu nagnah....) the words 'tathā', 'agratah' and 'magnah' are found in place of 'nagnaḥ' and 'nagnakah' of the Sāmba-p.

On the other hand, in Bhav. I. 124, 3 and 7 (=Sāmba-p. 16. 26 and 31 respectively) Rudra is described as naked (nagna).

20 The text of Sāmba-p 24. 5-6 runs as follows:—
anujñātah sa krsnena sindhor uttara-kūlatah/, jñātvā samtārayāmāsa candrabhāgām mahānadīm// tato mitravanam gatvā tirtham trailokya-viśrutam/, upavāsa-kršah sāmbah kršo dhamani-samtatah//

These verses are the same as Bhav. I. 127. 6-7 The Bhavisya-p. reads 'gatva' for 'jñatva,' and 'upavasa-parah' for 'upavasa-krśah.'

Candrabhaga', thence went to the famous holy place Mitravana, emaciated his body there with fasts, and eulogised the Sun, who lived in the solar orb as an extremely effulgent Puruşa, comprised all gods and the universe, was the same as the Paramatman, and was able to cure all kinds of skin diseases and physical defects. The Sun was pleased to confer devotion on Samba and to cute his leprosy. He asked Samba to establish an image of the Sun on the bank of the Candrabhaga, and granted a boon that the town, thus created, would be known after Samba, and promised to appear daily to Samba in dream,-(Chap. 24). Now, once, after attaining his former physical beauty, Samba went, as usual, to have his bath in the Candrabhaga which was 'not very far' from his hermitage and found that an image of the Sun was being carried by the current with its face turned upwards. Samba brought this image to his hermitage, established it in a part of Mitravana, and asked it by whom it was constructed. The image related its history in the following way. When, in times of yore, the Sun's brightness became unbearable to all creatures, he was requested by the gods to make himself endurable. Consequently, at his command Visvakarman mended his form by placing him on a lathe in Sāka-dvīpa. Afterwards Visvakarman made this image with the Kalpa-vrksa, took it to the Himalayas, and sent it down the Candrabhaga for the sake of Samba. The image assured Samba that the Sun would always remain present at that place. On hearing this from the image and seeing the Sun with his own eyes, Samba built a temple (deva-grha) for the image and approached Nārada for his advice regarding the selection of the best Brahmin priests for its worship. Nārada decried the Devalaka Brahmins of Jambu-dvīpa, because they lived on the property of the images they worshipped, denounced the Manava Sastra (the Code of Manu),31 and were degraded (patita) and excommunicated (apankteya). He advised Samba to take recourse to the Sun for the purpose. Samba did so; and the Sun was pleased to advise him to bring the Magas from Sāka-dvīpa which was situated on the other side of the salt-ocean and was encircled by the ocean of milk, and where the people were divided into four castes, viz, Maga, Māmaga, Māmasa and Mandaga²² corresponding respectively to the Brahmins, Ksatriyas, Vaisyas and Sūdras of Jambu-dvīpa but having no mixed caste among them. The people of Sāka-dvīpa, who were born of the Sun's energy (tejas) and to whom the four Vedas were given by the Sun, worshipped the Sun by citing Vedic hymns and wore Avyangas ²³ The image added that the Sun was worshipped as Visņu in Sveta-dvīpa, as Maheśvara in Kuśa-dvīpa, as Brahmā in Puskara-dvīpa, and as Bhāskara in Sāka-dvīpa. Being thus advised by the image Sāmba saw his father at Dvāravatī, mounted Garuda and went to Sāka-dvīpa, whence he brought to Mitravana on the bank of the Candrabhāgā eighteen families of Magas, who worshipped the Sun and performed sānti-bomas for the people.—(Chap. 26).

22. Samba p 26 30 31.

The text of these verses, as given by Nagendra Nath Vasu in his Castes and Sects of Bengal, IV, p. 9, has 'Masaga' for 'Mamaga'

In Bhas (Venl at ed.) I 139, 74-75 the names of these four castes of Sakadvipa are given as Maga, Magaga, Gānaga (or Mānasa) and Mandaga. These verses, as quoted by Nagendra Nath Vasu (in his Castes and Sects of Bengal, IV, p. 9), give the names as Maga, Masaga, Mānasa and Mandaga (or Mandasa), while according to Aufrecht's Ms of the Bhasisya-p, the names are Maga, Magasa, Mānasa and Mandaga (see Bod, Cat. p. 33).

Mahabharata VI (Bhisma-parvan) 11. 36-38 have the names as Maga (or Manga), Masala, Manasa and Mandaga, Visnu-p. II 1 69-70 have them as Mirga (but 'Maga' in some Miss), Magadha, Manasa and Mandaga, and the Brahma-p, which incorporates many of the chapters of the Visnu-p, including chap, 4 of Visnu p. II, gives the names as Maga, Magadha, Manasa and Mandaga (see Brahma-p, 20, 71).

One of the Mss of the Samba-p. described by Haraprasad Shastri has Maga, Magasa, Manasa and Mandaga (see Shastri, ASB Cat., V. p. 753, No. 1092).

Greek historians, such as Herodotus and Strabo, mention the warlike. Massa getae as living in Sakitai with other clans. So, the Massagetae seem to be the same as the 'Masaga' or 'Masaka' Ksatriyas of Sal a-dyipa.

23 Avyanga is a girdle originally worn by the Magi priests of ancient Persia. In the Avesta it is called Aivyanglien,

The Sun's girdle is called 'aviyanga' in Visnudli. III 67. 3b (kartavya rasana casya yaviyangoti saminita).

The above-mentioned story of Sāmba's establishing an image of the Sun at Sāmbapura in Mitravana and his settling of eighteen families of Magi priests from Sāka-dvīpa for the regular worship of this image forms the nucleus of the Sāmba-p, and in connection with this main story, a few subsidiary stories of interest have been introduced into this Purāṇa for the glorification of the Sun. For instance, there are the stories of Saṃjñā's penance in the Northern Kuru country and of Viśvakarman's paring of the Sun's rays by means of a lathe. Of these, the former is narrated in Sāmba-p., chaps. 10-11 as follows.

Brahma's son Marīci had a son named Kasyapa and a daughter named Surūpā. Kaśyapa's son (on Diti) was Hiranyakasipu, whose son was Prahlāda. Prahlāda had a son named Virocana and a daughter named Prahladi. This Prahladi was married to Visvakarman, who was the son of Bhuvanī, daughter of Surūpā. The Sun's wife Rājtī, who is said to be the same as Dyauh, was born to Prahladi under the name of Samiña or Sarenu.24 The Sun took a human form in order to have physical union with Samjñā,25 and begot on her two sons, namely Vaivasvata Manu and Yama Srāddha-deva, and a daughter named Yamī or Kālındī. Now, Samıjūā could no longer stand the heat and brilliance of the Sun. She secretly created from her own body a female named Chāyā (called to be the same as Nikşubhā, who, again, is identified with Prthivi), requested her to attend the Sun and look after Manu, Yama and Yami, and went to her father's house. She lived there for one thousand years, and, being repeatedly asked by her father to return to her husband, she took the form of a mare and went to the Northern Kuru country. During Samjña's absence Chaya,

The text of this line, as given by the Samba-p, is obviously wrong. Cf Samba-p, 11, 4b-5a (golākāram tu tadrūpam drştvā samjūā vivasvatah/asabanti tu tat tejah svām chāyām presya cābravīt//).

who resembled Samjñā fully, attended the Sun as his wife and gave birth to two sons named Srutasravas and Srutakarman (of whom the former was destined to be known as Savarni Manu and the latter became the planet Sanaiscara later on) and a daughter named Tapatī. Now, Chāyā was so partial to her own children that Yama could not tolerate it. Once he threatened Chaya with his foot (padena samtarjayāmāsa) and was cursed by her that his foot would fall down without fail. Being afflicted in mind Yama approached the Sun with Manu and informed him of the whole matter. The Sun first minimised the severity of the curse by ordaining that worms would fall to the ground after taking flesh from his feet, and then asked Chāyā the cause of her differential treatment towards the children. But as Chaya remained silent, the Sun understood the whole situation through meditation and was about to curse Chaya, when the latter related the whole mattter to the Sun. Being thus informed of the whole situation, the Sun approached his father-in-law Visvakarman in rage, but the latter told him that being unable to bear the extreme brightness of his form, Samina went to a grassy wood in the Northern Kuru country and was practising severe penance there for an endurable figure of the Sun (cf. rūpārtham bhavato 'ranye caranti sumahat tapah). Visvakarman then intimated to the Sun that he was ready to act up to Brahma's proposal of paring the Sun's figure, only if the latter gave his consent. The sun agreed to it gladly and had his rays cut down by means of a lathe. The Sun then met Samiña in the Northern 'Kuru country in the form of a horse and had physical union with her. As a result of this union, the two Asvins, named Nasatya and Dasra, were born, The Sun had another son born of the earth. This son, who was named Raivata (or Revanta),26 had the body of a horse and was armed with a bow and arrows. Yama ruled over the creation with justice and became Dharmaraja, Manu became a ruler and the progenitor of the line of Iksvāku; Yamī was transformed into the river Yamunā. Savarni Manu was destined to become a ruler in future; Sanaiscara became a planet; Tapatī, who became the wife of king Saṃvaraṇa, was turned into a river of the same name in the Vindhya mountain; the Asvins became the divine physicians; and Revanta became a noble and sanctifying deity easy to please.

The story of Viśvakarman's paring of the Sun's rays by means of a lathe is briefly this:—

As Samiña went to her father's house and then practised austenties (in the Northern Kuru country), the Sun became favourably inclined towards her and intended to fulfil her desires. In the meantime Brahmā, being requested by the sages to save the creation from the trouble caused by the burning rays of the Sun, approached the Sun with other gods and Prajapatis and asked him to have his figure carved out by Viśvakarman. At Brahma's request Viśvakarman placed the Sun, with the latter's consent, on a lathe and pared his rays up to the knees. While the Sun's body was thus being cut out 'for the creation of the seasons of frost, heat and water', Brahma, Visnu, Rudra, Indra, Viśvakarman and other gods, as well as the sages (viz., Bālakhilyas, Viśvāmitra and others), Vidyādharas, Nāgas etc. eulogised the Sun, and the Gandharvas (well versed in the three grāmas, viz., sadja, madbyama and gandhara) and Apsarases etc. honoured the Sun with songs, dances and musical concerts. With the rays thus mopped off Visvakarman made a disc for Visnu and various missiles for other gods. The Purana adds that as the Sun's rays were pared up to his knees, his feet are always kept under a cover .-- (Chaps. 12-15).

Another story may be mentioned here.

Once Brahmā and other gods found out that it was only through the boons of the compassionate Sun that the demons became powerful enough to trouble the gods. So, they decided to be devoted to the Sun and to surrround him in such a way that the demons might not see him. Accordingly, Indra stood, under the name of Dandanāyaka,²⁷ on the left side of the Sun and was engaged by the latter to rule over the world with his danda (sceptre) and nīti (science of politics), Agni, who took his stand on the right side of the Sun, was known as Pingala due to his tawny colour and was engaged in recording the good and bad deeds of all creatures, the two Aśvins stood on two sides of the Sun; Karttikeya and Hara stood 'at the eastern gate' under the names of Rājña and Stosa respectively28, Yama and Garuda assumed the names of Kalmasa and Paksin respectively (because the former was kalmasa i.e. variegated, and the latter had wings) and stood, with two asses,28 at the gate, which was thus rendered maccessible; on the south, stood Citragupta (the officer of Yama) and Kala under the names of Jandakara and Matharase respectively, on the west, stood Varuna and Sagara under the names of Prāpnuyāna and Kṣutāpa⁵¹ respectively, on the north, stood Kuvera and Vināyaka, the latter having the form of an elephant; and on the east, stood Revanta, and Rudra under the name of Dindi. Thus the Sun's attendants were 'eighteen in number'. In order to prevent the demons these attendants as well as the Vedic hymns assumed various forms and surrounded the Sun with missiles in their hands .- (Sambap. 16. 1-24).

- 28 Sāmba-p 16. 8a reads 'pūrva-dvāre sthitau tasya rājāa-stosau mahābalau'; but in the corresponding line the Bhavisya-p. reads 'dvāra-pālau sthitau tasya rājāah śresthau mahābalau' (see Bhav I. 124 21a), there being no mention of 'pūrva-dvāra.' The reading 'rājāah śresthau' of the Bhavisya-p. is obviously wrong. Cf Bhav. I. 124. 22-24 where the derivative meanings of 'Rājāa' and 'Stosa' (and not 'śrestha') are given See also Bhav. I. 130 52b
- 29 Sāmba-p. 16 11a reads 'kharam hi duratikrāntam krtvā dvāram vyava-sthitau,' but Sāmba-p 16. 21a reads 'sakharadvārikau jneyau rājna-stosau tatah sthitau' With whomsoever the 'khara' (ass) may be connected, it is clear that the asses were there.

The Bhavisya-p has these two lines as follows.—'dvitīyāyām tu kaksāyām apradhrstau vyavasthitau' and 'tau sūrya-dvārapau jūeyau rājūa-srausau tatah smrtau' (see Bhav 1 124 25b and 35b).

- 30 The name 'Māthara', which may have been derived from the Avestan Māthra, is found in the Bhavisya-p (I 53. 1), but the name 'Jāndakāra,' which also seems to have an Avestan origin, does not occur in the Bhavisya.
- 31 These two names are given respectively as 'Prāpnuyāna' and 'Ksatāya' in Sāmba-p 16 16a, as 'Prāpnuyāna' and 'Ksutāpa' in Sāmba-p 16 16b and 20a, and as 'Prāpnuyān' and 'Nuksutāya' in Sāmba-p. 29. 20a

The Bhavisya-p. does not contain these names

In Samba-p. 16 (verses 25-35) and 17, the story of Dindi is narrated as follows:

After tearing away Brahma's head, Rudra took the skull in his hand and went naked to Daruvana for practising penance. At the sight of Rudra, the minds of the wives and daughters of the sages residing there became agitated. So, the sages drove Rudra away from that place. Rudra thence went to the Solar region, where the Sun's chief attendants advised him to take recourse to the Sun for getting rid of the sin committed. Rudra did so and eulogised the Sun, the result being that he became purified and was given the name 'Dindi'. The Sun advised Rudra to live in a highly sacred place on earth where he himself would live with him in company with his eighteen chief attendants as well as fourteen others. The Sun also conferred divine knowledge on Rudra, gave the name of Avimukta-kṣetra to the place where Rudra practised austerities for attaining the Sun's favour, and assured Rudra that those people, who would bow down to Rudra and the Sun at that place having the measurement of a krosa, would become sinless.

Besides these stories, there are also others which are no less interesting and important than those already mentioned. For instance, in chaps. 42-43 the story of the establishment of the Sun's image in the Sun's penance-forest on the shore of the salt-ocean is given as follows:—

'After Sāmba had brought the Yājakas and had a temple constructed for the Sun', the gods, sages, Siddhas, men and others heard of 'Mittavana' (Mitta's forest) and at once came to this 'penance-forest' (tapovana) which was situated on the shore of the salt-ocean and was made by Visvakatman. Being thanked by Nārada for enabling him to see the Sun's 'penance-forest' (tapovana) which was furnished with an eternal image of this god, Sāmba approached the Sun and was advised by the latter not to be proud of his glorious deed. Moreover, the Sun narrated the story that in ancient times some sages performed austerities there for many centuries, became the creators of this place through the Sun's favour, and thereby attained great fame for a Manvantara. Now, once the sages, Siddhas, Gandhatvas and others, who lived in the Sun's penance-forest (tapovana, also called Sūryakanana) situated on the shore of the salt-ocean and worshipped him in various ways, stood in wait for his rise, culogising him all the while. At dawn they were surprised to see that the Sun made the ocean, the sky and the earth red by means of his rays and appeared simultaneously in the sky and in the ocean. There was yet another form of the Sun which remained in water. Manus recovered it by entering the ocean, placed it in the 'tapovana', and cited hymns in its praise. On Manus' enquiry as to who constructed it and how it came to that place the image replied that after being constructed by Viśvakarman and worshipped by the gods for the good of the world, it was placed on the Kalpavrksa in the Himalayas, whence it passed successively through the rivers Candrabhaga, Vaipasa, Satadrava, Yamuna, Jahnavī (also called Bhagirathi) and Modagangasa until it reached the salt-ocean. The image also asked Manus to establish itself. Consequently, Vaivasvata Manu had a temple built for it, and the gods eulogised it, named it as Mundita and Mundira after being initiated by it to Sun-worship, and established the Sun in three (?) different places.33

In chap. 45 the story of the origin of shoes and umbrellas is narrated thus .—

Once Jamadagni began to shoot arrows playfully, and his wife Renukā was engaged in collecting them. When, at mid day, the earth became extremely hot due to the burning rays of the Sun, Renukā delayed in fetching the arrows thrown by Jamadagni. Understanding Renukā's difficulties Jamadagni became so angry with the Sun that the latter appeared before the former in the form of a Brahmin and appeared him by handing over a pair of shoes and an umbrella for Renukā's use.

It is needless to repeat that the present edition of the Samba-p. is full of mistakes

In addition to the above-mentioned stories, the following topics have been introduced into this Purana for the effective glorification of the Sun:

The Sun's creation of Prajapatis and various kinds of creatures in the form and capacity of Brahma, and his division of himself into twelve parts and birth from Aditi as twelve Adityas, viz., Indra, Dhātṛ, Parjanya, Pūsan, Tvastr, Aryaman, Bhaga, Vivasvat, Visnu, Amsu, Varuna and Mitta, of whom Indra tuled over the gods, Dhate became a Prajapati and created beings, Parjanya remained in clouds, Pūṣan resided in food and nourished the created beings. Trastr remained in trees, plants and herbs, Aryaman resided in the bodies of animals for facilitating the movement of air. Bhaga remained in the earth as well as in bodies, Vivasvat dwelt in fire and helped digestion, Visnu, the ninth form of Cittabhanu,34 became the slayer of the enemies of gods, Amsuman resided in air and gladdened the creatures. Varuna resided in water contained in the sea and enlistened the whole world which depends on water, and Mitra, the twelfth from of the Sun (Bhanu), resided on the bank of the Candrasant for the good of the world, performed austernies there by living on air, and favoured his devotees with boons, this original place of Mitra's residence being known as Micravana, which was later on developed into a town by Samba (priscat sambena nitinitam). -(Chap. 4). The origin of the visible Sun, with its shooting rays, from the Egg brought forth by Aditi; the dimension of the Sun, the names and functions of its rays in general; the names and functions of its seven principal rays and their connection with the stars and planets, which are said to have originated from the Sun, and the way in which the Sun fills the universe with its rays. - (Chap. 7). The Sun as the original source and the main stay of the universe, the absolute necessity of the Sun for the measurement of time, the performance of Vedic sterifices, and the growth of the vegetable world; and the different auspicious colours of the Sun during the different seasons. - (Chap. 8). The twelve common names of the Sun (viz., Adıtya, Savitr, Sürya, Mihira, Arka, Prabhākara, Mārtanda, Bhāskara, Bhānu, Citrabhānu, Divākara and Ravi), the names of the twelve Adityas (viz., Vișnu, Dhātr, Bhaga, Pūṣan, Mitra, Indra, Varuna, Aryaman, 35 Vivasvat, Amsumat, Tvastr and Parjanya), the the different months in which these twelve Adityas shine, and the numbers of their rays. —(Chap. 9). The evolution of the universe according to the principles of the Samkhya system, and the appearance of the Supreme Being (isvaram param) as a luminary (called Savitr) at the prayer of Brahma, Vışnu, Maheśvara and others who were all confused by darkness. —(Chap. 14). The origin of Vyoman (which is called 'sarva-devamaya', 'sarva-bhūtamaya' and 'sarva-śrutimaya' and whose worship is said to be equivalent to the worship of all gods) from the space of the Cosmic Egg and of the four-peaked Meru, which, like the pericarp of a lotus, formed the centre of the earth, round which the Sun moved in his chariot, and which was resorted to by the thirty-three sacrificing gods (viz., eleven Rudras, twelve Adityas, eight Vasus, and two Asvins, whose names also are given); the names of the fourteen Manus, the fourteen Indras and the Viśvedevas living during the reigns of these Manus, the seven Maruts (from whom forty-nine Maruts arose), the three Fires (whose sons and grandsons were forty in number), the different kinds of years, the nine planets (with the mention of their nature, their origin, their relative position, their dimensions, and their distance from the earth),36 the seven

dimension (vistāra) of the Sun is 9000 yojanas, and the measurement of its mandala is thrice its dimension, the dimension (vistāra) of the Moon is twice that of the Sun, and its mandala is thrice its dimension; the dimension of Bhārgava (i.e. Sukra) is one sixteenth of that of the Moon, the dimension of Brhaspati is less by one fourth than that of Bhārgava; the dimension of Kuja (i.e. Mangala) is less by one fourth than that of Brhaspati; and the dimension of Budha is less by one fourth than that of Kuja. The rksas (stars) have generally the same dimension as that of Budha, and there is no star having a dimension less than half a yojana. Rāhu is equal in dimension to the Sun, but the expanse of Ketu is not fixed (aniyatah).—Sāmba p. 18 41ff

It should be noted here that Samba-p, thap 18 has many verses in common with Devi-p,, chaps. 46 and 47.

37 The names of the four peaks of the Meru are the following:—Saumanasa (which is golden), Jyotiska (which has the color of rubies), Citra (which abounds in all kinds of metals), and Cāndramasa (which is white and silvery).—Sāmba-p. 19, 20st.

38 Amarāvati (capital of Indra) was situated on the east of the Meru, Yamani (the city of Yama) on its south, Sukhā (the city of Varuna) on its west, and Vibhāvati (the city of Soma) on its north—Sāmba-p 20, 21ff.

Consumption of fifteen digits of the moon by the gods and Pitrs during the dark half of the month; the moon's entrance, with its sixteenth digit, into the Sun in the morning, into trees and planets at mid-day, and into water in the evening during the newmoon day, and its nourishment by the Sun during the bright half of the month; the names of two kinds of Paurnamāsī and Amāvāsyā, and the names of the gods who consume fourteen digits of the moon during the dark half of the month .- (Chap. 22), Description of solar eclipse, in which the Sun is not really eaten up by Kāhu (who is described as 'tamomaya'), but the fact is that when on a new-moon day (amāvāsyā) Rāhu approaches the Sun for having his share of nectar from the moon which enters the Sun on that day, he covers the Sun as well as the moon which intervenes between the Sun and Rāhu, 39 description of lunar eclipse, during which Rāhu approaches the moon on the full-moon day (pūrnimā) with the same purpose and covers it with the shadow of the earth .- (Chap. 23). Description of the Magas as those who used to meditate on the syllable 'H', and of the Yājakas as those who worshipped the Sun by burning incense, offering garlands and various other articles, and muttering mantras, the aim of the Magas and the Yajakas being the attainment of final emancipation (mokṣa) through service (karma-yoga) to the Sun who resides in the phenomenal Sun and is both 'sakala' and 'niskala'.--(Chap. 27). Acquirement of Jnana through the practice of yoga (which consists of pranayama, dharana, pratyahara and dhyana), attainment of Sūrya-mandala (solar region) through yoga by those who are given to Traividya-siddhanta as well as by those who are versed in Sūrya-siddhānta (also called Aditya-siddhānta).—(Chap. 28). The important variations in readings in these lines as occurring in the Bhavisya-p. (I 130, 47b-56 and 59-60a) are the following —

'sammukham' (for 'prānmukham' in line 1); 'sthāpanīyam grham samyak prānmukhasthānakalpanāt' (for line 2), 'nimbas tu' (for 'niksubhā' in line 7), 'tatah sthāpyāśvinoh sthānam pūrvadevagrhād bahih' (for line 10), 'rājñassausau' (for 'rājñastosau' in line 11), 'jāndakāmacarau (v. l. jānukāmacarau) sthāpyau daksinām diśam āsthitau' (for line 13), 'kuvero loka-pūjitah' (for 'kuverah soma eva ca' in line 15); 'yatra vā vidyate sthānam diksu sarvā guhādayah' (for line 17), 'pratimāyās tu sūtrena kāryam madhye 'sya mandalam' (for line 22), line 14 (prāpnuyānnūksutāyau tu etc) does not occur in the Bhavisya-p

It is to be noted that in Samba-p., chap 16, wherein the position of the attendants of the Sun has been given, there is mention neither of Sri and Mahāśvetā nor of Soma, and the position of the Aśvins and Revanta is different. Mahāśvetā is, however, mentioned in Sāmba-p 32 32 and 38. 39 and Soma is included in chap 36 (verse 41b) among the attendant detites of the Sun.

According to Visnudh III. 67 the names and position of the attendants of the Sun are as follows:—Dandin (i.e. Danda-nāyaka), Dharma in the form of a lion, and the banner (dhvaja)—on the left of the Sun; Pingala—on the right; the Sun's four sons (viz, Revanta, Yama and the two Manus) as well as his four wives (viz, Rājñī, Niksubhā, Chāyā and Suvarcasā)—on both sides. The Sun, who is the king of planets, may also be surrounded by other planets.

Durgā), the tops of these flags being furnished with the figures (which may either be made of gold, silver or gems, or be painted) of the animals which serve as the carriers of the respective deities; method of furnishing temples with flags—(Chap. 33). Method of performing the annual worship (sāṃvatsarī pūjā) and the annual car-festival (ratha-yāurā)⁴³ of the Sun with the use of Vedic and Purānic mantras (there being no Tantric element); performance of the rite for the pacification of planets (graha-śānti) in case the car was damaged while being drawn.—(Chap. 34). Mental performance of the car-festival by the devotees, who are to have their heads always shaved.—(Chap. 35). Offer of incense by raising the vesel, first to the atmospheric Sun and then to his image and his attendants and other atmospheric deities (viz., Rājūī, Nikṣubhā, Daṇḍanāyaka, Pingala, Rājūa, 44 Stoṣa, 45Kalmāṣa, Garutmat, the quarter-deities, Diṇḍi, 46 Revanta, 47 Indra, Yama, 43 The car-festival was performed in the following way:—A car was constructed with gold, silver or hard wood, and fitted with good and well-decorated (artificial) horses. The image of the Sun was placed in it and duly worshipped with the performance of sacrifice to the Sun. The car was then drawn by men or bulls. At the end of the festival Brahmins were gratified with various kinds of food, and śānti-homa was performed.

The Samba-p. (34. 14-17a) says that the car of the Sun, which was originally made by Brahmä with the different divisions of a year as its component parts, and in imitation of which Viśvakarman constructed cars for other gods, was introduced in the world of mortals by Ikṣvāku to whom it was given by Vaivasvata Manu, 44-45 In Sāmba-p. 36. 39a these two names are wrongly given as Rājan and Toşa (tato rājne ca toṣāya kalmāsāya garutmate) In other places of the Sāmba-p. the names Rājna and Stoṣa are found. Bhav. I 143. 40a, which corresponds to Sāmba-p 36 39a, gives the names as Rājna and Srauṣa (tathā rājnāya srauṣāya tatheśāya garutmate).

46-47 These two names have been given as Dandin and Raivanta in Sāmba-p. 36. 40a (dandine ca tato dadyād raivantānucarāya ca); but in other places of this Purāna the names Dindi and Revanta (or Raivata) occur. Bhav. I. 143 51a, which corresponds to Sāmba-p. 36.40a, reads 'dindine tu tato dadyāddhemantāya yadūttama.' The reading 'hemantāya' is obviously a mistake for 'revantāya.'

In the Vispudharmottara (III. 67. 5) it is Daņdanāyaka who is named as Daņdin.

Taleśa 1 e. Method of burning incense (during which a fire is to be kindled, the Sun is to be summoned with a Puranic mantra, boma is to be performed with the citation of Vedic mantras, and so on), names of the sacrificial and non-sacrificial trees, the proper time for boma, and the persons eligible for performing homa. - (Chap. 37). Results of various kinds of service rendered to the Sun (viz., worship, offer of various articles to the deity, gifts to be made to Brahmins and others, salutation, fasting, etc.), characteristics of Sūrya-bhaktas ('bhakti' and 'śraddhā' being defined as 'manaso bhāvanā bhaktır 100hā śraddhā ca kathyate'); the six mediums of worship, viz., fire, water, air, holy place, image, and pedestal for the image of a deity (there being no mention of yantra and mandala).48 — (Chap. 38). Method of initiation (which requires the selection and preparation of the ground, selection of spiritual preceptors and disciples, offer of argha to the Sun with the mahāmantra, drawing of a mandala with the figure of a twelve-petalled lotus in it, performance of boma and of tattva-nyasa and mantra-nyasa, worship of the quarter-guardians, to some of whom fish, meat etc. are offered, and so on, the mantras used in connection with initiation having Tantric symbolism) -(Chaps. 39 and 41). The import of letters used as symbols in mantras (which have Tantric symbolism). - (Chap 40). Sadācāra48 for the Sun-worshippers. -(Chap. 44). the twelve Sukla Saptamīs.—(Chap. 46). Method of Sun-worship with the performance of nyāsas and mudrās and the citation of mantras which have Tantric symbolism; method of performance of different kinds of mudrās; dissertation on the formation and import of bījas used in mantras (with classification of all the letters of the alphabet); performance of abhicāra; rites to be performed at the time of saṃnyāsa; method of practising yoga; and so on.—(Chaps. 47-83). Results of actions (karma-vipāka); gifts to be made to the reader (pāṭhaka) of the Sāmba-p. for the pleasure of the Sun.—(Chap. 84).

Besides the above-mentioned topics the Samba-p. contains a number of hymns (stava) in praise of the Sun. 80 It also contains the etymological meanings of the following:—

- (1) The epithets Aditya, Aja, Mahādeva, Isvara, Brahmā, Bhava, Prajāpati, Puruṣa, Svayaṃbhū, Hiraṇyagarbha and Nātāyaṇa as applied to the Sun (chap. 7, verses 16-21),
- (2) the Sun's twelve common names⁵¹ (except Mihira and Ravi), the names of the twelve Adityas,⁵² and the names Sakra, Brahmã, Mahādeva, Rudra and Kāla as applied to the Sun for his different functions (chap. 9, verses 15ff.),
- (3) the names Rājñī and Nikṣubhā for the Sun's two wives (chap. 11, vetses 54-57), and
- (4) the names Rājha, Stoşa, Jāndakāra and Māthara for four of the Sun's attendants (chap. 16, verses 9-10 and 14-15).

The above contents of the present Sāmba-p. show that the Purāna is pre-eminently a work of the Sauras whose sectarian mantra is 'khakholkāya namaḥ'. Herein the Sun is called the highest deity and the Supreme Brahma. He is both the individual and the supreme soul and is both one and many. While residing as kṣetrajāa in the material body this Supreme Being, who is both personal and impersonal, remains formless and is not contaminated by actions or influenced by the objects of senses. When transcending the three gunas he is called Purusa. It is he who is worshipped in different forms by gods and by men in the different stages of their life, and who pervades the universe and is its protector and regulator. 53

The present Samba-p., with its varied contents, is certainly not a unified work. Its chapters can be divided into two main groups, viz.,

- I. Chaps. 1-38, 44-46 and 84, and
- II. Chaps. 39-43 and 47-83.

That the chapters of these two groups were composed by different hands in different climes and ages, can be established by numerous evidences, the most important of which are noted below.

(1) All the chapters of the first group, except chaps. 17, 22-23 and 37, are found to occur, partly or wholly, in the Bhavisya-p., as the following list will show. (It is to be noted that not even a single verse of any of the chapters of the second group is found in the Bhavisya-p.).

We shall see hereinafter that the Bhavisya-p. borrowed these chapters from the Samba-p.

(2) The chapters of the first group are concerned with 'Mitravana' which is said in a good number of verses to have been situated on (or very close to) the bank of the 'great river' (mahānadī) Candrabhāgā⁵⁴, a tributary of the river Sindhu in the Punjab, and in which Sāmba established a Sun-temple and the city called Sāmbapura (modern Multan).⁵⁵

The expression 'sindhor uttata-kūlatah', occurring in Sāmba-p. 24. 5-658 which are the same as Bhav. I. 127. 6-7, must not be taken to indicate that Mitravana, mentioned in the chapters of the first group, was situated on the northern shore of the sea and was, therefore, identical with Mitravana in Orissa; because, in the chapters of the first group there is no second mention of Mitravana as being situated on the sea-coast Moreover, in Sāmba-p. 26 10b-1281 (which are the same as Bhav. I. 129. 13b-15) it is said that the image of the Sun, which was constructed by Viśvakarman with the Kalpa-vṛkṣa, was taken by him to the Himalayas and sent down the river Candrabhāgā, so that it might reach Sāmba who was living in Mitravana. Here it is clear that the Candrabhāgā rises in the Himalayas and is thus the same as the Candrabhāgā which is a tributary of the river Sindhu. So, Mitravana, which is said to have been situated on this Candrabhaga, must be the same as the Mitravana of the Punjab.

But in chaps. 42-43⁵⁸ (of the second group), the place of Sunworship is, in all cases, said to have been situated on the shore of the salt-ocean (lavanodadhi), ⁵⁸ and never on or near the bank of the river Candrabhāgā.

- (3) In the chapters of the first group the place at which 'Mitra' and Sāmba practised austerities and the latter established a Sun-temple and a Sun-image as well as a city called Sāmbapura, is called Mitravana. But in chaps. 42-43 (of the second group) the place of Sun-worship is called the 'tapovana' (penance-forest) of the Sun (called Savitr, Bhāskara, Sūrya, Bhānu, Divākara etc. but never Mitra) in more places than one; of it is also called Sūrya-kānana, Ravi-ksetra and Sūrya-ksetra, and it is only once (viz, in Sāmba-p 42 2) that this place is called 'Mitravana'. So, the word 'Mitravana', as occurring in Sāmba-p. 42. 2, is to be taken, like 'Sūrya-kānana', in its literal sense to mean the '(penance-) forest of Mitra', rather than a name.
- (4) The chapters of the first group must have been written in Northern India (and most probably in its western part)⁶². But chaps. 42-43, which deal with the Sun's penance-forest (called tapovana, and also Sūrya-kānana, Ravi-ksetra and Sūrya-kṣetra) situated on the shore of the salt-ocean, are certainly concerned with a place very close to, or even identical with, Koṇārka in Orissa, because Konārka, which was situated on the sea-shore very close to the river Candrabhāgā (a small branch of the river Prācī), is called Sūrya-kṣetra, Ravi-kṣetra and Mitravana an the Brahma-p., Ravi-kṣetra and Maitreya Vana in the Kapila-ṣamhitā, and Sūrya-kṣetra in the Siva-p. 5

- 62 The following holy places and rivers have been mentioned in chaps 32 (verses 1-3) and 34 (verses 1-7) in connection with the holy water with which the Sun's image is to be bathed during its consecration and annual worship.—

Puskara, Naimisa, Kuruksetra, Prthūdaka, Gangā, Sarasvatī, Sindhu, Candrabhāgā, Narmadā, Payosnī, Yamunā, Tāmrā, Ksiprā and Vetravatī It is to be noted that all these holy places and rivers (except Payosnī) belong to Northern India, es pecially to its western part, and that in the chapters of the first group no holy place or river (except Tapati) of Southern India has been mentioned. It should be mentioned here that both Payosnī and Tapatī (of which the latter is said to have risen from the Vindhyapāda and has been identified with the Sun's daughter of the same name) belong to the northernmost part of Southern India.

- (5) In the chapters of the first group, it is Samba who is said to have established at Mitravana a Sun-temple and a Sun-image as well as a city called Sambapura, and the image, which Samba established at Mitravana, is said to have been constructed by Viśvakarman, taken to the Himalayas, and sent down the river Candrabhaga for the sake of Samba. But in chaps. 42-43 the history of the Sun's image, which was placed at the Sun's penance-forest on the shore of the salt-ocean, is given as follows. An image of the Sun was constructed by Viśvakarman and worshipped by the gods. It was then placed on the Kalpa-vrksa in the Himalayas, whence it came down to the saleocean successively through the rivers Candrabhaga, Vaipasa (i.e. Vipāšā), Sātadrava (i.e. Satadru), Yamunā, Jāhnavī (also called Bhagirathi) and Modaganga. Now, once the residents of the Suryakanana assembled on the sea-shore in order to see the Sun-rise and found to their great surprise that the rising Sun, who reddened the sky, the ocean and the earth by means of his rays, appeared in two formsone remaining in the sky and the other in the ocean. In water they found another form of the Sun, which Manus (and not Samba) recovered by entering the ocean and established in a temple which was built there for it by Vaivasvata Manu (and not by Samba).
 - (6) In verses 9-10 of chap. 42 (of the second group) the Sun's penance-forest (tapovana), situated on the shore of the salt-ocean, is said to have been made by Visvakarman; but in the chapters of the first group there is no such statement.

⁶³ Brahma-p 28, 10 and 17 Brahma-p 30 41 and 28, in which the name Mitravana occurs, have been taken, along with other verses, from the Samba-p.

- (7) In verses 16-36 of chap. 42 (of the second group) an attempt has been made to give a garb of greater antiquity to the Sun's penance-forest by saying that before Samba had gone to this place, some sages of old performed austerities there for many centuries in order to please the Sun and became the creators (srastāraḥ) of this place through the Sun's favour. But in the chapters of the first group there is no mention of any sages living at Mitravana before Sāmba's arrival there.
- (8) In chaps. 42 and 43 there are a few instances of such bad versification as is not to be found in any of the chapters of the first, group.
 - (9) In the chapters of the first group the Vedas have been held in the highest esteem. The hymns, recited by the gods and others in praise of the Sun, are called 'vedokta' or 'veda-vedanga-sammita', "7 the three Vedas are said to attend upon the Sun; 68 the agni-hotra-grha (the house for the offer of oblations to the fire) is an unavoidable part of the Sun-temple, 69 and so on. Among these chapters there are a few (viz., chaps. 30, 32 and 34-37) which deal with the method of Sun-worship, but in none of them there is any trace of Tantric influence. In these chapters the Vedic boma forms an important part of the worship; the mantras to be used are either Vedic or Puranic or both, 70 and the mediums of worship (viz, fire, water, air, holy place, image, and pedestal for the image of a deity) do not include the Tantric yantra or mandala.71 On the other hand, Tantric influence is very prominent in almost all the chapters of the second group. Mantras with Tantric symbolism are employed at every step, methods of drawing mandalas and performing various kinds of mudras are given, the necessity of performing nyasas and mudras in worship is emphasised; the word 'tantra' has been used to mean not only 'procedure' but also Tantric works; 22 methods of performing abhicara rites have been given; and so on.

- (10) That the present Sāmba-p. ended with the chapters of the first group is shown by the facts that in Sāmba-p. 39.1 Bthadbala says to Vasiṣṭha, "O venerable Brahmin, you have made me hear, both synthetically and analytically, this imperishable and highly blissful 'Purāna'", and that in Sāmba-p. 39.5 the portion of this Purāṇa beginning with chap. 39 is called the Uttara (bhāga) and is said to have been spoken out by Bhāskara.⁷³
- (11) The names of the twelve Ādityas (viz., Aruņa, Sūrya, Aṃśumālin, Dhātṛ, Indra, Ravi, Gabhasti, Yama, Svarṇa-retas, Tvasṭr, Mitra and Viṣṇu), as given in Sāmba-p. 51. 66-67 and 162-170, do not all agree with those contained in Sāmba-p. 4.6 and 9.3ff. (In Sāmba-p. 4.6 the names of the twelve Ādityas are given as follows:—Indra, Dhātṛ, Parjanya, Pūṣan, Tvaṣṭṛ, Aryaman, Bhaga, Vivasvat, Visnu, Aṃśu, Varuṇa and Mitra. The list, as contained in Sāmba-p. 9.3ff., agrees with that in Sāmba-p. 4.6 in respect of the names but not of their order).
 - (12). Chap. 51 has borrowed many verses from chaps. 7 and 9.14
- (13) Among the chapters of the first group there are several cross-references⁷⁸ to the topics dealt with in these chapters, but there is not a single verse which refers to the topics dealt with in any of the chapters of the second group. On the other hand, in verse 14 of chap. 42 (of the second group) there is a reference to the contents of chap. 3. Hence the chapters of the second group must have been added later than those of the first group.

75 Viz., Sāmba-p. 5. 3a refers to 4. 5-7; 7. 1-4 refer to chaps. 7-16 and 18-20, 7. 36 refers to 7. 12; 10. 4 refers to 6.20, 34 3a refers to chaps. 29-32; 34. 4b refers to chap. 32; 34 14 refers to chap. 21; 35. 2b refers to chaps. 25 and 29; 35 3b refers to 10. 4ff.; 38. 2 refers to chaps. 29-31 and 34-37; 45, la refers to chap, 44.

(14) The chapters of the first group, unlike those of the second, contain several instances of grammatical solecism, viz., the roots 'pracch', 'vas' (in the sense of residing) and 'jval' (in the sense of burning) have been used in the their Atmanepadiya forms.⁷⁶

From the above disagreements between the chapters of the two groups it is clear that all these chapters could not be the works of the same hand not could they belong to the same clime or age. Among the chapters of the first group, again, there are some which must have been added later. We shall now try to find them out.

Though in the concluding verse (iti muni-ṛṣabhaḥ sutāya viṣnor vidhim upadiśya ca nārado jagāma/etc.) of chap. 32 Nārada is said to have left Sāmba after giving him necessary instructions on the consecration of images of the Sun, chap. 33 opens as follows:—

ataḥparam pravakṣyāmı dhvajāropanam uttamam/etc.'

This disagreement between the statements about Nārada in these two chapters raises doubt in our mind about the genuineness of chap 33. This doubt is considerably strengthened by Vasiṣṭha's statement in Sāmba-p. 34. 1-2 that 'on the expiry of a complete year after Sāmba's consecration of the image of the thousand-rayed (Sun), Sāmba again approached Nārada and asked him how he was to perform the annual worship (sāṃvatsarī pūjā) of the Sun'. Moreover, Sāmba-p. 34. 3a (yathoktena vidhānena pratimā-sthāpane kṛte) refers to the contents of chaps. 29-32, and Sāmba-p. 34. 4b (pūrvoktena vidhānena pratimām snāpayed budhaḥ) refers to chap. 32, the contents of chap. 33 being ignored totally. Hence chap. 33 must have been added later. But as this chapter occurs in the Bhavisya-p., it must have been inserted into the Samba-p, earlier than the time of incorporation of the chapters of the Samba-p, into the Bhavisya.

Chaps. 17, 22-23 and 44-45 do not occur in the Bhavisya-p., not are they referred to by any of the remaining chapters of the Samba-p. Samba-p. 7. 1-4 refer to chaps 7-16 and 18-20, ignoring chap. 17. So, chaps. 17, 22-23 and 44-45 must be taken as later additions.

The second group is made up of a few units which might not have been written at the same time. Chaps. 39-41 form such a unit. We have already noted that according to verses 1 and 5 of chap. 39, chaps. 39ff. form a distinct part, called Uttara (-bhāga), which is not a continuation of, but is quite different from, chaps. 1-38. Towards the end of chaps. 40 and 41, the section on dīkṣā (in chaps. 39-41) is called the 'Purāṇokta Sāstra' which everybody is advised to read."

Hence chaps. 39-41 can safely be taken to be a distinct unit.

As regards chaps. 42-43, we have already said much on their distinct character and their connection with Mitravana of Orissa.

Chaps. 53-83 form a distinct section called Jñānottara, the name Jñānottara being mentioned in the colophons of many of these chapters. This section, which is really a Tantra, as it is called in many of its verses, is not peculiar with the printed edition only but is found in all the Mss of the Sāmba-p. hitherto discovered. Moreover, the chapters of this section are often called Paṭala (just as in the Tantric works) and numbered afresh. For instance, the colophon of chap. 53 runs as follows:—iti sāmbapurāne pūjā-vidhi-nirūpane prathamam paṭalaṃ nāma tripañcāśattamo'dhyāyaḥ.

Among the chaps. 53-83, there are a few, viz chaps. 53-55 (except verses 98-117 of chap. 55), which are originally Saura, but the rest prominently exhibit Saiva influence. In these remaining chaptets (viz., chap. 55, verse 98 to chap. 83) Siva and his linga have been mentioned on numerous occasions, Siva is called Paramarman (55. 114), and all gods are said to be 'Sivatmaka' (68. 49). Going to describe the way in which a devoted householder can attain the Sivaloka easily, chap. 69 says that the devotee should have, among other things, the following qualifications, viz., he should worship his spiritual preceptor like Siva himself, follow the path of Siva, and always meditate on the deity. 78 In Samba-p. 71. 1 Samkara is called the best bija and the highest deity, Samba-p. 77. 1 proposes to describe the means by which a devotee may attain the likeness of Siva and his tie of bondage (pasa) may be severed, in Samba-p. 80.10 it is said that the Yogins do not revert to rebirths after attaining the imperishable and the highest deity, namely Siva; 00 chap 82 explains what is meant by bhava-linga, emphasises the necessity of its worship with flowers in the forms of eight mental attitudes (bhava, viz., abimsa, ındrıya-nıgraha, dhrtı, ksamā, śauca, akrodha, hrī and satya) for the pleasure of Siva, and says. "One, who always worships the imperishable Siva with these flowers, is able to see this Supreme Being by breaking open the door of ignorance"; 11 the tie of bongage, which subjects all creatures to rebirths, is in many places called pasa, 82 the names of Siva occur in many of the mantras, 88 and so on. So, it is highly probable that these chapters with Saiva influence were taken from some work of the Saivas and adapted to the need of the Tantrik Saivas with certain modifications. That these chapters originally belonged to some other work, is shown by the fact that the introduction of Bhāskara as speaking to the inquisitive Brahmā in Sāmba-p 55. 98ff. and of Maheśvara as speaking to Brahmā in chaps. 82-83 is made suddenly without any previous notice of the interlocutors.

The remaining chaps. 47-52 of this group must be taken to be another unit. These chapters seem to have been writen at the same time.

From the above analysis it is evident that the present Samba-p. consists of different units mostly belonging to different climes and ages. We shall now try to determine the dates of composition of these units. But the problem of date of these units is intimately connected with the problems of mutual relation between the Samba-p., Bhavisya-p., Brahma-p. and Skanda-p. (Prabhasa-khanda, 1). We shall first set ourselves to the solution of these problems.

It has already been shown that a large number of chapters is found common to the Samba-p. and the Bhavisya-p. That as regards these common chapters the Bhavisya-p. is the borrower, can be established by the following evidences.

(1) Regarding the Sāmba-p. the Matsya-p. (53. 61) says:—
yatra sāmbam puraskṛtya bhavisye'pi kathānakam/, procyate tat punar loke sāmbam etan munivratāḥ//84

84 This verse, which agrees also with Skanda-p VII. 1 2, 82 (v l bhavisyati for bhavisye 'pi'; 'eva' for 'etat'), is found ascribed to the Matsya-p (or Mātsya) in Krtya-kalpataru, I, p. 30 (v. l 'yat tu' for 'yatra' and 'bhavisyati' for 'bhavisye 'pi'), Caturvarga-cintāmani, I, p. 533 (v. l 'bhavisyati' for 'bhavisye 'pi', 'eva' for 'etat') and II. i, p. 22 (v l 'bhavisyati' for 'bhavisye 'pi', 'eva' for 'etat'; 'suci-vratāh' for 'muni-vratāh'), Krtya-ratnākara, p. 32 (v. l. 'yat tu' for 'yatra', 'tat procyate' for 'procyate tat', and 'eva' for 'etat'), Jiva Gosvāmin's commentary (called Krama-samdarbha) on Bhāgavata-p. XII. 7. 17-22 (v. l 'yac ca' for 'yatra'; 'eva' for 'etat'; 'muni-vrataih' for 'muni-vratāh'), Nityācāra-pradīpa, I, p. 18 (v. l. 'eva' for 'etat'; 'muni-vrataih' for 'muni-vratāh'), and Vīramitrodaya, Paribhāsā-prakāśa, p. 15 (v. l 'yat tu' for 'yatra', 'eva' for 'etat')

O sages, (the section, occurring) in the Bhavisya also, wherein there is a small tale concerning Sāmba, is, again, called Sāmba (-purāna) in society'. The words 'api'* and 'punaḥ' in this verse, as well as the word 'pṛthak' in the verse 'aṣṭādaśabhyas tu pṛthak purāṇaṃ etc'. show that though at the time of composition of these verses the Sāmba-p. was found to exist separately and was also found incorporated in the Bhavisya-p., the author of these verses was quite conscious of the fact that the Sāmba-p. was really an independent Purāṇic work.

87 In Varāha-p, chap 177, the story of Sāmba has been given, with certain innovations, as follows —

Once Nārada saw Krsna at Dvārakā and told him that all his 16000 wives were enamoured of Samba for his physical beauty and that this fact used to be discussed by the gods in Brahma-loka In order to be convinced of the truth of Nārada's allegation Krsna called Sāmba before his wives and saw with his own eyes the mental agitation his wives had at the sight of Samba Krsna was ashamed of his wives' conduct, and decried female nature as being unscrupulously lustful With the intention of making Samba an object of Krsna's curse, Nārada said that this guilt was certainly not one-sided but was equally shared by Samba who used to encourage Krsna's wives in their desire for sexual enjoyment, and that even the residents of Satya-loka were of opinion that Krsna's wives were corrupted by Samba. Narada even advised Krsna to forsake Samba Consequently, Krsna cursed Samba to be deformed, and in a moment Samba became an ugly leper. As a remedy Nārada advised Sāmba to go to Udayācala and worship the rising Sun there in the forenoon He also assured Samba that there would be a 'Bhavisyat-purana' on the basis of Samba's words (cf bhavisyatpurānam iti ca tava vādād bhavisyati) and that this Purāna would always be read Kṛṣṇa's curse has been narrated briefly with the mention of the 'Bhavişyat-purana' as the source, Samba is said to have 'made the famous Bhavisyat-purana new'. This shows that originally the Bhavisya-p. did not contain any story of Samba, and that the chapters on Samba were added to the Bhavisya-p. later.

(3) According to Naradiya-p. I. 100, the Bhavisya-p. consisted of five Parvans, viz., Brāhma, Vaisnava, Saiva, Saura and Pratisarga, and of only 14000 ślokas. In connection with a description of the contents of these Parvans, the Nāradīya-p. says that the Brāhma Parvan, which dealt with creation etc., sacraments, and the Tithi-kalpas up to the Saptami Tithi, and which represented all the sastras, related to the Aghora-kalpa, contained mainly the praise of Brahma, es and was 'āditya-carita-prāya' and 'sarvākhyāna-samanvīta'. The non-mention of the famous story of Samba among the contents of the Brahma Parvan, the mention of a short extent of 14000 ślokas for the entire Bhavisya-p., and the statement that the Brahma Parvan abounded in the praise of Brahma and related to the occurrence of the Aghorakalpa, tend to show that the Brahma Parvan, described by the Naradiya-p., was much shorter than the present one (in which there is no mention of the Aghora-kalpa and which has retained some of the contents of its earlier prototype), and that it lacked the story of Sāmba.

by Nārada himself before Brahmā in Brahma-loka and be declared by Sumantu to Manu in the world of mortals But as the disabled Samba intimated his mability to go to Udayācala. Nārada asked him to go to Mathurā (which was evidently nearer to Dváraká than Udayácala) and worship the Sun there after taking his bath in the Yamuna, so that Samba might derive the benefits of worshipping the Sun in the morning on the Udayacala, at mid-day, and in the evening. Samba did so and was cuted of his disease. He asked the Sun about the Purana declared by the latter (cf. ravim papraccha dharmatma puranam sūrya-bhāsitam), made the famous 'Bhavisyat-purāna' new (cf. bhavisyat-purānam iti khyātam krtvā punar navam), and established three images of the Sun,-one on the Udayacala, another named Kalapriya, on the south of the Yamuna, and the third, named Mülasthana, on the Astamanacala. Samba also established another swage of the Sun, named Sambapura, at Mathura

That the Bhavisya-p. was originally much shorter than the present one and that it grew in bulk with the addition of various stories in later times, are shown by the present Bhavisya itself, in which Sumantu says to king Satānīka that all the Purānas originally contained 12000 ślokas each but later on increased in bulk by incorporating various stories, and that in course of time the Bhavisya-p. came to have half a lac of ślokas.

(4) In the library of the Asiatic Society, Calcutta, there is a Ms⁹¹ of the Bhavisya-p. which consists of five Parvans, viz., Brāhma, Vaisṇava, Saiva, Tvāsṭra (i.e. Sauta) and Pratisarga. The extent of this Ms is much shorter than that of the printed Bhavisya, and it lacks the story of Sāmba.

The evidences, adduced above, are certainly not very strong when taken individually. So, they are to be considered with the following internal ovidences.

- (5) In Bhav. I. 93, in which many of the verses of Sāmba-p., chap. 38 are found, there is mention of both the Bhavisya-p. and the Sāmba-p. ⁹² among the objects to be offered to the Sun.
- (6) The story of Samina has been given in two places of the Brahma Parvan of the Bhavisya-p., viz., in chaps. 47 and 79. Of these, chap. 79 has the great majority of its verses in common with Samba-p., chaps. 10-11, and narrates the story of Samina in the same way as the latter. But in Bhav. I. 47 the story of Samina has been given very differently in the following way.

 - 93 For the story of Samjña as given in Samba-p., chaps. 10-11, see above.

While the Sun (called Martanda) was yet in the Cosmic Egg (andastha), Dakşa gave him his incomparabiy beautiful daughter named Arūpā⁹⁴ as wife, and Yama and Yamunā were born to her. Now, the Sun was beautiful but so bright that, being dazzled by his brilliance, Arūpā was unable to see any of his limbs; even her beautiful golden complexion was turned black by the Sun's rays So. being dejected in mind, Arūpā determined to place her own chāyā (shadow) there and go to the Northern Kuru country for practising penance. Consequently, she left Chaya to occupy her own place, with a request not to divulge the matter to the Sun, went to the Northern Kuru country, and lived there with deer for many years in the form of a mare. The Sun took Chaya to be his wife and begot on her 'two children named Sanı and Tapatī.'95 Chāyā was very partial to her own children and did not look upon Yama and Yamuna with much affection. Now, once Yamuna and Tapati quarrelled with each other and were turned into rivers (by their mutual curse); and Yama was beaten by Chaya so severely that the stood before her by raising his foot'. Chaya was enraged at Yama's behaviour and cursed him saying, "Thou, fool, hast raised thy foot towards mel So, the gruesome work of killing the lives of creatures will undoubtedly be thine as long as there will be the sun and the moon. If thou placest this foot on the ground, worms will consume it, polluted as it is by my curse". When Yama and Chāyā were thus quarrelling, the Sun came there. Yama intimated to the Sun Chaya's unequal treatment towards them, and added that she was merely the chaya (shadow) of his mother and not his mother herself. Yama also informed the Sun of the unhappy incident concerning Yamuna and Tapati. Hearing all this, the Sun said that the worms would not enter the earth after taking flesh and blood from Yama's foot placed on the surface of the earth, that the water of the Yamuna would be as holy as that of the Ganges, into which the Yamuna would ultimately flow, that the Tapati would be equal to the Narmada in respect of sanctity and would flow on the south of the Vindhyas, that Yama would become the Lokapala, and that Chaya would thenceforward remain in her own body. The Sun then went to Dakşa and asked him the reason of his daughter's departure. Daksa, who understood the whole matter, told the Sun that being unable to see the Sun's figure his daughter went to the Northern Kuru country. He also proposed that he might make the Sun's figure discernible, only if the latter agreed to stand the pain. The Sun consenting, Daksa thought of Taksan (the divine architect), who immediately came there and, with the Sun's consent to bear the pain, began to pare out his limbs from head to foot by means of his instruments. When the rays of his different limbs were thus being pared, the Sun fainted at every moment. So, being afraid of the Sun's curse, Taksan left the parts of his feet from the heels to the toes unpared and removed the pain by applying on his body a paste made of Karavīra flowers and red sandal. The Sun went to the Northern Kuru country, took the form of a horse, and had physical union with his wife. The two Asvins and Revanta were born of this union After meeting his wife the Sun reassumed his divine form.

⁹⁵ Though here (in Bhav. I 47. 121) only two children, namely Sani and Tapati, are said to have been born of Chāyā by Mārtanda, in Bhav. I. 47. 481 Chāyā is said to have three children, viz, Tapati, Sani and Sāvarni (tapati sanis ca sāvarnis chāyāpatyāni vai viduh). So, verse 48 of Bhav. I 47 must be spurious.

The above story differs from that in Bhav I. 79 on many important points; viz, there is mention neither of Vaivasvata Manu nor of Srutaśravas (who was destined to become Sāvarņi Manu) among the sons of the Sun; the name of the Sun's wife is given as Arūpā; Arūpā is said to have gone direct to the Northern Kuru country without stopping at her father's house, Yamunā and Tapatī are said to have been turned into rivers by their mutual curse, and so on. So, it is evident that these two divergent stories could never have been written by the same hand.

(7) The Bhavisya-p. begins to have verses in common with the Sāmba-p. from I. 52 (dealing with the following topics:—the description of the Sun's one-wheeled chariot, and the method and results of saluting the Sun). Bhav. I. 52 is intimately connected with, and is a cotinuation of, Bhav. I. 51 which deals with the solar vow called Mahāsaptamī requiring the worship of the Sun, the gift of a chariot, and the performance of a procession after mounting the Sun's image in a car (ratha-yātrā). It is the mention of Ratha-yātrā in Bhav. I. 51. 13b that introduces the topics of Bhav. I. 52ff. Moreover, Vāsudeva, who speaks to Sāmba in Bhav. I. 48-51 and who is said to have vanished from Sāmba's presence in Bhav. I. 52. 1-2, is introduced by Sumantu at the very beginning of Bhav. I. 48. As Bhav. I. 48-49, which deal with the method of Sun-worship in Saptamī-vrata, are imbued with Tantric elements, and as Sāmba-p., chaps. 1-15, 16 (verses 1-24), 18-21, 24-38 and 46, being remarkably free from Tantric elements, must have been written at a time when the cult of the Sun was still immune from Tantricism, it is sure that the Bhavisya-p. incorporated the verses of the Sāmba-p. at a time when the method of Sun-worship was being influenced by Tantricism.

(8) The same verses of the Samba-p. occur in three different places of the Bhavisya-p., viz.,

Sāmba-p.

Chap. 8 (except verse 13b) = I. 54. 2-14,

Chap. 8, verses 1-11a = I. 78. 43b-53a;

Chap. 8, verses 1-4a, 5 and 6b-7 = I. 161. 2-5 and 6b-7.

(9) Sāmba-p., chap. 9 gives the etymological meanings (dhātv-artha-nigama) of the Sun's different names in verses 15-43 and then says:—

apy ekam vetti yo nāma dhātvarthanigamai raveļi/

sa rogair varjitah sarvaih sadyah pāpāt pramucyate// (verse 57). Bhav. I. 78 (which has a large number of verses in common with Sāmba-p., chap. 9) contains the verses 'apy ekam vetti yo nāma' etc. but lacks the verses on the etymological meanings of the Sun's different names.

(10) In verse 23 of Bhav. I. 79 Nārada proposes to speak of the offspring of the Sun and says that the Sun begot three children on Samjñā, but in verses 24ff. he goes on narrating the story of Samjñā abruptly from her residence in her father's house for one thousand years before she started for the Northern Kuru country. It is to be noted that although the whole of Sāmba-p., chap. 10, and the large majority of the verses of Sāmba-p., chap. 11, are found to occur in Bhav. I. 79, the Bhavisya-p. remarkably lacks Sāmba-p. 11. 2-12a which state why Samjñā determined to go to her father's house without informing the Sun and how she created Chāyā for the purpose and left her in charge of her husband and children.

- (11) In Bhav. I. 53, in which Brahmā speaks to Rudra and which has the large majority of its verses in common with Sāmba-p., chaps. 20-21, verse 50b reads 'viṣṇur bhavān ahaṃ rudraḥ pūjayāma (v.l 'pūjayanti' and 'pūjayāmah') niśā-ksaye' in place of 'brahmā viṣnuś ca rudraś ca pūjayanti niśā-ksaye' of verse 23b of Samba-p. 20 (in which Nārada speaks to Sāmba on the names of the towns surrounding the Meru, the speed with which the Sun goes round the Meru, and the names of the different gods who worship the Sun at different times).
- kathito mayā/sa tasminn eva manasā sthāpanīyo rathe budhaiḥ//) refers to Sāmba-p., chap. 29 (dealing with the characteristics of the Sun's image, the construction of Sun-temples, and the position of the image of the Sun as well as of those of the Sun's attendant deities in these temples). But Bhav I. 58, which contains almost all the verses of Sāmba-p., chap. 35, omits the lines 'yasya yaś ca niyogaḥ syāt' etc. but retains the line 'sa tasminn eva manasā sthāpanīyo rathe budhaiḥ's which is meaningless without the first line (yasya yaś ca niyogah syāt etc.) The cause of this omission is that in the Bhavisya-p. there is no chapter (preceding chap. 58) to which the line 'yasya yaś ca niyogah syāt' may refer and that the verses of Sāmba-p. 29, which deal with the position of the Sun's image and of those of his attendant deities in the Sun-temple, have been inserted in the Bhavisya-p. as late as in chap. 130.
- (13) Sāmba-p. 35. 3b (dyaur mahī deva-mūrtisthe yathā-pūrvaṃ prakīttite) refers to Sāmba-p. 10. 4ff. (in which the Sun's two wives Rājñī and Nikṣubhā have been identified with Dyauh and Prthivī respectively), but this line, as retained in Bhav. I. 58. 24b (dyaur mahī ca dvimūrtisthe yathāpūrvam pratisthite), has no preceding chapter to refer to, and the verses of Sāmba-p. 10, to which it might refer, have been inserted as late as in Bhav. I. 79

- (14) Though in Bhav. I. 58 Brahmā speaks to Rudra, line 32b (which corresponds to Sāmba-p. 35. 10a) tuns as follows:—yathokta-karaṇād rudra sadā śāntir bhaven nṛpa. The use of the word 'nṛpa' in the Vocative Case in this line is unwarranted and proves that the Bhaviṣya-p. is the borrower, because in the corresponding chapter (35) of the Sāmba-p. Vasiṣṭha speaks to king Brhadbala.
- (15) The Bhavişya-p. has plagiarised a large number of verses from Varāhamihira's Bṛhat-saṃhitā, at viz.,

- 97 The Bhavisya-p is taken to be the borrower for the following reasons -
- (1) In Bhav. I. 1 7 Vyāsa is said to have narrated briefly in the present Bhavisya the contents of the Smrti and other works written by the sages such as Parāśara. So, the present Bhavisya-p. calls itself a compilation rather than an original work. As a matter of fact, Bhav 1. 2ff frequently refer to Manu and have numerous verses derived from the Manu-smrti. Aparārka and Kullūka-bhatta even say that the Bhavisya-p expounds the passages of the Manu-smrti (see Aparārka's com. on the Yāj, pp. 1071 and 1076, and Kullūka-bhatta's com on Manu-smrti XI 73, 74, 75 and 101).
- (2) The peculiar metre, which Varāhamihira uses in many of the chapters of his Brhat-samhitā, is found only in some of those verses of the Bhavisya-p. which are common with the Brhat-samhitā. There are two verses (viz., Bhav. I 137 3 and 6b-7a) which, though written in this peculiar metre, do not occur in the Brhat-samhitā. Of these, the former (i.e verse 3) is introductory and the latter is concluding to verses 4-6a (=Brhat-samhitā 60, 14-19 and 22a).

But in the Sāmba-p. there is not even a single line which has its parallel in the Brhat-saṃhitā, although almost all the verses of chaps. 8 and 29-31 of the Sāmba-p are found to occur in the above-mentioned chapters of the Bhavisya-p., viz,

On the other hand, Bhav. I. 24-28, though dealing with the physical characteristics of men and women (strī-puruṣa-sāmudrika-laksaṇa), betray no influence of the Bṛhat-samhitā (which deals with

(3) A great scholar and astronomer like Varāhamihira cannot be expected to have plagiarised verses from the Bhavisya-p, especially when we consider that although in Brhat-samhitā i 2 Varāhamihira says that he has treated in an easy style the same subject-matter as was revealed by the former seers, he refers very often, by name, to the authors of those works from which he has taken verses, and that the extant Purānas, which are often called compilations (samhitā), are found to have incorporated verses or even complete chapters from standard Sanskrit works on different subjects

Hence it is sure that the Bhavisya-p borrowed the verses from the Brhatsambita

Regarding the mutual relation between the Bhavisya-p and the Brhat-samhitā, Nagendra Nath Vasu says that the Brhat-saṃhitā (60. 19) quotes the verse 'visnor bhāgavatān magāmś ca savituh etc' from the Bhavisya-p. (see Vasu, Archaêological Survey of Mayurabhanja, Vol I, p v, foot-note 1). It is evident that Vasu jumped into his conclusion on the basis of only the above-mentioned verse (visnor bhāgavatān), and that he was quite unconscious of the numerous coincidences between the Brhat-samhitā and the Bhavisya-p. So, his view can safely be rejected

Vasu's view has been repeated by J. N Farquhar in his Outline of the Religious Literature of India (p 153), but the latter says "the śloka may have been in common use, we cannot be sure that it is quoted from the Purāna by Varāha Mihita". (See Outline, p. 153, foot-note 2).

the same topics in chaps. 68-70). So, it is evident that the chapters of the Bhavisya-p., which deal with the story of Samba, were originally taken from the Samba-p. and improved with verses from the Brhatsamhita and then added to the Bhavisya-p.

(16) In Bhav. I. 66 Sumantu, being asked by Satānīka to speak on the glory of the Sun, narrates the interlocution between the sage Sankha and a Brahmin; and in this interlocution Sankha says.

"ımam artham vasışthena prstah sambo yatha pura/ sa covaca vasışthaya tad aham kathayamı te//"

This seems to be a reference to the Samba-p. in which Vasistha narrates the story of Samba to king Brhadbala.

(17) In Bhav. 1. 78. 58-60 (=Samba-p. 9. 5b-8a) the names of the twelve Adityas, shining respectively in the twelve months from Caitra, are as follows:—

Vishu, Aryaman, Vivasvar, Amsumat, Parjanya, Varuna, Indra, Dhātr, Mitra, Pūṣan, Bhaga and Tvaṣtr.

But in Bhav. I. 65, 26b-29 the twelve Adityas, shining respectively in the twelve months from Caitra, are the following:—

Dhatr, Aryaman, Mitra, Varuna, Indra, Vivasvat, Parjanya, Pūṣan, Iṣu, Bhaga, Tvaṣṭṛ, and Viṣṇu.

(18) In Bhav. I. 139. 1-9a (which are the same as Sāmba-p. 26. 16-22a and 24-25) we are told that after regaining his former physical beauty Sāmba approached Nātada and asked him which Brahmins were fit for worshipping the Sun's image established by himself. Nārada said that no twice-born of any worth could be prevailed upon to worship the image and accept its property, because by such acceptance they would be regarded as apānkteya Devalaka Brahmins. So, Nārada advised Sāmba to take recourse to the Sun who alone was able to give him necessary information in this matter. Next, in Bhav. I. 139, verses 9b-69 (none of which, except the first half of 10b, is found in the Sāmba-p.) we see that Nārada also gave an alternative suggestion to Sāmba saying: "Or, Oh tiger in the family of Yadu, go to Gauramukha, the priest of Ugrasena, and ask him. He will fulfil your desire". Consequently, Sāmba approached Gauramukha and requested him to accept the huge temple (vipulam grham) as well as the property that was donated by Sāmba to the Sun's image established there by himself. But Gauramukha declined saying that he could not lower himself to the status of apānkteya Devalaka Brahmins by accepting the property of the image. Next, being asked by Sāmba as to whether he saw or heard of any Brahmin to whom these things might be given, Gauramukha spoke of the 'Magas', whom he described as descendants of Jarasabda (or Jarasastra, according to some Mss)⁹⁸. About the origin of this Jarasabda, Gauramukha narrated the following story.

Due to a curse of the Sun, his wife Nikṣubhā was born in a human form as the daughter of the sage Rijsvan of the Called Rijhva, and once Sujihva) of the Mihira gotra. Rijsvan named her Hāralīlā (or Hāvanī according to some Mss), 100 and the latter 'was to sport with Fire according to her father's command' (pitur niyogāt sā kanyā viharej jātavedasam—Bhav. I. 139. 36b) 101. Accordingly, the Fire was kindled (samiddhah) 102 by her. Now, once the Sun chanced to see Hāralīlā and was attracted by her youthful beauty. Finding no other means of enjoying her person, he entered fire 108;

99 Nagendra Nath Vasu, Castes and Sects of Bengal, IV, p 30 The Bodleian Ms reads 'Jalagamvu,'—See Aufrecht, Bod Cat, p 33a

99a The Rg-veda names one Rjiśvan (almost undoubtedly a king) in a number of verses, two of which (viz., Rg-veda IV. 16 13 and V 29. 11) call him a 'Vaidathina' (a son or descendant of Vidathin) and one (viz, Rg-veda X 99 11), an 'Auśija' (a son or descendant of Uśija) As there is no possibility of Vaidathina Rjiśvan and Auśija Rjiśvan of the Rg-veda being different persons. it seems that Rjiśvan was the son or descendant of Vidathin belonging to the family of Uśija (See Pargiter, Ancient Indian Historical Tradition, p 161) In Rg-veda VI 20 7 Rjiśvan has been called 'a donor of (sacrificial) gifts'.

100 See Aufrecht, Bod, Cat, p 32b Nagendra Nath Vasu, Castes and Sects of Bengal, IV, p 30

101 This shows that Hāralilā (or Hāvanī) was betrothed by her father to the Fire god, who alone was thus entitled to enjoy her person

103 In the verses

anayāvahrto yo 'yam pāvako deva pūjitah/ vanam āvišya tanvangīm bhajeyam loka-pūjitām// iti saṃcintya devešah sahasrāmšur divaspatih/ viveša pāvakam vīra tat-putraš cābhavat tadā// and Häralīlā also transgressed the kindled Fire and met the Sun. Seeing that Hāralīlā transgressed himself, the Fire, which was kindled by Hāralīlā, became enraged. He assumed his own form and said under the inspiration of the Sun (nodito bhaskarena tu), "As you have superseded me by violating the Vedic injunctions, the son, who will be born to you, will be famous under the name of Jarasabda (or Jarasastra, according to some Mss) and will be the perpetuator of his family and the multiplier of fame (vamsa-kīrtivivardhanah)104. (His descendants) will be called Magas, because of (his) origin from fire; they will also be known as dvijātis (twice-born) for (his) origin from Soma, and as Bhojakas for (his) origin from Aditya. All these will be called divine". Saying this the Sun (who resided in the Fire) vanished. The sage Rjisvan knew, through meditation, about Hāralīlā's pregnancy. He deemed himself lowered106 and cursed Hāralīlā saying: "Oh extremely fortunate (girl), as, due to the fault of yourself who have become passionate, the foetus has been generated in you under the cover of fire, it will become dishonourable (apūjya)". Being aggrieved, Hāralīlā prayed to the Sun for raising her child to an honourable position. The Sun took the (Bhav. I 139 39-40) the word 'vanam' must be a wrong reading for 'enam' Aufrecht's Ms reads 'etam' for 'vanam' -- See Bod. Cat., p. 332

vedoktam vidhim utsriya yathaham langhitas tvaya/tasman mattah samutpanno na ca putro bhavisyati// jarasabda iti khyato vamsa-kirti-vivardhanah/
agni-jatya magah proktah soma-jatya dvijatayah//

But with these readings the above lines do not give any clear meaning, and the third line remains unconnected. So, we are to accept the text of the second line as given in Aufrecht's Ms, viz, tasmat sa tu samutpannas tava putro bhavisyati—See Bod. Cat., p 33a.

(Bhav. I. 139. 46a) But Aufrecht's Ms reads:—
tam evam uktvā bhagavān ādityo 'ntardadhe 'gnimān

form of fire and said that though he did not like to make Risvan's words futile, he would make her disreputable son worthy of respect and versed in the Vedas, that her son would have as his descendants such teachers of the Vedas as Vasistha and others who would sing the Sun's praise, worship the Sun and fire with devotion, observe the solar vows, have matted hair and beards, carry a pūrṇaka in their right hand and a 'varśmā' in their left, cover their face with a veil called 'patidāna' nad, being purified by these and other practices, attain the Sun's proximity, and that even those who would worship the Sun without observing any rule or using any mantra out of ignorance or displeasure, would delight in the presence of the Sun. The Sun then vanished.

Thus, Gauramukha said, 'the Bhojakas came into being'. Gauramukha advised Sāmba to give the town as well as the gifts to these Bhojakas. At the request of Sāmba to tell him where these great sons of the Sun called Bhojakas lived, Gauramukha intimated his ignorance in this matter and advised him to take recourse to the Sun.

Then in Bhav. I. 139. 70-81 and 83-97 (which are the same as Sāmba-p. 26. 26-49 and 50b-52) we are told that Sāmba approached the Sun, bowed down to him, and asked him. "Who will perform your worship?" Being thus questioned by Sāmba, the Sun spoke of the Magas, Magagas, Gānagas (or Mānasas) and Mandagas of Sāka-dvīpa, who, he said, were produced by Viśvakarman from his rays, 109 to whom he imparted the four Vedas, and who were given to his worship. At the Sun's advice Sāmba went to Sāka-dvīpa and brought eighteen families (astādása kulāni) of Magas to Mitravana.

A careful comparison between the above contents of the three parts of Bhav. 1. 139 shows that the third part is a direct continuation of the first, and that the second part (viz., Bhav. I 139 9b-69), which is not found in the Samba-p., differs on many points from the first and the third For instance, Samba's question 'kas te pūjām karisyati'

The printed ed. wrongly reads 'varma'.—Bhav I. 139. 60a.

The 'varśmā' (or Barsom,—Avestan 'baresma') is a bundle of twigs held by Magian priests during Sun-worship to the Sun in Bhav. I 139 70b follows from the conversation between Samba and Narada in Bhav. I. 139 1-9a but does not agree with Bhav. I. 139. 69 in which Gauramukha says:

"nāham jāne mahābāho vasante yatra vai magāh/ravis taj jānate vīra tasmāt tam saraņam vraja//"; and in Bhav. I. 139. 76b the Magas, Magagas etc. are said to have been produced by Visvakarman from the Sun's rays, whereas in Bhav. I. 139. 9b-69 a different origin of the Magas is given.

Just like the Bhavisya-p., the present Brahma-p. also has a large number of verses in common with the Samba-p., viz.,

That the above verses of the Brahma-p. originally belonged to some other source is shown by the fact that though in Brahma-p., chap. 28 Brahmā begins, at the request of the sages, to describe the place (kṣetra) of Koṇāditya or Koṇārka situated in Uthala (or Oḍradeśa) on the northern shore of the salt-ocean¹¹⁰, in chaps 29-33

110 Brahma-p. 28, verses 1-2 (... dahsinodadhi-samsthitah/ odradeśa iti khyātah.....// samudrād uttaram tāvat), 11 (lavanasyodadhes tire.....), 19-20, 56 and 64 (konārkasyodadhes tire.....).

he is found to describe Mitravana situated on the bank of the Candrasarit mostly in the same verses as found in the Sāmba-p. and the Bhavisya-p, no mention being made by him of Konāditya (or Koṇārka), of Utkala (or Odradeśa), or of the ocean in these chapters. A comparison between the above-mentioned chapters of the Brahma-p., on the one hand, and those chapters of the Sāmba and the Bhavisya-p. which have verses in common with the Brahma-p., on the other, shows definitely that the Brahma-p. borrowed these common verses from the Sāmba-p. For instance, many verses are found common to Brahma-p. 29, Sāmba-p. 38 and Bhav. I. 80-82 and 93, and a textual comparison between these chapters shows that Brahma-p. 29 agrees much more with Sāmba-p. 38 than with Bhav. I 80-82 and 93. 111

III The nature of agreement will be evident from the following table.

Similarly, the text of Brahma-p., chap. 30 follows much more that of Sāmba-p. 2 and 4-5 than of Bhav. I 66, 74 and 67 The arrangements of those chapters of the Brahma, Sāmba and Bhavisya-p. in which the common verses occur, 112 also point to the Sāmba-p. as the source of the Brahma.

etc.		etc		etc

The text of the Brahma-p. follows that of the Samba-p, not only in the number of verses but also in their readings. For instance,

Sāmba-p. 38.3b-deva-pūjā-phalam 38 4a-pranīpāte namas-	Bhavisya-p. I. 80.2a-sürya-püjä-phalam I. 80.2b-pranipäte phalam	29 4a-same as in the

For those few cases in which particular verses or readings of the Brahma-p, are found in the Bhavisya-p, and not in the Samba, the changes undergone by the Samba-p, are to be held responsible 112 The corresponding chapters in these three Puranas are the following -

Brahma-p.	Sāmba-p.	Bhavisya-p
Chap. 29	Chap. 38 Chaps. 2, 4 and 5	I. 80-82 and 93 I 66, 74 and 67.

" 3 ²	,, 11 and 12	I 79 and 121 1 123
., 33	Chap 14	,

Note that most of the chapters of the Samba-p, which correspond to Brahma-p., chaps. 29-33, follow their preceding ones in regular succession

The Skanda-p. (Prabhāsa khanda) also has a large number of verses in common with the Sāmba-p., Bhavisya-p. and Brahma-p. The corresponding chapters of these four Purāṇas in which the common verses occur are the following:—

Chaps. 128 and 240	Chap 25	I 128	Chap. 31.

A comparison between the texts of these corresponding chapters shows that the text of the Skanda-p. is based mainly on that of the Bhavisya but is sometimes supplemented by that of the Brahma-p., as the following table will indicate.

Much more striking is the resemblance between Skanda-p. VII 1 100-101 and Bhav. I. 72-73 and 78 which agree not only in the number of verses but also in their contents. In Skanda-p. VII.1 100 and Bhav. 1.72 the sage Durvāsas 18 said to have cursed Sāmba to become a leper, because Sāmba imitated the uncouth look and movement of the sage; but in Sāmba-p., chap. 3, which corresponds to Skanda-p. VII.1.100, there is no such story of Durvāsas.

We are now in a position to discuss the dates of the different units of the present Samba-p.

This Purana not only mentions the Mahabhatata in verse 15 of chap. 1 but also derives the majority of the verses of its chap. 45 (dealing with the story of the origin of shoes and umbrella) from the latter, viz.,

Sāmba-p.

It speaks of many 'Purāṇas', 113 and refers most probably to the Skanda-p., Brahmända-p, Vāyu-p., Mārkaṇdeya-p., etc 114 It knows the week-days, as it mentions Sunday on several occasions. 115 In Sāmba-p 3 52-53 Sāmba is said to have enraged the sage Durvāsas and become the object of his curse which brought about the destruction of the Yadu family through a mace (musala) born of Sāmba. 116 The mention of Durvāsas as cursing Sāmba to give birth to a mace is found in Bhāgavata-p. X 1 12ff. In the Mahābhārata (XVI. 1, 15ff.) and the Viṣṇu-p (V.37.6ff.) the story of the birth of a musala from Sāmba is given, but in both these works Sāmba is said to have been cursed by the sages Viśvāmitra, Kanva and Nārada, but not by Durvāsas. So, the upper limit of the date of the Sāmba-p should not be placed earlier than 500 AD.

Again, the Sāmba-p. was mentioned by Albertini in 1030 A.D.¹¹⁷. Candesvara quotes a verse from Sāmba-p., chap. 36 in his Krtya-ratnā-kara; Sūlapāņi has a few lines from chap. 46 in his Vratakāla-vivela, Halāyudha has three verses from chaps. 24 and 36 in his Brāhmaṇasarvasva; Vallālasena draws upon chaps 36, 38 and 45 in his Dānasāgara; and Vandyaghaṭīya Sarvānanda has, from chap. 9, a few lines (on the erymological meanings of the names 'Brahma,' 'Varuna,' 'Martanda' and 'Mihira')118 in his commentary called Tika-sarvasva on Amarasimha's Nāmalingānusāsana. Sarvānanda quotes from the Sāmba-p another line 139 which, as Sarvananda says, was given in the Samba-p in connection with the description of flags for different deities (dhvajaniruaya), but which is not found in Samba-p., chap. 33 (dealing with the same topic). Besides these, a few more verses of the 'Samba-p.' are found quoted in Mitra Miśra's Viramitrodaya (Paribhāṣā-prakāśa, p. 24), Ananta-bhatta's Vidhana-parijata, II, p. 519, Gadadhara's Kalasara (pp. 125-126), Raghunandana's Smrtu-tattva (I. p. 417), Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmaņi (III. 11, p. 644), and Jīmūtavāhana's Kālaviveka (pp. 417 and 492), but none of these verses is found in the present Samba-p. We have already seen that the text of Skanda-p. VII. i, chaps. 11-12, 100-101, 128 and 240120 is based on Bhavisya-p I, chaps. 72-73, 78-79, 121-123 and 128 and Brahma-p., chaps 31-32, that the Brahma-p. (chaps. 29-33) has borrowed a large number of verses from the Samba-p., and that the Bhavisya-p. has plagransed a 118 The line, which Sarvānanda quotes from the Sāmba-p on the etymological meaning of the name 'mihira', is 'miheti secane dhātur mehanān mihirah smṛtaḥ'. But this line is not found in the present Sāmba-p. That this line once did occur in chap. 9 of the present Sāmba-p, is shown definitely by the fact that though towards the beginning of this chapter the Sāmba-p, first gives the 24 names of the Sun and then proposes, in verse 15, to give the etymological meanings (dhātvartha-nigama) of these names, it actually gives the etymological meanings of 23 names, and makes no mention of the name 'mihira'.

This line (talas talakriih) has its parallel in verse 38b of Bhav. I. 138 which corresponds to Samba-p., chap. 33-

120 For the comparatively late date of many of the chapters of the present Prabhāsa-khaṇḍa, see foot-note 35 under Saura-p. in Vol. II of the present work. See also Hazra, Purāṇic Records, p. 163.

large section, including complete chapters, of the Sāmba-p. Now, Brahma-p. 29-33 (on Konārka in Orissa) are to be dated between 950 and 1200 A.D., ¹²¹ and the Bhavisya-p must have borrowed the chapters of the Sāmba-p. not later than 950 A.D., because Varāha-p., chap. 177¹²² mentions the story of Sāmba as occurring in the 'Bhavisyat-purāna,' and among the verses quoted by Jīmūtavāhana, Vallālasena and Hemādri from the Bhavisya-p there are some which are common to the Bhavisya and the Sāmba-p ¹²³ Hence the date of the Sāmba-p. cannot be placed later than 800 A.D

Thus the Sāmba-p. is to be dated between 500 and 800 A.D. As this Purāna is mentioned in all the lists of eighteen Upapurānas as well as in Matsya-p. 53 and Skanda-p. VII 1. 2. it seems to have been composed towards the beginning of this period. J. N. Farquhar also supposes, without adducing much evidence, that the present Sāmba-p. was written between 550 and 900 A.D.¹²⁴

The above date of the Sāmba-p. is certainly not the date of all its chapters. We have already seen that the chapters of the present Sāmba-p. are to be divided into two main groups, viz.,

- (1) chaps. 1-38, 44-46, and 84, and
- (2) chaps 39-43 and 47-83,

121 See Hazra, Puranic Records, pp 153-4 and 156

122 For the probable date of Varaha-p, chap. 177, see Hazra, Puramic Records, pp 105-106

Bhav. I 81. 2-3 and 15b-16a, quoted in Jimūtavāhana's Kālaviveka, p 415, are the same as Sāmba-p 38. 26b-28a; Bhav I. 81 2, quoted in Kālaviveka p 492 and Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmani, I, p. 63, and II 1, p. 663, is the same as Sāmba-p 31 26b-27a; Bhav I. 93 42a. quoted in Vallālasena's Dānasāgara, p 681 is the same as Sāmba-p 38 55a, Bhav. I 81. 3, quoted in Caturvarga-cintāmani, II 1, p 663, is the same as Sāmba-p. 38. 27b-28a; Bhav I 208 4-16a, 17-18a, 21-22a and 30b-34a, quoted in Caturvarga-cintāmani, II. 1, pp 687-690, are the same as Sāmba-p 46, verses 3b-4a, 5b-6, 7-9a, 10-20a and 28b-32; Bhav. I. 209 1-5a, 6b-12a and 13b-14a, quoted in Caturvarga-cintāmani, II 1, pp 724-725, are the same as Sāmba-p 46, verses 33b-37 and 40-46; Bhav. I, chaps. 55-57 and 58 (verses 1-33), quoted in Caturvarga-cintāmani, II ii, pp 424-440, are very much the same as Sāmba-p.. chaps 34 and 35; and so on.

and that the chapters of the second group were added to the Samba-p. at a later date. We have also noted that among the chapters of the first group, there are a few interpolated ones, viz., chaps. 17, 22-23, 33 and 44-45, and that none of these interpolated chapters, except chap. 33, occurs in the Bhavisya-p. So, chap. 33, though spurious. must have been added to the Samba-p. before the Bhavisya-p. borrowed chapters from the Samba-p. Thus it is to be dated between 700 and 950 A. D. The remaining interpolated chapters, viz., 17, 22-23 and 44-45, which do not occur in the Bhavisya-p., must have been inserted after 950 A D. This late date of insertion of these lastmentioned chapters must not be taken to indicate that all the verses of these chapters were composed at a later date. We have already seen that chap. 45 (dealing with the origin of shoes and umbrella) is composed of verses mostly taken from Mahābhārata XIII. 95 and 96. Chap. 44 also (which deals with manners and customs laid down in aphorisms and which records two metrical gathas125, one of which is said to have been sung by Yama) must have been based on an earlier work. As, of these two chapters (44-45), the latter is drawn upon by Vallalasena, and as chap. 45 refers to, and is introduced by, chap. 44, it is sure that chaps, 44 and 45 were inserted at the same time and that this insertion was made before 1050 A D. It should be mentioned here that none of the early Nibandha-writers quotes even a single line from chap. 44, although it deals with manners and customs (ācāra).

The chapters of the second group do not occur in the Bhavisya-p. Unlike the chapters of the first group, they are full of Tantric elements. So, they must have been added to the Samba-p. after Vallalasena's time; otherwise, Vallalasena would never quote verses from the Sāmba-p., so deep his hatted towards Tantricism was. These chapters with Tantric elements seem to have been added before 1500 A. D., because Gadādhara quotes from the Sāmba-p. a line in which a worshipper is directed to perform nyāsa according to the prescribed manner before worshipping the deity, and Mitra Miśra quotes a verse in which people, who have deviated from the path of the Vedas, are advised to take recourse to Tantras in order that they may gradually return to the path of the Vedas. Likewise, Ananta-bhaṭṭa quotes from the same Purāna another verse which says, "For the sake of those who deviated from the Veda the lord of Kamalā spoke out the Pāncarātra (Tantra), the Bhāgavata (Tantra) and the Tantra named Vaikhānasa." 129

Group I-

(1) Chaps. 1 (except verses 17- —Composed between 500 and 800 25 which give the contents of A. D. (Most probably towards the spurious chapters), 2-15, 16. the beginning of this period). 18-21, 24-32, 34-38, 46 and 84.

- (2) Chaps, 17 and 22-23
- -Added later than 950 A. D.

(3) Chap. 33

- -Added between 700 and 950
- (4) Chaps 44-45
- -Inserted into the Samba-p. between 950 and 1050 A.D.

Group II-

Vidhāna-pārijāta, II, p 519

(The second group is made up of a few units, viz.,

- (a) chaps. 39-41 —on initiation to Sun-worship,
- (b) chaps. 42-43 on the Sun's penance-forest on the shore of the salt-ocean,
- (c) chaps. 47-52 on japa-yajña-vidhi, mudrā-laksana, pūjā-vidhāna, etc.;
- (d) chaps. 53-55 (verses 1-97) —which are originally Saura
- (e) chaps. 55 (verses 98 ff.)-83 —which exhibit Saiva influence and seem to have belonged originally to some other work).

The original chapters, which are now found in the present Sambap., were not all that constituted this Purana originally. That several chapters have been lost, or rather eliminated, from this Purana, will be clear from the following evidences.

After narrating how Sāmba dishonoured Nārada and became the object of Kṛṣṇa's curse Vasiṣṭha says in Sāmba-p. 3. 52-53—

"sāmbena punar apy evam durvāsāh kopito munih/ bhāvyenārthena cātyartham pūrvānusmaraņena vai// prāptavān sumahacchāpam sāmbo vai manujottamah/, tacchāpān musalam jātam kulam yenāsya pātitam//,"

"(Being urged) by destiny and by the recollection of the previous (event) Samba enraged very much the sage Durvasas again in the same way. Samba, the best of men, received a severe curse, (and) due to that curse there was born a mace which destroyed his family". The words 'punar api' and 'purvanusmaranena' in the former verse show that the story of Samba's creation of Narada's displeasure and his incurring the curse of Kṛṣṇa was preceded by the story of Sāmba's incurring the displeasure of Durvasas and becoming the object of the latter's curse. But in the present Samba-p. there is no such story about Durvasas. That this story once occurred in the Samba-p. is shown by the Bhavisya-p. (I. 72. 14-20) which states that once Durvāsas came to Dvāravatī in course of his wanderings. At the sight of the tawny eyes, extremely emaciated body, and ugly look of the sage, Samba, who was proud of his physical beauty, ridiculed him by imitating his uncouth look and movement. Durvasas was enraged at Samba's behaviour and cursed him to became a leper before long.

This Purāna then narrates, like the Sāmba-p., the story of Nārada's arrival at Dvāravatī in order to see Vāsudeva, Sāmba's negligence towards the sage, and Krsṇa's curse on Sāmba, and concludes with the verse—

sāmbena punar apy eva durvāsāḥ kopito munih/tac-chāpān musalam jātaṃ kulam yenāsya ghātitam//
(Bhav. I 73. 44).

These stories of Durvasas and Nārada are also found in Skanda-p. VII. 1. 100 (verses 12-17) and 101 (verses 1-43) which are the same as Bhav. I. 72 (verses 14-20) and 73 (verses 1-43a).

In Bhav. I. 140.23a Sāmba asks Vyāsa to tell him who the Magas and the Bhojakas were and how they became the worshippers of the Sun (katham pūjākarā hy ete kim magāḥ kim ca bhojakāh). Consequently, in Bhav. I. 140. 29ff. Vyāsa speaks on the Magas and the Bhojakas 'in the same way as he was told about these by Vasiṣṭha' (cf. yathākhyātam vasiṣṭhena tathā te vacmi krtsnaśaḥ—Bhav. I. 140. 30b) and says at the end of Bhav. I. 144—

"makāra-dhyāna-yogāc ca magā hy ete prakīrtītāh// dhūpa-mālyair yatas cāpi upahārais tathaiva ca/ bhojayanti sahasrāmsum tena te bhojakāḥ smrtāḥ//."

But in Sāmba-p, chap. 27 (in which Vasiṣṭha speaks to king Bṭhadbala, and of which verses 1-4 agree with Bhav. I. 140. 20-23, and verses 6-18 and 19b-23 agree with Bhav. I. 144. 9b-16a, 17-24 and 25b-26) there is no account of the Bhojakas; and the word 'bhojaka' has been replaced, obviously for the sake of this elimination, by the word 'yājaka' in Sāmba-p 27. 4a ('kathaṃ pūjākarā hy ete kiṃ magāh kiṃ ca yājakāḥ' which corresponds to Bhav. I. 143 23a mentioned above) and 22b-23 (makāra-dhyāna-yogāc ca magā¹³⁰ hy ete prakīrtitāḥ// dhūpa-mālyair japaiś cāpi hy upahārais tathaiva ca/j ye yajanti sahasrāmśuṃ tena te yājakāḥ smṛtāḥ//). Nay, in other verses also of the Sāmba-p. the word 'yājaka' has been substituted for the word 'bhojaka' ¹³¹ That the word 'yājaka', now found in the

¹³¹ See Sāmba-p. 30, 22b—brāhmanebhyas tato dattvā yājakebhyaś ca daksmām (=Bhav I. 131. 36b—...dattvā bhojakebhyaś ca.....),

Sāmba-p., was a later substitute for the original word 'bhojaka' and that an account of the Bhojakas once occurred after Sāmba-p. 27. 4a, are proved not only by the above comparison of the texts of the Sāmba and the Bhavisya-p. but also by the fact that the word 'bhojaka' has been retained in Sāmba-p. 27. 3. In Sāmba-p. 36. 36a (= Bhav. I. 143. 37a) also, the word 'bhojaka' is found to occur. As the Bhojakas have not been mentioned in any of the verses preceding Sāmba-p. 27. 3a, Bṛhadbala's anxiety to know about the Bhojakas (cf. kiṃ tu cintayataḥ sūryaṃ cintayitvā tu bhojakān) in Sāmba-p. 27 3ff. indicates that there were verses on the Bhojakas preceding Sāmba-p. 27. 3.

It will be interesting here to note why and by whom the accounts of the Bhojakas were eliminated from the Samba-p. and the word 'bhojaka' was substituted by the word 'yājaka' in it.

The indiscriminate use of the names 'Maga' and 'Bhojaka' for the Sun-worshippers in the Samba-p. shows that this Purana makes no serious distinction between the Magas and the Bhojakas. According to this Purana, a Sun-worshipper was called Maga, because he meditated on the syllable 'H'¹³³; he was also called Bhojaka, because he worshipped the Sun with incense, garlands and other offerings¹³⁴. In Bhav. I. 140 (verses 20-23) and 144 also, which correspond to Samba-p. 27, the Magas and the Bhojakas are not at all distinguished.

32. 35b —havişyam bhojayıtvā tu brāhmanān yājakāms tathā (=Bhav. l 136 44a—havisyabhojal āmāms tu brāhmanān bhojakāms tathā), 32 47a—viprebhyo yājakebhyaś ca tito dadyāc ca daksinām (=Bhav. l 136, 67b—viprebhyo bhojakebhyaś ca.....).

132 kim tu cintayatah süryam cintayitvä subhojakān/ jñānam pratī tathā caisām hrdaye mama samśayah// katham pūjākarā hy ete kim magāḥ kim ca yājakāh/

The verse 'kim tu cintayatah' is the same as Bhav. l 140 22 The Bhavisya-p reads 'tu bhojakān' for 'subhojakān' of the Sāmba-p.

134 See Samba-p. 27.22b-23 (=Bhav. I 144 25b-26, the Bhavisya-p reads 'magah' for 'maya', and 'bhojakah' for 'yajakah' of the Samba-p).

It is even said in the Bhaviṣya-p. that none becomes entitled to attain final emancipation without acquiring the qualifications of a Bhojaka¹³⁵. But in Bhav. I. 139. 9b-69 (which are not found in the Sāmba-p.), the Magas and the Bhojakas are described as the descendants of Jaraśabda (or Jaraśastra) who was cursed to be regarded as 'apūjya' (not deserving honour) by the Fire sustained by Hāralīlā (or Hāvanī), daughter of the sage Rjiśvan; and in Bhav. I. 140, verses 1-19 and 24-50 and chap. 141 (which also do not occur in the Sāmba-p.) the Bhojakas are said to have descended from those ten of the eighteen Sun-worshipping Magas who were married to the girls of the Kṣatriyan Bhoja family by Sāmba¹³⁶. From these stories of the Bhavisya-p., which are mostly imaginary but not without any basis on historical facts, and from the other accounts of the Magas and the Bhojakas as occurring in the common portions of the Bhaviṣya and the Sāmba-p. we make the following deductions:

- (1) The Sun-worshipping Magas, who came to India in early times, were, in course of time, divided into two groups known as Magas and Bhojakas.
- (11) In spite of their ritualistic, and sometimes ideological, differences, which appear to have been partly responsible for their separation, the Bhojakas were at first regarded as holy Brahmins¹³⁷ as much as, or even more than, the Magas.
- (111) Due to their objectionable activities and matrimonial relations, as known from Bhav. I. 140 (except verses 20-23), 141 and 146 (which do not occur in the Sāmba-p.), the Bhojakas came to lose their position of respect with the progress of time and turned Devalaka Brahmins (temple-priests) attached to Sun-temples. They were hated so much that other Brahmins looked upon them as 'apāūk-teya' (unfit for sitting in the same row with them at meals) and did not take food prepared or served by them¹³⁸. In his Bhāṣya on Manu-smṛṭi 2. 6 Medhātithi names the Bhojakas as extra-Vedic people having no connection with the Vedas¹⁵⁹.

- (1v) Besides the Sun-worshipping Magas and Bhojakas mentioned above, there came to India in later times other Magas who were the Fire-worshipping followers of Zoroaster and must have left Iran as a result of the spread of Islam after the sixth century A. D.
- (v) The Sun-worshipping Magas did not look upon these Fire-worshipping followers of Zoroaster with respect. They recognised these new Magas as Brahmins of low status like the Bhojakas, and, in order to win them over to Sun-worship, invented the story of the birth of Jarasabda (or Jarasastra, i.e. Zoroaster), from whom both the Fire-worshipping Magas and the Sun-worshipping Bhojakas are said to have descended. The motive underlying this peculiar story is evidently to impress upon the Fire-worshipping Magas that their religious leader Zoroaster was really the son of the Sun and worshipped the Sun-god in the form of Fire, that they could attain final liberation from bondage not by Fire-worship but by worshipping the Sun through Fire as a medium, and that they were free to retain, to a great extent, their own peculiar practices, viz., use of 'patidana', holding of 'pūrṇaka' and 'varśmā', having matted hair and beards, offering of Soma during worship, and so on.
- (vi) A section of the Fire-worshipping Magas must have been absorbed by the Bhojakas, and this seems to be the cause why both the Fire-worshipping Magas and the Sun-worshipping Bhojakas have been said to be the descendants of Jarasabda (or Jarasastra).

From inscriptional evidence we learn that the Bhojakas enjoyed a respectable position at least down to the eighth century A.D. Narasımhagupta Bālāditya and Jīvitagupta II, who reigned in Magadha in the fifth and eighth centuries A.D. respectively, are said to have shown respect to the Bhojaka Brahmins of Magadha and to have made donations of land to them. 140 But from the tenth century A.D. the descendants of Brahmins from Saka-dvipa called their ancestors 'Magas' or 'Sāka-dvīpī' Brahmins but not 'Bhojakas' at least in Magadha and Bengal. This fact is evidenced not only by a number of inscriptions (such as the Govindapura stone inscription141 which mentions the Mana kings of Magadha), but also by the Kulaji-granthas and other works.142 It is clearly for this lowered position of the Bhojakas that the word 'bhojaka' has been replaced with the word 'yājaka' in the Samba-p., and this replacement seems to have been made by the people of Orissa who added chaps. 42-43 to the Samba-p. in order to glorify the Sun's place on the sea-coast there.

Scholars are inclined to regard the Samba-p. as 'a Saura document connected with Orissa'. But this view is untenable. We have already seen that the present Samba-p. is originally a work connected with Mitravana in the Punjab and that it is only the interpolated chaps. 42-43 which deal with the Sun's penance-forest in Orissa.

The present Samba-p. must have been written in Northern India, and most probably in its western part. With the exception of the rivers Tapati and Payoṣnī, all the holy places and rivers, mentioned in this Purāṇa, belong to Northern India, especially to its western part. 144

According to the Saura-saṃhitā of the Skanda-p. the Sāmba-p. was also called 'Susūkṣma'. 145 A 'Bhāskara-purāna' is mentioned in Skanda-p. V. 111 (Revā-khaṇḍa). 199. 4-5 as dealing with the story of the birth of the two Nāsatyas (nose-born, i.e. the Aśvins) in connection with the praise of Mārtanḍa. 146 This 'Bhāskara-purāṇa' may be the same as the present Sāmba-p., because the latter also calls itself 'bhāskarasya purāṇam' in verse 13 of chap. 1 and contains the story of the birth of the Aśvins in chaps. 10-11. In his Malamāsa-tattva Raghunandana gives from the 'Kaurma' (i.e. Kūrma-p.) a list of Upapurāṇas including the Sāmba-p. and a Purāna 'named Bhāskara' (bhāskarāhvayam). 147 So, this Bhāskara-p. of the Malamāsa-tattva must be different from the Sāmba-p. Both Raghunandana and Kāśīrāma Vācaspati, the commentator on the Malamāsa-tattva, identify this Bhāskara-p. with the Āditya-p. 146 are quite ignorant of the contents of this Purana, we do not know whether it is the same as the Samba-p. or not.

The whole of the present Samba-p. is not metrical. There are portions which are written in prose (viz., in chaps 39, 41, 52, and so on). Chap. 44 is written in a sutra form.

We have already seen that the Samba-p. has borrowed verses from the Anusasana-parvan of the Mahabharata. It has also derived verses from the Bhagavad-gītā¹⁵⁰ and the Upanisads

Though, as we have already seen, the present Samba-p. in its original form was connected with Mitravana of the Punjab, it must have known the other two most prominent places of Sun-worship, viz., Kalapriya and Sutita. This is evidenced by the verse

"sāmnidhyam mama pūrvāhņe udite rajyate janah/, kālātyaye ca madhyāhne sāyāhne cātra nityasah//," (Sāmba-p. 26.14) which is a changed form of the original verse retained in Bhav. I. 129 16b-17a. That Sutīra was the same as Mundīra mentioned in the Bhavişya-p., Skanda-p. etc and was situated in Orissa, and that Kālapriya was situated on the bank of the Yamunā, will be evident from the following discussion.

According to Bhav. I. 72. 4-6 the three places of Sun-worship in Jambu-dvīpa are Muṇḍīra, Kālapriya and Mitravana, and it is only at Sāmbapura (in Mitravana) that the Sun resides permanently.¹⁸¹

Though the reading 'indravanam' occurs in the body of the text of our printed edition as well as in the Ms of the Bhavisya-p described by Aufrecht in his Bod Cat. (p. 31, foot-note 6), the reading 'mitravanam' is undoubtedly the

But in Bhav. I. 129. 16b-17a the Sun, speaking of Mitravana, says:

"sāmnidhyam mama pūrvāhņe sutīre draksyate janah/, kālapriye ca madhyāhne 'parāhņe cātra nityasah//,"

"People will ever see my proximity at Sutira in the forenoon, at Kālapriya at mid-day, and here in the afternoon". Thus in Bhav. I. 129. 16b-172 the names of the three places of the Sun are given as Sutira, Kālapriya and Mitravana. In Bhav. I. 189. 23-26 Pundira-svāmin, 188 Kālapriya and Mūlasthāna have been mentioned among the places which are said to be resorted to by gods and Siddhas; and in Bhav. I. 55. 27 Sundīrasvāmin, 188 Kālapriya and Mitravana are found mentioned among the holy places from which water should be collected for bathing the Sun's image in its annual worship. In Varāha-p. 177, in which the story of Sāmba's penance for the Sun's favour in order to get rid of leprosy caused by Kṛṣṇa's curse¹⁵⁴ has been narrated briefly with the mention of the 'Bhaviṣyat-purāṇa' as the source, Sāmba is said to have established three images of the Sun—one on the Udayā-cala, another, named Kālapriya, on the south of the Yamunā, and the correct one: because the name 'Mitravana' has been mentioned in a large number of verses in the Bhavisya-p., whereas there is no second mention of Indravana' anywhere in the whole Purana. Moreover, Skanda-p. VII. i. 100. 2b-3a, which reproduces the verse 'sthanani trini devasya' of the Bhavisya-p., reads 'mitravanam' and not 'indravanam'; and in the Samba-p, the name of the place is given as Mitravana in all cases.

Autrecht's Ms of the Bhavisya-p, reads 'mundaram' for 'mundiram'. But the evidences of the Skanda-p. (VIL i. 100. 3a and 139. 11a) and the Samba-p. (43. 41 and 53) show that the reading 'mundiram' is the correct one.

For the name 'Kālapriya' see Aufrecht's Ms of the Bhavişya-p., Varāha-p 177. 52, Skanda-p. VII. i. 139. 11b, and Bhav. I. 129. 172.

third, named Mülasthana, on the Astamanacala.185 So, from the Varāha-p. we get the names of the three places of Sun-worship as Udayācala, Kālapriya and Mūlasthāna. 188 According to Skanda-p. VII. 1. 139. 11-12a the Sun resided in the morning at Ganga-sagarasangama as Mundīrasvāmin; at mid-day he resorted to the bank of the Yamuna as Kalapriya, and in the evening he remained on the bank of the Candrabhāgā as Mūlasthāna.157 In Skanda-p. VI.76 also the names of the three places and forms of Bhaskara have been given as Mundīra, Kālapriya and Mūlasthāna, and it has been said that the Sun presents himself at Mundīra after the expiry of the night, at Kälapriya at mid-day, and at Mülasthäna at the approach of the night, that Mundîra is situated 'in the eastern part of the earth', Kälapriya ın its middle, and Mülasthana (in its western part) beyond Kalapriya, and that, while residing at Mundira and Kalapriya, the Sun is also known as Muṇḍīrasvāmın and Kālanātha (or Kālavallabha) respectively. 158 So, occording to the Skanda-p. the names of the three places of the Sun are Mundîra, Kālapriya and Mūlasthāna.

The use of the names Kālapriya and Mūlasthāna for the images of the Sun situated on the south of the Yamunā and on the Astamānācala respectively, need not confuse us. These names for the images must have been derived from the names of the places at which these images were situated. Similar instances of the use of place-names for those of the images are found in Varāha-p. 177. 54-56 (in which Sāmbapura is mentioned as the name of an image of the Sun at Mathurā), and Sāmba-p. 43. 39-41 (in which 'Mundīra' is said to be a name of the Sun's image established by Manus in the Sun's penance-forest on the shore of the salt-ocean)

tatra samkramate sūryo mundire rajani ksaye/
kālaprīye ca madhyāhne mūlasthāne ksapāgame//

As regards the position of these places, the Bhavisya and the Skanda-p. say that the Sun is close to Sutīra (or Mundīra according to the Skanda-p.) in the forenoon, to Kalapriya at mid-day, and to Mitravana (or Mulasthana according to the Skanda-p.) in the afternoon. 159 The Varaha-p. also contains clear references to the belief that the greatest benefit was derived by worshipping the rising Sun on the Udayacala, the mid-day Sun at Kalapriya, and the setting Sun at Mūlaschāna, 160 Hence it is evident that Mundira, Sutira and Udayācala were situated in the eastern part of India, Kālapriya in the middle, and Mitravana and Mülasthana in its western part, Now, Mūlasthāna (literally meaning 'original place'), which is said in the Skanda-p. (VII. i. 139. 122) to have been situated on the bank of the Candrabhaga and in the Padma-p. to have been the abode of Samba and which is mentioned in Bhav. I. 189. 24-25 along with Pundirasvamin and Kalapriya, must be the same as Mitravana (in the Punjab)161 which is said to be the adya-sthana (original place) of the 161 For the identification of Mitravana with Mulasthana (modern Multan) in the Punjab, see Bhandarkar, Vaisnavism etc., p. 154, Farquhar, Outline of the Religious Literature of India, p. 152, N. L. De, Geographical Dictionary of Ancient and Mediaeval India, pp. 133-4; and so on Sun in a number of places both in the Bhavisya and the Sāmba-p., and Kālapriya was evidently situated on the southern bank of the Yamunā, as the Varāha and the Skanda-p. show. So, the problems, which remain to be solved, are whether Mundīra, Sutīra and Udayācala are identical, and where we are to locate the place or places bearing these names.

We have already seen that in its two lists of the names of the three prominent places of Sun-worship in Jambu-dvīpa the Bhavisya-p. mentions 'Mundīra' in the one (viz, I. 72 4) but replaces it by 'Sutīra' in the other (viz., I 129. 16b). So, according to the Bhavisya-p. Mundīra and Sutīra are identical. This identification is supported by the Sāmba-p. (chaps. 42-43) which informs us that the 'beautiful' (ramya) penance-forest of the Sun (in Orissa) was situated on the 'shore' (tīra) of the salt-ocean (lavanodadhi), that the sight of the rising Sun there was deemed highly meritorious, and that the Sun's image, which was established there by Manus, was given a name 'Mundīra'. 163 So, Sutīra (literally meaning 'beautiful shore') must be another name for Muṇdīra, which, again, must be very close to, or even identical with, Konārka 164 situated on the sea-shore very close to the river Candrabhāgā (a branch of the river Prācī in Orissa). In Sāmba-p., chaps. 42-43 the Sun's penance-forest on the sea-shore

164 Though the name 'Konārka' does not occur in the Bhavisya-p., the Sun is called 'kona-vallabha' in Bhav I 153. 50 So, it seems that in later times Mundīra came to be known as Konārka because of its position in the north-east corner (kona) with respect to Puri (See Mano Mohan Ganguly, Orissa and Her Remains, p 437)

(in Orissa) has been called Sūrya-kānana, Ravi-kṣetra and Sūrya-kṣetra and once Mitravana; in the Kapila-saṃhitā Konārka has been called Maitreya Vana and Ravi-kṣetra; and in Brahma-p., chaps. 28-32 the place (kṣetra) of Koṇāditya or Koṇārka in Utkala (or Odradeśa) is called 'sūryasya kṣetram' (28. 10), 'raveḥ kṣetram' (28. 17), 'savituḥ kṣetram' (28. 62) and 'bhāskarasya kṣetram' (29. 1), Mitravana, situated on the bank of the Candra-sarit, has been identified with this holy place of the Sun, and the Sun's devotees, attending this place, are directed to worship the rising Sun there with the three-syllabled mantra. 167

By its mention that in the morning the Sun remained at Gangasagara-sangama as Mundirasvamın, the Skanda-p. (VII, 1. 139. 11) appears to disprove the above identification of Mundira with the Sun's penance-forest (called Mitravana) in Orissa, because the word 'gangasagara-sangama' is generally used to mean the place where the Bhagirathi falls into the sea. But the Bhavisya-p., which mentions Gangā-dvāra, Gangā-sāgara (i.e. the mouth of the Bhagirathi), Kalapriya, Mitravana and Sundīrasvāmin (which must be a mistake for Mundīrasvāmin) in its list of different holy places and rivers to be named during the bathing of the Sun's image in its annual worship,168 shows clearly that Mundirasvamın and Ganga-sagara (the mouth of the Bhagirathi) do not refer to the same place. So, the word 'gangasagara-sangama', as occurring in Skanda-p. VII. i. 139. 11, must be taken to mean the place where the river Candrabhaga (a branch of the river Prācî in Orissa) falls into the sea, because in the Purāṇas all rivers which flow into the sea are called 'Ganga'.169 Or, it may mean the mouth of the Sūrya-gaogā, which is mentioned in the Kapilasamhitä as one of the holy places and rivers in Arkaksetta. In the

Padma-p. (Pātāla-khaṇḍa) there is mention of a Gangā-sāgara-saṅgama near Purusottama-kṣetra (modern Puri). 170

As regards Udayācala, we are not absolutely sure whether it is the same as the Udayagiri in Orissa, because, in his Kathā-sarit-sāgara Somadeva mentions an Udayādri, the abode of Siddhas (siddha-ksetra), as situated much farther east from Paunḍravardhana (most probably beyond Kāmarūpa),¹⁷¹ and in their description of Kūrma-saṃsthāna, the Mārkandeya-p. (chap. 58) and the Bṛhat-saṃhitā (chap. 14) mention Prāgjyotiṣa, Lauhitya, Udayagiri, Paunḍra etc. as situated in the east. But the Kālikā-p., which names the holy places, mountains, rivers, lakes and pools in and about Kāmarūpa, including the Ravikṣetra (Sun's place)¹⁷² lying between the river Sumadanā on the west and the Brahma-kṣetra on the east and containing a temple of the Sun, is silent about any Udayācala in or near Kāmarūpa, although it mentions a mountain called Samdhyācala of that locality. So, the Udayācala of the Varāha-p. is most probably to be taken to be the same as the Udayagiri in Orissa.

The great popularity of the story of Sāmba as the antiquated founder of the Sun-temple and the Sun's image at Mitravana (in the Punjab) tempted the people of different parts of India to connect their own Sun-temples and Sun-images with Sāmba as the founder. Thus, Skanda-p. VII. 1. 100 says that Sāmba established an image of the Sun, named Sāmbāditya, in Prabhāsa-kṣetra, and that the place at which this image was established was called Sāmbaputa; according to Skanda-p. VII. 1. 139. 22 the Sun was called Sāmba at Vardhamāna

¹⁷¹ Kathāsarītsāgara, pp. 67-69 The Vidūsaka, who went to the Udayādrī successively through Tāmralipta, Karkotaka and Paundravardhana in search of the Vidyādharī princess named Bhadrā, is said to have travelled over 60 yojanas of difficult (durgama) country, crossed the Sītodā, a river that cannot be crossed by mortals, and reached the border of the mountain of the rising Sun.

¹⁷² Kālikā-p. 81. 39-53.

(vardhamāne ca sāmbākhyaṃ); in the Brahma-p. the Sun's image, called Koṇāditya, at Konārka is said to have been established by Sāmba; and so on. It is for this reason that in Skanda-p. VII. i. 100 the third important place, except Mitravana and Mundīra, of Sunworship in Jambu-dvīpa is called Sāmbapura, the place of Sāmbāditya, in Prabhāsa-kṣetra, and not Kālapriya.

The names of Mundīra, Kālapriya, and Mitravana (in the Punjab) as prominent places of Sun-worship were known to the original author of the Sāmba-p. as well as to the interpolator of chaps, 42-43, 172 but the latter was so anxious for adding to the importance of Mitravana in Orissa that he eliminated the lines from chap. 3 and distorted those original verses of the Samba-p. which contained, or referred to, the names of these prominent places of Sun-worship, in order that Mitravana in Orissa might be regarded as the only sacred place of the Sun.

sthānāni trīņi devasya dvīpe 'smin bhāskarasya tu/ pūrvam mitravanam nāma tathā muṇḍīram ucyate/ kālapriyam tṛtīyam tu triṣu lokeṣu viśrutam//

From what has been said above it is clear that the Magian Sunworship spread at least as far as Orissa even before the time of composition of the present Samba-p

CHAPTER III

THE MAJOR VAISNAVA UPAPURĀNAS

In this chapter we shall analyse three Upapurāṇas, viz., Visnudharma, Visnudharmottara and Narasimha-purāna. All these works come from early dates and enjoy very wide reputation as respectable authorities on Dharma. The other Vaiṣnava Upapurānas, now extant, are of comparatively late origin and limited or localised authority. Those of these works, which have been available to us, will be dealt with in the next chapter.

The term 'Vaiṣṇava', as used here, is comprehensive and includes both the Pāncarātra and the Bhāgavata works. A study of the Satapatha-brāhmana, the Upaniṣads, the Pāncarātra Saṃhitās, and the Mahābhārata indicates that the Pāncarātra system originated at a very early period, preached the worship of the post-Vedic deity Nārāyana,¹ and had non-Vedic, and probably also anti-Vedic, ideas and practices. In the Nārāyanīya section of the Mahābhārata,² which is the earliest document of the Pāncarātras, it is said that the seven Citra-śikhandin Rsis, namely, Marīci, Atri, Angiras, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu and Vasiṣṭha, procaimed jointly, on the mount Meru, an excellent 'Sāstra' which was on a par (samīta) with the four Vedas and contained one lac of verses,³ and that, being meant for the populace and their guidance both in activity (pravrtti) and inactivity (nivṛtti), this 'Sāstra'

According to R G Bhandarkar, Nārāyana is 'the cosmic and philosophic god'.—Bhandarkar, Vaisnavism etc., p 35 See also S K De in Our Heritage, Vol. I (1953), pp. 13-23.

The facts that in the Mahābhārata the Pāñcarātra system is differentiated from the Vedic (Mbh XII 349. r and 64), that the Sāstra, written by the seven Citra-sikhandin Rsis on the mount Meru is said to have been made consistent with the four Vedas (Mbh XII 335 40), and that this Sāstra was meant for the populace (Mbh XII 335 39 and 29), tend to indicate the popular origin of Nārāyana. Also Mrinal Dasgupta, Early Visnuism and Nārāyanīya Worship, IHQ, VII, pp. 346-79 was made consistent with the four Vedas.4 Although at present we have got no decisive evidence at our disposal to prove the actual compilation of any ancient Sastra jointly by the seven sages mentioned above, the very statement that the scripture was meant for the common run of people and made to conform to the four Vedas, is important and implies the originally non-Vedic, and probably also anti-Vedic, ideas and practices of the early Pancaratras. The Mahabharata itself differentiates the Pancaratra system from the Vedic, saying "Know, O saintly king, the Sāmkhya, the Yoga, the Pāñcarātra, the Vedas and the Pasupata as knowledges holding different views." It has been held by some scholars that the above-mentioned 'Sastra' compiled by the seven sages was the forerunner of the Pancaratra Samhitas. But this view is hardly tenable. The prescriptions of the early Samhitas of the Pancaratras are not at all favourable to the Varnasramadharma and the Vedas; on the other hand, the influence of the Varnāśrama-dharma on the Pāñcarātra Samhitās increases gradually with their comparatively late dates. So, it is more reasonable to hold that the original non-Vedic as well as anti-Vedic ideas of the Pancaratras were permeated through the Samhitas, while the seven sages' spirit of reconciling their views with the Vedas found its later expression in the epics, Puranas and similar other pro-Vedic sectarian works.

In spite of its originally indifferent, and probably also irreverent, attitude towards the Vedas and the Varnāśrama-dharma, the Pāńcarātra system came to be connected even in the later Brāhmanic period with the sacrificial religion of the Vedas; and in later times it identified Nārāyana with Viṣnu and was affiliated to the more popular worship of Kṛṣṇa-Vāsudeva through the doctrine of Vyūha ⁸ This modified state of the Pāñcarātra system is found in the extant Pāñcarātra Saṃ-hitās, on the one hand, and in the Mahābhārata and the Purānas, on the other. In the last two classes of works, which betray the hands of Smārta adherents of the types of Anāptas, Ārambhins and Saṃpra-vartins mentioned in the Jayākhya-samhitā, ⁹ an attempt has been made to make the system conform to the Varnāśrama-dharma as well as to the principles of Sāṃkhya and Vedānta.

Among the Smārta Pāncarātras there must have been different groups believing in, and adoring, the different manifestations of Nārāyaṇa (Visnu). It was probably the members of these groups who, being inspired by a sense of high regard for the Vedas and the Varṇāśrama-dharma, compiled Purānic works bearing the names of the different manifestations such as Matsya, Kūrma, Varāha, Narasimha, Vāmana, etc.

In comparatively late periods, a large section of people threw Nārāyana into the background, looked upon Krṣṇa-Vāsudeva as the object of their devotion, and began to add great importance to his character as a cowherd. They made him the Supreme Being by identifying him with Viṣṇu, often ignored the doctrine of Vyūha, and laid great stress on love and emotional bhakti as means of realising this Supreme Being. These people and their followers took Kṛṣṇa-Vāsudeva to be the Bhagavat and came to be known as Bhāgavatas. In order to propagate their own faith, the Smārta Bhāgavatas wrote several Purāṇic works, in all of which juvenile Kṛṣṇa of Vṛndāvana figures prominently.

It should be mentioned here that as both the Pancaratras and the Bhagavatas believed deeply in the doctrine of ahimsa (non-killing), their ideas became the subject-matter of many of the Purānic works, which were meant for saving the Vedic religion especially from the onslaught of Buddhism, Jainism and other non-Vedic and anti-Vedic religious systems. The identification of Nārāyana and Kṛṣṇa-Vāsudeva with Vṛṣṇu connected the systems of the Pāñcarātras and the Bhāga-vatas closely with the Vedic ideas and made them favourable for the establishment of the Varṇāśramadharma and the authority of the Vedas. It was most probably for this reason that in later times even Tantric Sāktism had to be infused with Vaisṇava ideas.

The tradition of compilation of a 'Sastra' by reconciling the sectarian views with the Vedic ones, which is said to have been set up by the seven Citra-sikhandin Rsis on the mount Meru, does not appear to have died out or failed in inspiring people of later ages to compose similar works for the popularisation of the Vedic views of life and conduct. With the rise and spread of Buddhism, Jainism and other non-Vedic and anti-Vedic religious faiths, the protagonists of the Vedic way of life must have been actively busy in devising ways and means for creating a favourable field for the Vedas in popular mind. As a matter of fact, during the few centuries preceding and following the beginning of the Christian era the Smarta adherents to leading sectarian faiths such as Vaisnava, Saiva, Saura, etc. compiled a number of works entitled 'Visnudharma', 'Sivadharma', 'Sauradharma', and so on, which were neither Puranas nor Smrtis but were 'Sastras' prescribing religious and other duties to the respective sectaties in consonance with the teachings of the Vedas. The early rise of these 'Sastras' is evidenced by the Bhavisya-p., in which Sumantu is found to explain the term 'Jaya' to king Satānīka, saying:

"aṣṭādaśa-purāṇāni rāmasya carītaṃ tathā / viṣṇudharmādī-śāstrāṇi śivadharmāś ca bhārata // kārṣṇaṃ ca pañcamo vedo yan mahābhāratam smṛtam / saurāś ca dharmā rājendra mānavoktā mahīpate //
jayeti nāma caiteṣāṃ pravadanti manīṣinaḥ //"10

These verses, which have been quoted in Krtya-kalpataru, I, p 25, Caturvarga-cintāmaṇi, I, pp. 19-20, Krtya-ratnākara, p, 30. Nityācāra-pradipa, I, p. 22 (omitting the fifth line), Smrti-tattva, I, p. 71, Viramitrodaya, Panbhāṣā-prakāsa, p. 17, and so on, are much the same as Bhav. I. 4. 87b-89.

"The eighteen Purāṇas as well as the biography of Rāma; the Viṣṇudharma and other Sāstras, and the Sivadharmas, O descendant of Bharata; the fifth Veda which is known as the Mahābhārata compiled by Kṛṣna (Dvaipāyana); and the Saura Dharmas declared by Mānava, O paramount ruler, the lord of the earth;—the name 'Jaya'11 for (all) these the learned declare."

In another place of the same Purāna king Satānīka is found to put the following question to Sumantu:

"bhagavan kena vidhinā śrotavyam bhāratam naraiḥ /, caritaṃ rāmabhadrasya purānāni višeṣatah //, kathaṃ tu vaisnavā dharmāh śivadharmā aśeṣataḥ /, saurānām cāpi viprendra ucyatāṃ śravane vidhih //,"12

"In what way, O venerable one, are the Bhārata, the biography of Rāmabhadra, and especially the Purāṇas, to be heard by men, and how, again, the Vaiṣṇava Dharmas and the Sivadharmas in their entirety? (Kindly) tell (me), O chief of Brahmins, the procedure of hearing (the Dharmas) of the Sauras also."

It is hardly necessary to say that in these verses of the Bhavişya-p. definite works on the religious duties (Dharma) on Viṣṇu, Siva, Śūrya and other deities have been meant, and that these works were entitled 'Viṣṇudharma', Śivadharma', 'Sauradharma' and so on.

In the extant Visnudharma (chap. 1) Saunaka gives a tradition, according to which the topics of this work were spoken out by Brahmā to Bhṛgu, Marīci and other sages, by Bhṛgu to Uśanas, by Uśanas to Saunaka's grandfather, by the latter to Saunaka's father, and by Saunaka's father to Saunaka. The present Sivadharmottara, 15 which claims to be the latter part of the Sivadharma, says in its concluding

The Bhavisya-p reads 'visnudharmādayo dharmāh' (for 'visnudharmādiśāstrām' in the first half of the second line) and 'nāradoktāh' (for 'mānavoktāh' in the second half of the fourth line) and gives the alternative reading 'śrautāh' (for 'saurāh' in the first half of the fourth line). It is needless to say that the reading 'śrautāh' (for 'saurāḥ') is wrong. Cf, Bhav. I. 216. 37 quoted hereinafter

- II It means '(the cause of) victory or prosperity.'
- 12 Bhav. I 216. 36-37.
- 13 This Saiva 'Sastra', which still exists in Mss, will be examined in another Volume of the present work chapter that originally this work was spoken out by Kumāra to the sage Agasti in 12000 verses and that the latter spoke out its essence briefly in twelve chapters. The Sivadharma also states that it was originally spoken out by Siva to Pārvatī, Ṣanmukha, Nandikeśvara and others. So, there is little scope for doubt that Sāstras bearing the titles 'Viṣṇudharma', 'Sivadharma', 'Sauradharma', etc. had been compiled even before the rise of the extant texts of the same titles.

A new situation arose in the country with the unprecedented spread and popularity of Buddhism during the reign of Asoka Maurya In the few centuries following the death of this great emperor Buddhism grew up to be the most powerful rival of Hinduism and gave incentives to the compilation of the present Visnudharma, in which the atheists, especially the Buddhists, have been denounced on many occasions. This work was followed at intervals by the compilation of the present Visnudharmottara, Sivadharma and Sivadharmottara. The Sauradharma (which, as the quotations from it in the Smṛti Nibandhas show, was spoken out by Vasiṣṭha and might consequently be different from that declared by Mānava or Nārada) and the Sauradharmottara (drawn upon by the Nibandha-writers) also must have belonged to this period; but they appear to have been lost, no Ms of any of them having been found as yet.

We have already seen that in a verse of the Bhavisya-p. the Visnudharma has been called a 'Sastra'. The extant Visnudharma also gives itself out to be a 'Sastra' in two places and not a 'Purana',

'Upapurana' or 'Smrti' even once.17. Consequently, scholars have been divided in their opinion regarding the true character of this work. For instance, on the strength of the said verse of the Bhavisya-p. Laksmīdhara takes the Visņudharma to be a 'Sāstra' and includes it among the Smrti works,18 and his opinion is followed in very much the same words by Candesvara, Narasımha Vajapeyin, Mitra Miśra and others.10 Vallālasena calls the Visnudharma a 'Sāstra' (śāstram ca visnudharmākhyam), which is taken as different from the epics, Purānas and Smrti Samhitās.20 Hemādri also seems to be of the same opinion as Vallalasena, his authorities being the said verse of the Bhavisya-p. and another ascribed to the Saura-p.21 On the other hand, most of the lists of eighteen Upapuranas include the name of the 'Sivadharma', thus giving wide recognition to this work as an Upapurana in spite of the fact that it frequently calls itself a 'Sastra' and once a 'Sıvātmaka Dharmaśāstra'.22 As regards the Visnudharma, it may be said that the Brhaddharma-p 23 names it in its list of eighteen Upapuranas and that, as we shall see presently, the Visnudharmottara was taken by many to be a Purāna or Upapurāna. In all the catalogues of Sanskrit Mss both the Visnudharma and the Visnudharmottara have been classed with the Puranas. Consequently, we have thought it desirable to look upon the Visnudharma as an Upapurānic work and not as a mere 'Sāstra'.

- 22 In most of the chapter-colophons of the present Stradharma the name 'Stradharma-śāstra' occurs. For the name 'Stratmaka Dharmaśāstra' see the line 'uktam ca dvādaśādhyāyam dharma-śāstraṃ śtrātmakam' occurring in chap. 12 (fol 39a).
- 23 We shall see afterwards that this work was written in Bengal most probably in the last half of the thirteenth century A D.

As to the character of the Viṣṇudharmottara a similar confusion arose among scholars on account of the facts that this work, as its title shows, professes to be the latter pare of the Viṣnudharma and that its claim has been clearly put forth in two of its verses, in which the Viṣnudharma and the Viṣṇudharmottara have been taken to form one complete work known by the general title 'Viṣnudharma'. It is most probably due to this alleged unity of these two works that Alberūnī considered both of them to be one and made his citations from the Viṣṇudharmottara under the name of 'Viṣṇudharma', that Smṛti-writers are often found to ascribe verses of the Viṣṇudharmattara to the Viṣṇudharma and vice versa, and that in some Mss the Viṣṇudharma has been called 'Viṣṇudharmottara.' In his Nityācāra-pradīpa Narasiṃha Vājapeyin regards the Viṣṇudharmottara as a 'ṣāstra' and as a part of the Viṣṇudharma, and supports his view by citations from the Bhaviṣya-p. and the Viṣṇudharmottara. So,

On the other hand, verses really belonging to the Visnudharma have been wrongly ascribed to the Visnudharmottara in Kālanirnapa, pp. 200-201, 202, 210 etc., Kālasāra, p. 151, and so on.

It can hardly be denied that such wrong ascription of verses is partly due to scribal mistakes

26 See foot-note 36 below
As a matter of fact, R L Mitra and J. Eggeling confuse the Visnudharma with the Visnudharmottara, taking these two works to be one.

Narasımlıa Vajapeyin is clearly not in favour of recognising the Visnudharmottara as a Puranic work. Mitra Miśra also does not include this work among the Purānas, although he takes it to be 'as authoritative as a Purana'28. According to Alberuni the Visnudharmottaga (named by him as 'Visnudharma') is a 'book' (and not a 'Purana') on 'the religion of God who in this case is understood to be Nārāyana'29 The present Kālıkā-p. (92.2) calls the Visnudharmottara a 'tantra'. Except in only one most-probably-spurious verse, 30 nowhere does the Visnudharmottara claim, in the body of its text, to be known as a 'Purana' or 'Upapurana'. On the other hand, Vallālasena calls the Visnudharma a 'Sāstra' but seems to look upon the Visnudharmottara as an Upapurāna, 11 the Brhadharma-p. (I. 25. 25) regards the Visnudharmottara as distinct from the Visnudharma and includes both of these works in its list of Upapuranas; the Caturvarga-cintāmaņi once names the Vișnudharmottara as 'Vișnudharmottara-purāna';32 in the final colophons of some of the Mss of the Visnudharmottara the name 'Visnudharmottara-purana' occuts.33 the Naradiya-p. (I. 94. 17b-20) says that the Visnu-p. consists of two parts-the Visnu-p. proper (forming the first part-adi-bhaga) and the Visnudharmottara; in the final colophons of its Khandas the printed Visnudharmottara calls itself the second part (dvitiya-bhaga) of the Visnu-mahāpurāna;34 in his Vidhāna-pārijāta, I, pp. 245 and 419 Anantabhatta quotes Visnudh. II. 52. 47-52a and II. 52. 110ff. respectively with the words 'tatra padma-purane visnudharmottarakhande parasurāmam prati (p. 419-āha) puşkarah', in which the Visnudharmottara has been taken to be a part of the Padma-p.; in the final colophons of some of its Mss the Viṣṇudharmottara has been connected with the Garuda-p.; 25 and so on. From all these it appears that originally the Visnudharmottara was not regarded as a Purana. But in course of time its Puranic form and character encouraged people to include it among the Puranic works, and the result was that some took it to be an Upapurana, while others attached it, as a part, to one or other of the Mahapuranas.

The above discussion explains our attitude towards the Visnudharma and the Viṣṇudharmottara. We shall now analyse the individual Upapurāņas.

salutation, in a single verse, to Vyasa, son of Parasara, this work describes the occasion of the narration of its subject-matter as follows.

Once Saunaka and other sages came to see king Satānīka, son of (Janamejaya) Päriksita, after the latter's coronation had been over. Satānīka received these sages with due honour and requested them to favour him with the best discourses on Narayana (i.e. Krsna), through whose grace his ancestors could recover their lost kingdom and the life of his grandfather Pariksit was saved from the deadly weapon hurled by Drona's son (Asvatthiman). He described Nārāyana as eternal and boundless and as one who gave birth to Rudra from his rage and to Pitamaha from his grace. He then expressed his desire for hearing the ways, secret Mantras, service, gifts, vows, fasts or Homas, by which Hari might be worshipped for getting over the miseries of life. Being highly pleased with Satanīka's devotion for the god the sages praised Saunaka as a rich store-house of all knowledge and as a lamp for dispelling all darkness of doubt in the three worlds and regested him to speak to Satānīka about Kṛṣṇa-Nārāyana. Consequently, after briefly explaining the process of origin of the universe from the Supreme Being, who appeared, for the sake of creation, as Pradhāna and Purusa by līlā and also became Brahmā, Viṣnu and Rudra by fancy (chandatah), Saunaka referred to the tradition of inheritruce of all these topics from Brahmā³ and narrated the following story:

Once Bramā spoke to Marīci and others about the highest type of Yoga which is capable of leading one to Kawalya by effecting the complete cessation of the functions of the mind (simasta-vitti-samro-dhāt kaivalya-pratipādakam). But as success in this kind of Yoga requires strenuous efforts extending over many births and as it is often found that one fails to control the organs of senses and to get over their objects (visaya) even in a hundred lives, Marīci and others requested the god to speak to them on some easier method of Yoga which could be practised with success even by a common man in a short period of time. Consequently, Brahmā spoke on Kriyā-yoga which consists in the constant propitiation of Nārāyaṇa (i. e. Kṛṣna) by sacrifice, worship, salutation, service, observance of vows and fasts, gratification of Brahmins, and other acts. Saunaka said that on the basis of Brahmā's instructions Marīci and other sages compiled treatises (śāstra) on Kriyā-yoga for the good of the people.—(Chap. 1).

Next, going to speak on this Kriyā-yoga, which liberates people from bondage, Saunaka narrated the story of king Ambarīsa thus:

Being desirous of bringing the duals (dvandva) to an end through Visnu's favour, king Ambatīsa practised austerities with great devotion. Visnu was pleased, but he would not favour the king without putting him to test. He appeared before the latter in the form of Indra, gave himself out to be the god of gods ruling over the Adityas, Vasus, Rudras, Nāsatyas, Maruts, Prajāpatis, Sādhyas, Viśvedevas and others, and asked the king to choose a boon. But the latter made it clear to him that he was not eager for having anything from Indra but was trying to please Visnu who ensured prosperity to Indra by killing Hıranyakşa, Hıranyakasıpu and other demons, by recovering his kingdom from Balı, and by various other acts, and who was the creator, protector and destructor of the universe and the source of origin of the gods forming the triad. At these words of the king Visnu, in the form of Indra, pretended to be enraged and threatened the king with his thunder-weapon. But the latter pleaded innocent and remained unmoved. His unswerving devotion pleased Visnu so much that the god revealed himself in his real form, in which he has four hands and wears yellow clothes, and spoke briefly to the king on the best system of Yoga which is 'nirbīja' and ends all miseries of life for ever (nirbījam atyanta-duḥkha-samyoga-bhesajam). But as this type of Yoga was too difficult for the king, he requested Visnu to tell him about such Yoga as could be practised by people like himself. Consequently, Vışnu spoke of Kriya-yoga which puts a stop to all sufferings of life (kleśa) and advised the king to be devoted to him heart and soul, to worship him constantly with flowers and other things as well as with the offer of highly valuable articles of gold, silver, etc., to think of him incessantly, and to see him everywhere and in all beings. Next, being requested by the king to speak elaborately on this Kriyayoga, Viṣṇu (called 'Keśava') referred him to his priest (purohita) Vasiṣṭha, who, he said, would tell him about it through his favour. Viṣṇu then disappeared; and the king returned to his capital. (— Chap. 2). There he met Vasiṣṭha, intimated to him what Viṣṇu had said, and requested him to speak on Kriyā-yoga concerning Viṣnuworship. Vasiṣṭha narrated the story of Prahlāda thus:

Once Prahlada, a devotee of Narayana, told his high-priest Sukra, the chief of the Bhrgus, that he found in the body of Nrsimha all the three worlds as well as the gods, goddesses and Pitts, and requested him to describe the method of worshipping this deity. Sukra said that if he really desired to worship 'Visnu, the lord of gods', he was to become a Bhagavata, because no mortal other than a Bhagavata is able to know Visnu rightly, or to eulogise him, or to see him, not to speak of merging in him. 38 Sukra then spoke on the characteristics and praise of Bhagavatas (who respect the Brahmins and the Veda, practise ahimsa, have their minds absorbed in Visnu in many of their births, and are far superior to the performers of Tapas or austerity and of costly sacrifices), worship of Visnu in images with the offer of flowers, lamps etc., construction of temples for him, and signing of songs, recitation of hymns, and sounding of musical instruments during his worship. (-Chap. 3). Next, after defining 'upavāsa' (fasting) and pointing out its benefits, Sukra reproduced what Pulastya had said to Dalbhya in ancient times on the following topics:

It should be mentioned that the Visnudharma adds great importance to fasting in Visnu-worship and prescribes it especially to females of a number of Vaisnava vows and worships,⁴¹ some of which were described by way of reporting the dialogues of others;⁴² Krsna's speech to Arjuna on his own identity with Kāla and unity with Arjuna, and also on the names of the principal holy places⁴³ in which Kṛṣna is to be worshipped under particular names (—Chaps. 35-36); description of 41 Viz., Sugati-dvādašī-vrata (in which 'Krsna' is to be worshipped and meditated upon, and his name to be repeated)—chap 4; Eka-bhakta-vrata, Dvādaša-māsika-krsnāstamī-vrata (in which 'Krsna' is to be worshipped), Kulā-vāpti-dvādašī-vrata (alias Sukla-dvādašī-vrata, said to have been described to Bharata by his mātāmaha Kanva), Vijaya-dvādašī-vrata, Jayanty-astamī-vrata, Atijayaikādašī-vrata, and Visnu-snapana-vrata (—chaps. 6-12 respectively), Pusya-rksaikādašī-vrata, Pada-dvaya-vrata, Manoratha-dvādašī-vrata, and Ašoka-pūrnamāsī-vrata (—chaps 17-20 respectively), Naraka-dvādašī-vrata—chap. 24, Tila-dvādašī-vrata—chap. 34, Sukrta-dvādašī-vrata—chap. 37, Ašūnya-šayana-dvitiyā-vrata—chap 41.

40 Viz., worship of the deity with fragrant flowers and other things, especially with fast, sweeping, washing, and besmearing of Visnu-temples with earth, cow-dung, substances of metallic preparation (? dhātu-vikāra), and so on; offer of flowers, lamps, pots of sesamum, flags, and other things; narration of sanctifying stories; praise of Visnu as the highest god worshipped by Indra, women, Vaikhānasas, Parivrājakas, and others.

Worship of Visnu and his wife under the names of Janardana and Laksmi, Sridhara and Sri, and Kesava and Bhüti in the four months beginning respectively with Phalguna, Asadha and Karttika (chap 5), Māsa-rksa-pūjā (chap. 27).

- 42 Pulastya reproduced the dialogues in which
- (1) Yājñavalkya spoke to Maitreyī on Manoratha-sampatti-kāraka-vrata (chap 13), Samprāpti-dvādašī-vrata (chap 14), Govinda-dvādašī-vrata (chap. 15), and Akhanda-dvādašī-vrata (chap. 16),
- (11) Samkara spoke to Devi on Sobhana-pati-prāpti-vrata (chap. 21) and Strī-dharma-vrata (chap. 22),
 - (111) Vasistha spoke to Arundhati on Naksatra-purusa-vrata (chap. 29),
- (1v) Maitreyi spoke to Siladhanā (a sonless queen of Krtavīrya, the Haihaya king) on Ananta-vrata (chap. 30).
- 43 These are as follows Puskara, Gayā, Lohadanda, Citrakūta, Prabhāsa, Vrndāvana, Jayantī, Hastināpura, Kardamāla, Kasmīra (?), Kubjāmra, Mathurā, Kubjaka, Gangādvāra, Sālagrāma, Govardhanācala, Pindāraka, Sankhoddhāra, Kuruksetra, Yamunā, Sona, Pūrva-sāgara (kapilam pūrva-sāgare—fol. 68b), Gangā-sāgara-samgama, Devikā-nadī, Prayāga, Vadarikāsrama, Daksina Samudra, Dvārakā, Mahendrādri, Arvuda, Asvatīrtha, Himācala, Krtasauca, Vipāsā, Naimisa, Jambūmārga, Saindhavāranya, Dandaka, Utpalāvartaka, Narmadā, Raivataka, Nandā, Sindhu-sāgara-samgama, Sahyādri, Māgadha Vana, Vindhya, Odra (odre tu purusottamam—fol. 69a).

The corresponding chapter in ASB Ms No. 3506 contains in fol 61a a few more names such as Kusvāmādhya (?), Nepāla, Mandodapāna, Kiskindhyā, Kāśi, Viśākhayūpa, Virajā, etc. In this Ms Lohadanda has been named as Loladanda, Kasmīra as Kahlāra (?), and Māgadha Vana as Mādhava Vana.

hells in which sinners are punished for various sins, viz., adultery, killing of cows and women, denouncement of Viṣṇu and the Brahmins, and so on (chap. 23); description and denouncement of Pāṣandas, and the atonements for seeing or touching them or for speaking with them (chap. 25); enunciation of the Apāmārjana, which allays the troubles caused by malevolent rites (viz., abhicāras and kṛtyās), poison, evil Grahas, all kinds of fever and other diseases, and so on; method and praise of besmearing Viṣṇu-temples with earth, cow-dung etc. and of presenting lamps there (chaps. 31-32); glorification of gods, Brahmins, Vedas and sacrifices, and denouncement of those who decry them (chap. 33); eulogy of Viṣṇu with the mention of his exploits in different incarnations (chap. 39); muttering of the different circumstances (chap. 40); statement of the causes of rebirths and release (chap. 42)

After listening to the dialogue between Pulastya and Dālbhya Satānīka requested Saunaka to speak on Dharma as described by Krsna to Yudhiṣṭhira. Consequently, Saunaka reported the statements made by Kṛṣṇa on the following subjects: the names of the authors of the Dharma-saṃhirās; ⁴⁵ hells, and gifts of shoes, mules, clothes and other articles to Brahmins for escaping these (chap. 45); glorification of Brahmins as well as of service and gifts made to them (chap. 46), praise of practice of various restraints, such as silence, sacrifice, celibacy, nonkilling, living on roots, fruits or leaves, fasting, lying on the ground, entrance into fire, and so on (chap. 47); description and praise of gifts of paddy, fuel, virgin girls (for marriage in the Brāhma form), gold, cows, footwears etc. to Brahmins, especially to one widely learned in the Vedas-bahuśruta (chaps. 48, 53 and 58-60), enumeration of sixteen cases (including those of such Brahmins as are priests of villages, husbands of Sūdra wives, sellers of the Veda, snake-catchers, and hen-pecked husbands) in which gifts, made, become unproductive (chap. 49); results of insulting or respecting a Brahmin (chap. 50); praise of a Brahmin who regularly repeats the Gayatrī (chap. 51); praise of tapas (austerity) and satya (truth), and denouncement of anrta (untruth) (chaps. 54 and 55); fasting and observance of the Eka-bhakta-vrata in different months (chap. 56); elevation and lowering of caste caused respectively by the due performance of one's own Dharma and by neglect of it (chap. 57); praise of fighting bravely and courting death in the battle-field; principles of war (samgrāma-prasamsā-chap. 61); praise of avoiding meat and practising ahimsā (chap. 62).

- 44 In chap 28 there are the names of a large number of diseases caused by any of the three humours of the body, viz., wind (vāta), bile (pitta) and phlegm (kapha), various kinds of poison, different classes of Grahas such as Preta-grahas, Dākinī-grahas, Vetāla-grahas, Gandharvas, Yaksa-rāksasas, Vināyakas, Bāla-grahas, and so on.
- 45 Viz., those of Manu, Vasistha, Parāšara, Ātreya, Gārgya, Šankha, Likhta, Yama, Jāvāli, Dvaipāyana, Umā-Mahešvara (umā-mahešvarāš caiva jāti-dhamāš ca pāvanāh—fol 89a), Kāšyapa, Bahvāyana, Šakuli, Agastya, Mudgala, Šāndil)a, Bhrgu, Angiras, Kašyapa, Uddālaka, Sumantu, Paulastya, Vaišampāyana, Pišamgama, Indra, Varuna, Kuvera, Āpastamba, Gopālaka, Sūrya, Hārīta, Yājñavalkya, the seven sages (saptarsayah), and others.

The verse containing the names of Umā-Maheśvara and Kāśyapa does not occur in ASB Ms No. 3506.

Saunaka then reported

- 1. Nārāyana's speech to Yudhışthıra on the science of government (daṇḍa-nīti, including the divinity and duties of a king, necessity of daṇḍa, and punishment for different kinds of crimes—chap. 63), praise of devotion to Viṣṇu (chap. 64), and incarnations of Viṣṇu including the Buddha (chap. 66);
- 2. Bhīṣma's statement to Yudhisthira on remembering Viṣnu and muttering his names for allaying the effects of bad dreams (chap. 67);
- 3. Visņu's enumeration to Laksmī of the characteristics of those who become his favourites 46 (chap. 74);
- 46 Such people are those who are given to knowldge of Ātman, avoid himsā, culture universal friendship, feel completely satisfied with whatever they possess, are truthful, upright and compassionate, look upon others' wives as mothers, are completely satisfied with their own wives, always remain engaged in lawful work, do not hesitate to give up their life for the sake of Brahmins, and so on. As regards females, they are to be devoted to their husbands and should culture love and service

- 4. Prahlāda's description of the powers of Viṣṇu and his disc, his speech on Vaiṣṇava Kriyā-yoga, 47 and his advice to Bali to become a Bhāgavata (chaps. 76-81);
- 5. Prahlāda's narration, in chaps. 83-91, of what Vasistha had said to Māndhātṛ on a number of vows⁴⁸ and gifts. 49

Saunaka further spoke on the following topics: benefits of meditating on and rendering various kinds of devotional service to Visnu (chap. 71); practice of one's own duties as well as of the virtues such as kindness, tolerance etc., and shunning of unlawful work (vidharma) and association with uncultured people (grāmya-sanga) (chap. 74); building of Viṣṇu-temples, and construction of images of the god with gold, silver, copper, brass, stone, wood, earth etc. (chaps. 75, 99), description of Viṣṇu as Brahma and the source of the universe (chap. 95); process of origin of the world from Visnu, although he is unchangeable (apariṇāmī—chap. 96); description and praise of Yoga said to have been declared originally by Hiraṇyagarbha (chaps. 97-98); distinction of Yoga into Para and Apara, and their characteristics; description of a Viṣṇu-image, 50 which is to be constructed with

- 47 This Kriyā-yoga is said to have been spoken out by Brahmā, from whom it came down to Prahlāda through Svērocisa Manu, Rtacaksus, Sukra and others It includes construction of images and temples of Visnu with different materials, bathing of an image of Visnu with ghee and milk on different occasions, offer of various articles (including different kinds of cloth, viz., dukūla, paṭta, kauśeya, kārpāsika, etc.) and of select flowers and leaves (including Tulasi and Kāla-tulasī).
- 48 Viz., Vikrama-vrata, Visnu-pada-traya-vrata, Suddhi-vrata, and Krsnā-stamī-vrata alsas Devakī-vrata (chaps. 83, 84, 89 and 90)
- 49 V1z, Go-dāna, Tila-dhenu-dāna, Ghrta-dhenu-dāna, Jala-dhenu-dāna, etc. (chaps 85-88 and 91)
- 50 The relevant verses, as reconstructed from ASB Mss Nos 1670 (fols. 231b-232a) and 3506 (fol. 166a-b), run as follows:

—chaps. 92-93), Arjuna's eulogy of Kṛṣṇa (in which many incidents connected with Kṛṣṇa's infancy at Vṛndāvana have been mentioned —chap. 35), and many others (for which see chaps. 2, 39, 68, 72, 76 and 103).

In connection with the above contents the Viṣṇudharma narrates a number of stories, one of which is highly interesting and sheds a flood of light on the attitude of an important section of people towards Buddhism and other non-Vedic and anti-Vedic religious systems current in those days. This story, which has been given in chap. 25 in connection with the description and denouncement of Pāṣaṇḍas, runs as follows.

In ancient times the mortals, being pious through the due performance of their duties, could go to heaven at the mere wish, and the gods also grew stronger by getting their due share in the sacrifices Consequently, the Datteyas and Asuras could not prevail upon the gods. In course of time two Daiteyas, Sanda and Marka by name, intended to annihilate the gods and performed a dangerous krtyā (a magic rite meant for destructive purposes), from which came out a dreadful figure called Mahāmoha, who had a very dark body resembling a mass of darkness and was extremely fierce, haughty, deceitful and lazy.55 This Mahamoha was divided by Şanda and Marka into four parts, one of which decried the gods and Brahmins, another discouraged people from practising Yoga, the third engaged them in unlawful acts (vikarman), and the fourth deprived them of their jñana, made them accept ajñana as jñana under infatuation, and took delight in whatever went against the Vedas (veda-vada-virodhena ya katha sasya rocate). Thus produced by Şanda and Marka, this Mahamoha, 'who was adharma in person' (adharma-svarūpaḥ) and was polluted by pride and other vices, took his position among the people (lokesv eva vyavasthitah) and deluded them in various ways. By his misleading instructions he turned them worthless through infatuation (mohābhibhava-nihsārān) and made them discard their conscience as well as their respective duties enjoined upon them by their castes. Being mad with their wrong knowledge, these infatuated people set themselves to unlawful acts by defying the instructions of their friends and the learned people, to whom they gave replies with misleading and confusing arguments (prayacchanty uttaram mūdhāḥ kūta-yukti-samanvitam). They turned Pāsandins (or Pāṣandas)⁵⁸ and Vrātyas, knew no sacraments, spoke highly of the food received from others (parānna-guna-vādinaḥ), caused mixture of castes, did not care for the purification of the body, decried the rites sanctioned by the Vedas—Rk, Yajuh and Sāma, and preached the doctrine of the non-existence of any thing (nānyadastīti-vādinah). They also spread their influence upon the less intelligent (alpa-mati) section of people and made them discard their own lawful duties and perform unlawful acts. Thus, they led themselves as well as others to hell (fol. 43a-b).

There is another story, given in chaps. 102-103, which narrates the creation of Urvaśī by the sage Nārāyana, one of the four sons of Dharma, the other three being Nara, Hari and Krsna. In this story it is said that while Nara and Nārāyana were practising austerities (tapas) and yoga in the Gandhamādana mountain, 'lions, tigers etc. (turned nonviolent and) moved about complacently in that mountain with deer', 57, that, apprehending the occupation of heaven by Nara and Nārāyaṇa, Indra sent Rambhā, Tilottamā and other nymphs with Cupid (Smara, Madana) and Spring (Vasanta) to distract the sages, that Nara and Nārāyana gave themselves out to the unsuccessful nymphs to be parts of Vāsudeva who was catur-vyūha, māyin, and identical with Paramātman and pervaded and comprised all, and that, being propitiated by the nymphs, Nārāyaṇa gave out a laugh and thus showed the entire universe, together with the gods, in his mouth.

The other stories include those of Sāmbharāyaṇi's attainment of an extremely long life by performing the Māsa-ṛksa-pūjā, and her narration to Indra and Brhaspati of the accounts of the previous Indras from her personal knowledge (chap. 27); (Kārtavīrya) Arjuna's noose (chaps. 76-77); appearance of Visnu's Sudarsana-cakra before Bali after it had been worshipped by the latter to stop the mischief it had been doing to the pregnant wives of Daityas by its passage through the air (chap. 78); Sumana's dialogue with Sandili, a Brahmin woman, who found Sumana residing happily in heaven with her husband and having an odorous and beautiful body by worshipping Visnu with various articles dear to themselves and by bathing the god with ghee (chap. 81), and king Mandharr's attainment of royal fortune as a result of serving, with his devoted wife, in a Visnutemple and attending upon Yogins in his previous birth as a cruel Sūdra, who was always bent on doing harm to others, maltreated his chaste and devoted wife, and failed to earn his livelihood by agriculture (chaps. 82-83). In chap. 94 Saunaka is found to narrate the story of a wicked, treacherous and undutiful Ksatriya named Vimati as follows. Being discarded by his parents and relatives for his misconduct Vimati used to maintain his family by killing animals. During the summer he met in a forest a sage who was afflicted with thirst. Vimati took pity on him and took him to a lake. The sage was satisfied, and, learning Vinnati's conduct by meditation, advised him to utter the word 'Govinda' incessantly. Vimati did so and felt happy. In course of time Vimati died and was reborn in a Brahmin family with the power of recalling the memory of his previous births. In this life he remembered all the previous sufferings and had great indifference. He eulogised Krsna for his pity, and the latter freed him from all sins and gave him final release.

From the above indication of the contents of the Visnudharma it is evident that the entire subject-matter of this work has been set out in the forms of a number of primary and secondary dialogues, which are as follows:

1. Principal interlocutors—Saunaka and Satānīka.

A. Saunaka reports to Satānīka the interlocutions between the following persons:

(1) Brahmā and the sages (Marīci and others) (chap. 1).
 (2) Visnu and Ambarīsa (chap. 2)

(3) Vasistha and Ambarīsa (chaps. 2-42). [Vasistha reports to Ambarisa the interlocution between

(1) Sukra and Prahlada (chap. 3).

Sukra reprodruces to Prahlada the interlocution between

(a) Pulastya and Dālbhya (4-42).

Pulastya reproduces to Dālbhya the interlocutions between Yājñavalkya and Maitreyī (chaps. 13-16), between Samkara and Devī (chaps. 21-22), between Vasiṣṭha and Arundhatī (chap. 29), between Maitreyī and Sīladhanā (chap. 30), between Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna (chaps. 35-36), between the Aśvins and Aila Purūravas (chap. 38).]

- (4) Kṛṣṇa and Yudhiṣṭhira (chaps. 43-63).
- (5) Bhima and Yudhışthıra (chap. 67).
- (6) Prahlāda and Balı (chaps. 76, 79-83).

[Prahlāda reports to Balı the interlocution between Vasistha and Māndhātr (chaps. 83-91).

Vasistha reports to Mändhätr the dialogue between Gauramukha and Pariksit (chaps. 89-90).]

In the remaining chapters Saunaka speaks direct to Satānīka.

A perusal of the Visnudharma shows that it is purely a Vaisnava work on the glorification and worship of Kṛṣṇa-Vāsudeva, who, in his supreme state, is said to be the same as Visnu or Nārāyana. According to this work, Kṛṣṇa (often called Viṣṇu or Nārāyaṇa) is allpowerful (īśa), unborn, eternal and boundless, and, being the Universal Soul, resides in the heart of all. He has no beginning, transcends both the real and the unreal (sadasatah param-chap. 2) and is identical with the Supreme Brahma. He has two states of existence -'para' and 'apara', and is consequently both dual and nondual (bhedabheda-svarūpastha-chap. 1). Although he is unchangeable (aparināmī), he is the cause and source of creation, which is explained from the standpoint of 'bhedābheda' (duality and nonduality-chap. 96). It is he who, in creation, becomes Pradhana and Purușa by līlā, and also Brahma, Visnu and Rudra by fancy (chap. 1). He comprises all including the universe, which lies in his belly (brahmandam udaresayam). For the good of created beings he incarnates himself on earth in parts (kalā, amśa) as Vāmana, Nara-Nārāyaņa, and others.55

⁵⁸ Vāmana is said to be a partial incarnation of Väsudevah

Even Krsna (son of Vasudeva and Devakī) is said in more places than one to be a partial incarnation of this Supreme Krṣna⁸⁰ (also called Vāsudeva) who, as has already been said, is the same as Visnu in his supreme state. In chap. 102 Vāsudeva is identified with Paramātman and said to be catur-vyūba and māyin.⁵⁰

As to the best way of realising Kṛṣna-Visnu the Visnudharma puts great stress on the practice of Yoga, which it characterises in the following verse of Saunaka (said to Satānīka):

"parena brahmanā sārdham ekatvam yan nrpātmanah/sa eva yogo vikhyātah kim anyad yoga-lakṣanam//" (Chap. 99, fol. 231a).

"It is unity, O king, of the (individual) soul with the Supreme Brahma that is well known as yoga. What else is the characteristic of yoga?"

kalayāvatīrnah (chap 76, fol 161b), amśāvatīrnena ca yena (chap. 76, fol 162a).

Nara and Nārāyana describe themselves as extremely small parts of Vāsudeva.—

sa sarva-vāsi-devatvād vāsudevety udāhrtah/vayam amśāmśakās tasya caturvyūhasya māyinah// (chap 102, fol 244a)

Krsna-Visnu calls Lāngali Rāma (1.c Balarāma) the second part of himself.— Cf dvitiyo yo mamāmsas tu rāmo 'nantah sa lāngali (chap 66, fol 127a)

In chap 101 Brahmā and other gods are said to be parts of Visnu.—
yato hi devatāh sarvā brahmādyāh kuru-nandana/amsabhūtā jagad-dhātur visnor avyakta-janmanah// (fol 239b).

59 Krsna-Visnu, being worshipped by Devaki, assured the latter of his birth as her son, saying:

"bhavisyaty acırаd devi mad-amsena sutas tava" (chap 90, fol 20ба). See also fol 20бь—

avāpa ca tato garbham devakī vasudevatah/
ajāyata ca viśveśah svenāmśena janārdanah//

By calling Längali Räma the second part of himself Krsna-Visnu suggests that Väsudeva Krsna also was one of his parts,

It classifies Yoga into two types, viz., para and apara⁶¹, which are better known as jūāna-yoga and kriyā-yoga (1. e. karma-yoga) respectively; and it briefly distinguishes between these two types saying:

"jñāna-yogaś ca saṃyogaś cittasyaivātmanā tu yah/ yas tu bāhyārtha-sāpekṣaḥ sa kriyā-yoga ucyate//" (Chap. 80, fol. 183a-b).

"Yoga by knowledge is communion of the mind with Atman, but Yoga by work is what depends upon external objects."

By the apara type of Yoga (or Kriyā-yoga, which is intended for those who are unable to control their mind in spite of their sincere devotion for the god)⁶² it means worship of the deity in images, with the practice of yama and niyama, which are said to be the causes of success in Yoga (chaps. 99-100). It looks upon karma (work) as the only cause of bondage for creatures, and says that karma causes the distinction between Kṣetrajña and Paramātman (bhedas ca karma-janitaḥ kṣetrajña-paramātmanoḥ—chap. 96, fol. 225a). It follows the Bhagavad-gitā in stating that it is selfless work and constant devotional service and complete self-surrender to the god which can liberate people from the bonds of karma and make them merge into him. ⁶³ By way of prescribing karma which the Vaisṇavas should do for freedom from bondage and the consequent rebirths, this work extols not only worship, muttering of mantra, constant remembrance of the deity, service to Viṣṇu-temples, presents and donations, fasting and other austere practices, ⁶⁴ and so on, but also the due performance of Varnāśrama-dharma as known from the Vedas, the Smṛtis (especially that of Manu), and the Purāṇas. ⁶⁵ In chap. 74 Viṣnu is found to speak to Laksmī on the characteristics of his favourites, thus:

"O beautiful lady, those people are my devotees who fare without transgressing even by mind the duties declared by Sruti and Smrti.

"As I took the form of Brahma, the Vedas came out of my mouth, and it is to me appearing in the forms of Manu and others that the Smrtis are known to belong.

"Stuti and Smrti are my command. He, O auspicious one, who worships me with all his belongings by violating that (command of mine), does not attain me, O venerable one, a violator of (my) command as he is.

"To him, who does not deviate from his own duty or indulge in doing harm (to others) and who always has devotion for me, I am not difficult to attain."

It is further said that by the due performance of his duties enjoined by his caste and order of life a member of a lower caste is elevated in his next birth to the immediately higher caste, that the reverse happens in case of neglect of the same, and that an honest and duriful Brahmin is blessed with final release.⁶⁷ Thus, the Visnudharma firmly believes in caste-system, which, in its opinion, is a pointer to a man's progress to the attainment of final emancipation.

As regards the highest (para) type of Yoga (i.e. Jñana-yoga) the Visnudharma says that it is this Yoga which finally severs the bonds of karma and leads one to kaivalya by putting a stop to all the functions of the mind. Although this type of yoga is thus 'the veritable ambrosia ensuring the complete cessation of sufferings', it is extremely difficult to attain and requires strenuous efforts extending over many births, because one finds it very difficult to control the organs of senses and to get over their objects (visaya) On the other hand, being deluded by their own karma creatures regard their souls as separate from Paramatman and undergo rebirths. 88 Vișnudharma extols and prescribes the much easier Kriyā-yoga, which leads definitely to jñana and thus makes one experience unity with Brahma by completely severing the bonds of karma. 69 According to this work Yoga benefits all without distinction of caste and sex, and this distinction is determined by their progress in Yoga, because by its practice one may pass from womanhood successively through the different states of existence as members of different castes beginning with that of a Sūdra, until one becomes a Brahmin and attains final . emancipation. By naming a number of persons of different castes and sexes who attained success in Yoga, 70 it asserts that the proper practice of Yoga is sure to lead one of any caste or sex to final release.71

It has already been said that in chap. I the Visnudharma describes Nārāyana (1 e. Krsna-Visnu) as 'bhedābheda-svarūpastha', and in chap, 96 it explains the creation of the universe from the standpoint of 'bhedabheda'. So, there is little scope for doubt that the philosophical view advocated by the Visnudharma is 'bhedabheda' or 'dvaitadvaita' (duality and nonduality). As a matter of fact, this work expressly says:

> "advattam paramārtho hi dvaitam tad-bheda ucyace/ ubhayam brahmano rūpam dvaitādvaita-vibhedatah//"22

The Visnudharma, as we have it at present, is decidedly a work of the Bhagavatas. It prescribes the sectarian mantra om namo vāsudevāya' (chap. 79, fol. 181b), and characterises and highly praises the Bhagavatas at more places than one 78 It looks upon these sectaries as superior to the performers of austerity (tapas) and costly sacrifices, and says that to be eligible for Visnu-worship one has to become a Bhagavata, because no one other than a Bhagavata can merge in him or even eulogise him rightly or see him or have true knowledge about him. 74 It further adds that it is by great religious merit that a person becomes a Bhagavata devoted to Bhagavat Janardana, who is the same as Paramatman, 75 and that the god of death does not allow his servants to lay their hands on the sincere Bhāgavaras. 76

We shall now try to determine the period of composition of the present Visnudharma, which has been recognised very widely as a respectable source of Dharma. As a matter of fact, on the strength of some verses of the Bhavisya-p. 77 Laksmidhara, Candesvara and others accept the Visnudharma to be as much authoritative on Dharma as the Purāṇas and rank it with the Mahābhārata, Rāmāyaṇa etc." These scholars as well as many others quote from it numerous verses, and sometimes even complete chapters, in their respective works. For instance, verses are found quoted from chap. 4 in Gadadhara's Kalasara, from chaps. 2, 4, 10, 25, 32, 81 and 105 in Gopāla-bhatta's Hartbhakti-vilāsa, from chaps 48 and 53 in Govindananda Kavikankanācārya's Dāna-kaumudī, from chaps. 9, 25, 88 and 91 in Candeśvara's Kṛṛya-ratnākara, from chaps. 6, 11, 12, 14, 16, 21, 24, 25, 34, 49, 50, 53, 61, 79, 83, 84 and 86-89 in Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmani, from chap. 81 in Devanabhatța's Smṛti-candrika, from chaps 22, 25, 38, 60 and 86-88 in Apararka's commentary on the Yajnavalkyasmrti, from chaps. 25, 45, 53, 58-60, 85-88 and 91 in Vallalasena's Dānasāgara, from chaps. 9 and 13 in Jimūtavāhana's Kālaviveka, and from chaps. 96-98 in the Svetāśvatara-upaniṣad-bhâsya ascribed to Samkara. 79 In his account of India Alberuni names the 'Visnudharma', to which he ascribes the verses quoted by him from the present Visnudharmottara, obviously by taking the latter work to be a patt of the former. The present Visnudharmoreara, which, as we shall see afterwards, 792 was composed between 400 and 500 AD., betrays its knowledge of the Visnudharma by claiming, in two of its verses, 80 to be the latter part of this work and by giving some stories which are decidedly based on and developed from the same as occurring in it 80%. By a critical examination of the genuine Agneya-purāna (alsas Vahns-purāna)81 we have found that this work originally concerned itself with the Fire cult of the Agnihotri Brahmins of the Yajurveda, dealt with the five Puranic topics as well as with the various duties and sacrificial rites of these Brahmins, and advocated the worship of Rudra in the form of Agni, that it passed through three main stages before attaining its present form, extent and character, and that in the second stage it was appropriated by the Vaisnavas (most probably the Bhagavatas) who modified this work with chapters and verses from the Visnudharma dealing with Vaisnava Kriyāyoga and having Vasistha and king Ambarīşa as the principal interlocutors.82 As these chapters and verses common to the two works are very numerous and as the Visnudharma has not yet been printed and its verses are not numbered, we give below a list of only those chapters of the two works which have large numbers of verses common to them.

That the Agneya-p. took these common chapters and verses from the Visnudharma, can be established by the following evidences:

(2) At the beginning of chap. 28 of the Agneya-p. the sages

S1 In 1951 I discovered this work from the ASB Ms No. 8090, which was found wrongly described in Shastri's ASB Cat., V, p. 422 to be a Ms of the spurious Agni-p. published so often from different parts of India request Súta to speak on the various acts which please 'Krsna' and yield final liberation; and in compliance with this request Sūta agrees to tell them elaborately about (Kriya-) Yoga, which, he says, was spoken out to him by his father, who had received it from Vahni, the Fire-god, through Marici. He then goes on to speak on Kriyā-yoga and natrates the story of king Ambarisa in almost the same way and the same words as those in Visnudharma, chaps 1-3, the main difference between the two sources being that in the Visnudharma this story is natrated by Saunaka to king Satānīka and Kriyā-yoga is said to have been spoken out first by Brahmā to Marīci, Bhrgu and others and then by Vasistha to king Ambarisa through Visnu's favour, whereas in Agneya-p, chap. 28 it is narrated by Sūta to the sages of the Naimisa forest as an interlocution between Valini (the Fire-god) and Marici, and the discourse on Kriya-yoga is traced back to the Fire-god (Vahni, Agni), who is said to have narrated it first of all to Marici and others and from whom Vasistha is said to have heard it during a sacrifice (instituted most probably by Marīci).82

- (2) In all the Mss of the Agneya-p. we have been able to consult, the colophon of chap 28 (which contains the said story of king Ambarīṣa and has, in its latter part, many verses in common with chap. 2 of the Visṇudharma) has been given as 'devāmbatīṣa-saṃvādo nāma dvitīyo 'dhyāyaḥ', clearly in imitation of the colophon of chap. 2 of the Visṇudharma which runs as 'iti visnudharmesv acyutāmbarīṣa-saṃvādo nāma dvitīyo 'dhyāyah'.
- (3) It is in chap. 28 of the Agneya-p (and not in chap. 3, wherein the story is given as to how the Fire-god came to speak to Marīci and other sages on the various Purānic topics) that Vasistha is mentioned for the first time and said to have heard the Kriyā-yoga from Vahni during a sacrifice (instituted most probably by Marīci)
- (4) In several places of the Agneya-p. the words 'viṣṇudharma', 'vaiṣnava dharma' and 'vaiṣnava-dharma' have been used, though in their literal sense.

It should be mentioned here that in chap. 3 of the Agneya-p the Fire-god is said to have spoken to Marier and other sages on the different Purānic topics during the sacrifice instituted by Marīci, there being no mention of Vaiṣṇava Kriyā-yoga or of Vasiṣṭha as a hearer, that it is as late as in chap. 28 (which, as we have already seen, is constituted of verses mostly taken from Viṣṇudharma, chap. 2) that Vasiṣṭha is mentioned for the first time and said to have heard discourses on Vaiṣṇava Kriyā-yoga from the Fire-god during a sacrifice (most probably the one instituted by Marīci), 4 and that in several places of the Āgneya-p. Vasiṣṭha has been made to refer either to Vahni as the original speaker or to the interlocution between Vahni and Marīci. 5 So, there is no doubt that the interlocution between Vasistha and Ambarīṣa marks a later stage in the constitution of the present Āgneya-p than that in which this Purāna was a work of the Agnihotrī Brahmins of the Yajurveda and had Vahni and Marīci as interlocutors

83 For the relevant verses see Agnuya-p., chap. 28, verses 10 12 (fol. 972) and 118-119 (fol. 1012).

From what has been said above it is evident that the Agneya-p. borrowed the common chapters and verses from the Visnudharma. Our critical analysis of this work has shown that it must have been recast by the Vaisnavas not later than 500 A.D.86 The way in which the language and contents of the Visnudharma, as well as the colophon of chap 2 and the speaker Vasistha in chaps. 2-42 of the same work, have been utilised in the Agneya-p., shows definitely that at the time when the Agneya-p. was recast by the Vaisnavas, the Visnudharma attained sufficient recognition in society. That this recognition was very wide and deep-rooted is quite evident from the facts that in two of its verses the Visnudharmottara claims to be the latter part of the Visnudharma and that the Bhavisya-p. mentions it once in the Madhyama-parvan (7. 8b-11), and twice in the Brahmaparvan (4. 87-89, and 216. 36-37) together with 'the eighteen Puranas', the Ramayana (called 'Rama's biography'), the Sivadharma, the Mahābhārata and the Saura-dharma. It may be mentioned here that the present Brāhma-parvan of the Bhavisya-p. cannot be dated much later than the sixth century A.D.⁸⁷ Like the Agneya-p. the Bhavisyottata also has a good number of chapters in common with the Visnudharma, so and it may be that these chapters were taken by the Bhavisyottata from the Visnudharma. As the Bhavisyottata must have been compiled between 700 and 800 A.D., and most probably towards the end of the eighth century, so it could not have been utilised by the Visnudharma, except in the case of two chapters to be mentioned hereinafter. Whatever the relation between the Bhavisyottata and the Visnudharma may have been, it is evident that the Visnudharma attained wide recognition as a respectable authority on Dharma by the beginning of the fifth century A.D. So, it could not be composed later than about 300 A.D.

This lower limit of the date of the Visnudharma finds full support in the facts that this work, though speaking so often of Visnu-worship, is completely free from Tantric elements, that it does not betray its knowledge of any work written later than the end of the second century A.D., and that it mentions the Naksatras in the old order from Kṛttikā. We know from the evidence of the Srauta- and the Gṛḥya-sūṭras, the Yājñavalkya-smṛṭi, and the latest books of the 89 The line 'vārāhena purā proktām mahāpātaka-nāśinīm' of Bhav. IV. 152 (which agrees with Visņudharma, chap. 86) raises doubt about the source of the Bhavisyottara and seems to suggest that at least this chapter was derived by the Bhavisyottara from the Varāha-p.

Mahābhārata that the old arrangement of the Naksatras from Krttikā to Bharaṇī was in vogue at least some time after the beginning of the third century A D. When this order of the Naksatras was changed we do not know definitely. It is only as late as about 550 A.D. that we find in the Brhat-saṃhitā of Varāhamihira the order of the Naksatras from Aśvinī to Revatī to be an established fact in all parts of India. So, it can be held, and not quite unreasonably, that the old order of the Nakṣatras held ground at best down to the latter half of the fifth century A.D

As regards the upper limit of the date of the Viṣṇudharma it may be said that it mentions the Smṛṭi works of Manu and others, 22 incorporates verses from the Mahābhārata, 33 the Bhagavad-gītā, 34 and the Manu-smṛṭi, 35 frequently denounces the Pāṣaṇḍas, especially the Buddhists, 36 speaks very highly of the Bhāgavatas, 37 and narrates the interesting story of Mahāmoha, 38 which must have preceded that (in Visnu-p. III. 17-18) giving out the Buddha to be an incarnation of Viṣnu. So, the Visnudharma is to be dated not earlier than 200 A D.

Thus, the date of composition of the present Visnudharma falls between 200 and 300 AD.

This early origin of the Viṣṇudharma must not be taken to be disproved by the mention of the Buddha as an incarnation of Viṣṇu in Viṣṇudharma, chap. 66, because from an examination of the different lists of Viṣṇu's incarnations as given in the Purānas, Pāñcarātra Samhitās, and various other works we have found that the Buddha came to be regarded as an incarnation of Viṣṇu not very much earlier than 500 A.D.⁹⁰ The relevant verses of Viṣṇudharma, chap 66 run as follows:

tatalı kalı-yuge ghore samprāpte 'bja-samudbhava/ śuddhodana-suto buddho bhavisyami vimatsarah// bauddhum dharmam upāśritya karişye dharma-deśanām/ narāṇām atha nārīṇāṃ dayām bhūteşu daršayan// raktāmbara-vy afijitāngāļi prašānta-manasas tathā/ śūdrā dharmam pravaksyanti mayi buddhatvam āgate// edūka-cilinā pṛthisī na deva-grha-bhūṣitā/ bhavitrī prāyaśo brahman mayi buddhatvam āgate// skandha-darsana-mätram hi pasyantah sakalam jagat/ śūdrāh śūdresu dāsyanti mayi buddhatvam āgate// alpāyusas tato martyā mohopahata-cetasah/ narakārhāņi karmāni karisyanti prajāpite// svādhyāyeşv avasīdanto brāhmanāh śauca-varjitāh/ antya-pratigrahādānam karisyanty alpa-medhasah// na śrosyanti pituli putrāli śvaśrū-śvaśurayoh snusāli/ na bhāryā bhartur īśasya na bhṛtyā vinaj a-sthitāļi// varņa-samkaratām prāpte loke 'smm dasyutām gate/ brāhmaņādisu varneşu bhavişyaty adharottaram// dharma-kañcuka-saṃvîtā vidharma-rucayas tathā/ mānuṣān bhakṣayıṣyantı mlecchāḥ pārthiva rūpmaḥ//100

There is no scope for doubt that these verses (in which Visnu speaks to Brahmā) are later additions and were inserted into the Visnudharma

⁹⁹ See Harra, Purante Records, pp. 41-42.
100 The above text of these verses is based on those given in ASB Mss
Nos. 1670 (fol. 127a-b) and 3506 (fol. 101a), which have variants too numerous to be noted here.

The line 'eduka-cilina prthivi na dei a-grha-bhusita' is the same as Abh after its language and contents had been utilised in the genuine Agneya-p. in the second stage of its modification. The reasons for such a conclusion are as follows:

- (1) In connection with a description of the Kali age Agneya-p. 29. 41 (fol. 102b) names the Buddha in the line 'sūdrā dharmam vadışyantı sāksād buddhopajīvinah', but here the Buddha appears as the founder of a heretical faith, and there is not the slightest indication anywhere in the whole work that it looked upon the Buddha as an incarnation of Visnu. There is, of course, mention of 'ten incarnations' (daśāvatāra), without any complete list, in three places of the Agneyap, viz., in chaps. 3, 23 and 28, but this mention does not necessarily mean that the Buddh1 was one of them. According to the Narasimha-p., which, as we shall see afterwards, has a good number of verses in common with the Agneya-p., the ten manifestations or incarnations (prādurbhāvāh, avatārāḥ-Nar. 54. 1, 6) are the following: Matsya, Kūrma, Varāha, Narasımha, Vāmana, Parasurāma, Rāma (son of Daśaratha), Balabhadra (Rāma), Krsna and Kalkı (Nar. 36-54).101 Thus, in its list of Visnu's ten manifestations or incarnations the Narasımha-p. names both Balabhadra and Kṛṣna, but not the Buddha. As a matter of fact, the Buddha came to be included in the list of Visnu's incarnations in place of Krsna after the latter had ceased to be looked upon by a considerable section of people as a partial incarnation of Visnu and had become the Bhagavat himself.
- (2) Like the Narasimha-p., Visnu-p. and other early works, the Visnudharma names both Krsna and 'Lāngalī Rāma' as partial incarnations of Visnu in the thirteen lines (on fols. 126b-127a) immediately preceding those on the Buddha incarnation quoted above. It also names Kalkin, son of Viṣnuyaśas, in the nine lines following those on the Buddha.
- (3) By way of describing dharma in the different Yugas in chap. 104 the Visnudharma names Krsna and Kalkin, but not the Buddha.

(4) In many other places of the Visnudharma the incarnations of Visnu have been named, 102 but there is no mention of the Buddha as an incarnation of this god anywhere except in the verses of chap. 66 quoted above. On the other hand, the Buddha has clearly been identified with Mahāmoha born of the malevolent rite (called kṛtyā) performed by the demons Ṣaṇḍa and Marka for the destruction of the gods, and his followers have been denounced at every step.

The name 'Māyāmohaka' for Viṣṇu, as occurring in king Ambarīṣa's eulogy of the god in chap. 2 (fol. 7b) of ASB Ms No 1670 of the Viṣṇudharma, need not be taken to be based on Viṣnu-p. III. 17 and 18, which narrate the story of Viṣṇu's creation of the delusive figure called Māyāmoha from his own body. In the other ASB Ms (No. 3506) of the Viṣṇudharma, which we have been able to consult, this name has been given as 'Māyāmohana' (which, therefore, has to be taken in its literal sense). The tradition of Viṣṇu's deluding creatures with his Māyā is very ancient and well known. The Viṣṇu-dharma itself says that pleasure in the association of Pāṣaṇḍas and partiality for their logic are caused by Viṣnu-māyā. Moreover, the story of Māyāmoha in Viṣṇu-p. III. 17-18 is to be dated later than the middle of the fourth century A. D. and probably not earlier than 500 A.D. 104

Rāma (Dāśarathi), Vail untha, Nara and Hayagrīva, chap 39 omits Vaikuntha and Nara of chap. 28 but adds Bhārgavottama, chap. 40 names only Narasimha, Rāma (Dāśarathi) and Paraśurāma, chap 67 names Kaurma, Mātsya, Vārāha, Vāmana, Tārl sya and Nārasimha, chap. 68 names Varāha, Vāmana and Narasimha (the line 'rāmo rāmas' ca rāmas' ca etc.' on fol 137a not occurring in ASB Ms No. 3506), and chap. 90 names Varāha, Nrsimha, Vāmana, Asvasiras, Jāmadagnya, Rāghava and Krsna (who is called 'recent'—sāmpratam).

The incarnations, named in chap. 66, are the following: Vārāha, Kāpila (said to be the first incarnation in a human form—jānāmi kāpilam rūpam prathamam paurusam mama—fol 126a), Mrsimha, Kūrma, Vāmana, Dattātreya, Bhārgava-rāma, Rāghava-rāma, Krsna, Lāngali Rāma (said to be the second part of Visnu—dvitiyo yo mamāmsah—fol. 127a), and Kalkin, the verses on the Buddha being spurious.

The early date, to which we have assigned the Visnudharma, must not be taken to be that of all its chapters and verses. We have already seen that a part of chap. 66, dealing with the Buddha incarnation, is spurious. There are also two more complete chapters which were derived, most probably at a much later date, from the Bhavisyottara. These are chaps. 19 and 20, which are practically the same as Bhavisyottara (i.e. Bhav. IV), chaps 80 and 105 respectively. It is remarkable that in the other chapters of the Visnudharma in which Pulastya speaks to Dālbhya, the latter has been addressed as 'dvijaśrestha', 'brahman,' 'mahāmune' etc.; but in the said two chapters (19 and 20) he has been addressed as 'pārthiva', 'nrpa,' 'manujeśvara,' 'rājan' etc. This abrupt change in the personality of Dālbhya is due to the facts that in the Bhavisyottara, from which these chapters were derived, Krsna speaks to king Yudhisthira, and that when chaps, 80 and 105 were incorporated into the Visnudharma to form chaps. 19 and 20 respectively, no attempt was made to adapt them to the interlocutors Pulastya and Dalbhya of the Visnudharma.

It will be interesting here to describe the circumstances which, according to the Visnudharma, necessitated and inspired the composition of this Vaisnava 'Sāstra' as early as in the third century A.D.

From a study of ancient Indian history we learn that during the few centuries from the time of Aśoka Maurya's reign, there was a great spread of Buddhism in and outside India. The Visnudharma amply testifies to the spread of this and other heretical faiths, the followers of which it calls 'Pāsaṇdins' (or 'Pāsandas') and defines thus:

"śruti-smṛty-uditam dharmam varnāśrama-vibhāgajam/ ullanghya ye pravartante svecchayā kūṭa-yuktibhih// vikarmābhiratā mūdhā yukti-prāgalbhya-durmadāh/ pāṣandinas te duḥśīlā narakārhā narādhamāh//"105

"Those, who fare wilfully by transgressing, with puzzling argumentation, the duties (dharma) arising from the distinction of castes and orders of life (and) declared by Sruti and Smrti, and who, being infatuated, set themselves to unlawful work and are maddened by

(their) skill in reasoning, are Pāşaṇḍins, the worst of men, having reproachable conduct and deserving (residence in) hell."

We have already seen in the story of Mahāmoha how, according to the Visnudharma, these Pāṣaṇḍins encouraged indiscipline in society by decrying Sruti and Smṛti and encouraging the violation of their prescriptions as regards the rites and duties of the different castes and orders of life and the performance of unlawful acts. In giving a dismal picture of the evils of the Kali age in chap. 105 the Viṣnudharma repeats many verses of Mahābhārata III. 190¹⁰⁶ and adds:

"People will hanker after property earned by unfair means, and females (eager for union with males) will ardently wish (to imitate) the beauty and gestures of prostitutes.

"... People will forsake the Vedas and the twice-born (Brahmins) and direct their attention to other things.

"Then, being overpowered by Time, they will forsake Brahma and other gods who enjoy shares in the sacrificial offerings and are read of in the Vedas by the twice-born (people), and, being given to (heretical) dialectics, will create other detties.

for bath nor for (physical) purification.

"The minds of people will not be inlined to devotion for Visnu in the Kali age, after Kṛṣṇa, being characterised by blackness, comes down.

"During the first quarter (of this age) people will decry Hari, but at its end none will utter his name.

"If, during this Kalı age, in which the earth will be crowded with many heretics, a virtuous person will utter the words 'I bow down to you, Kṛṣṇa' (kṛṣṇāya te namah),

"the heretics, decrying the system of the four stages of life, will create delusion (of the mind) by means of (their) power of (rationalistic) argumentation and the rogues.

"Then this earth, turning heretical to a very great extent and (consequently) growing uncultured, will be made difficult (for residence) by the pseudo-ascetics.

"At that time the vile Sūdras, bearing the signs of mendicancy, will not serve the twice-born people, nor will they practise their own dbarma.

"Some will become Utkocas¹⁰⁷ (?), Saugatas, Mahāyānists, and the heretical Kāpilas and Bhikṣus,

"while other wicked Sūdras will turn Sākyas, Srāyakas, Nirgranthas and Siddhaputras in the Kali age,

"Turning wandering mendicants the villainous Sūdras will undergo no (physical) purification, have crooked nature, and habitually live on food perpared by others.

"These and many others, as well as the Brahmins, Ksatriyas, Vaisyas etc. will turn heretics

"These mean people will inisappropriate state revenue, rob the householders, remain concealed by (assuming) the appearance and dress of sages, and subsist on trade.

"Being perverted by (heretical) reasoning (and) by compositions (made) in the language of Mlecchas, people in the Kali (age) will respect neither the twice-born (Brahmins) nor the Vedas.

"With their growing extremely wicked in this way, others (also) will turn wicked by following their path and moving about in a wrong way.

"Then people will utter unrefined speech, denounce the Vedic works, and make the world stray from the right path." 108

108 The relevant verses, as reconstructed from ASB Mss Nos 1670 (fols 255b-257a) and 3506 (fols 179a-180a), are the following.

Regarding the state of Vaisnavism and Kṛṣṇa-worship in those days the Viṣṇudharma further says in chap. 73:

"(Those) who, though ignorant, take themselves to be wise by following heretical dialectics and, with their knowledge screened by nescience (avidyā), consider a life dependent on Kṛṣṇa to be not worth living,

"and (also those) who take to misleading argumentation in refuting the statements in favour (of the authority) of the Vedas,—in their heart Keśava never becomes a dear guest.

"There is no expiation for those wicked people who decry his (i. e. Krsna's) activities by taking him to be a human being.

"Some (people) call him a god, some of poor intellect give him out to be a man, (while) others, being deluded by his Māyā, take Visnu (to have been born) in the state of a lower animal"109.

From the above description of the effects of the spread of the heresies in the Indian society of those days it is evident that the indefatigable efforts of the heretic dialecticians, especially Buddhist, helped the wide spread of the anti-vedic faiths, especially Buddhism, among all grades of people and encouraged the breach of social discipline as understood by the followers and supporters of the Vedic way of life. As a matter of fact, it was the irrefutable reasonings of the heretic dialecticians which popularised their faiths to such a great extent and made the people lose faith in Krsna and other deities respected and worshipped by the followers of the Vedas and the Varnāśrama-dharma. We have already seen how the heretical dialectics have been mentioned repeatedly in the Visnudharma with a feeling of awe and frustration. In a verse of chap. 105 it has been said that in the Kali age even a fool gives an irrefutable answer by taking to the (heretical) way of reasoning. 110 So, it is was clearly the wide spread of the heresies, especially Buddhism, which encouraged the composition of the present Visnudharma and similar other sectarian 'Sastras' of the Saivas. Sauras and others.

We have already seen how, by following the teachings of the Bhagavad-gītā, the present Visnudharma advocates the practice of Yoga for the realisation of Visnu-Brahma; and it can hardly be denied that this advocacy was inspired to a great extent by the teachings of the heretical faiths, for which theistic Yoga was the most suitable antidote. Though prescribing this Yoga to all including women and Sūdras, the Visnudharma extols the Vedas and the Varnasrama-dharma and tries hard to keep the people aloof from the influence of the Pasandas. It declares Struti and Smrti to be the commands of the Bhagavat himself, 111 regards the Purana, the Manava Dharma (-Sāstra), and the Vedas together with the Angas as authoritative by origin and consequently unquestionable, and says: "One should know that man to have derived his origin from a part of an Asura who bears hatted towards Govinda and decries the twice-born (Brahmins) and the Vedas"112. It tries to impress upon the people that one's caste depends wholly on one's actions in the previous births (chap. 57), that the due performance of one's caste-duties without any feeling of attachment, hatted, etc. destroys the previous actions causing rebirth, 223 and that 1st is the Vedas, the detties, the sacrifices and the twice-born (Brahmins), who, being eulogised, praised and worshipped with much respect, confer the highest bliss (param śreyah)'214. Ir speakes very highly of Brahmins as well as of various kinds of service 116 rendered to them and glorifies them saying that they can reduce people to ashes, create Lokas and Lokapalas, and lead the aspirants to heaven, and that it was they who made the waters of oceans saline and undrinkable and whose fire of wrath still burns in the Dandaka forest (chap. 52). It encourages the cultivation of various personal virtues such as universal friendship, satisfaction, kindness, tolerance, regard for others' wives as mothers, and so on, and urges the avoidance of attachment, untruth, himsa and other vices, and especially of association and conversation with the Pasandas not only during Visnu-worship and the observance of the Vaisnava

Vratas but also on other occasions¹¹⁶. In case of conversation with these heretics it prescribes expiations, viz., citation of particular Vedic and Purāṇic verses, remembering of Acyuta, and looking at the sun, and in case of physical contact with them the expiation consists of all these acts as well as bath (chap. 25, fol. 42a b). So, the ideal society aimed at by the Visnudharma is Brāhmanical. According to this work a 'worthy son' (sat-putra) is one who is devoted to the gods and Brahmins, knows the Sāstras, and attains Nirvāna (chap 30), and as regards feeding of Brahmins in a Srāddha ceremony it does not favour any discrimination between them but says that the squint-eyed, hunchbacked, poor, diseased and similar other Brahmins are to be mixed up with those who are versed in the Veda.¹¹⁷

As to the position of females in society the opinion expressed by the Visnudharma is not always very encouraging. According to this work, women, as creatures, are inferior even to the Sūdras, for it says that by practising Yoga a female can become a Brahmin by passing successively through the states of Sūdras and others in her different births (chap. 98). It prescribes Vratas and worships to females but says that in undertaking these a virgin girl must seek the permission of her parents, and a married woman, of her husband. "A wife has no separate sacrifice, Śrāddha or fast. She attains her desires merely by serving her husband." In case her husband forsakes her, or dies, or, turning a heretic (pāsanda), does not allow her to worship Visnu, she is to worship her husband and remain faithful to him in body and mind." If she is a widow, she should remain chaste, give hibation of water to her deceased husband, worship Visnu daily by observing fast, receive guests, perform the Agnihotra rites without Mantra (agnihotram amantrakam), make gifts, and do other pious acts (chap. 22).

From what has been said above it is evident that the present Visnudharma is an interesting work and has to be valued for its religious matters and more particularly for its philosophical views.120 Ir scens to be a compilation rather than an original work, and it is probable that it derived chapters and verses from more ancient works of the same type. Chap. 152 of the Bhavisyottara (1. e Bhav. IV), which agrees remarkably with chap. 86 of the Visnudharma, is said in verse 5 to have been 'spoken out in ancient times by the Vārāha' (vārāhena pura proktam). Moreover, in some chapters of the Visnudharma the deity has been named much more frequently as Nārāyana or Visnu than as Krsna, while in others the name 'Krsna' or 'Vasudeva' is very common. From the facts that in chap, 1 of the Visnudharma Satanīka wants to hear 'discourses on Nārāyaṇa' (nārāyaṇa-kathā), that in the first two chapters of this work the name 'Kṛṣṇa' occurs very rarely, and that the Visnudharmottara, which, as we shall see below, was written by the Pancaratras, claims to be a part of the Visnudharma, it appears that in its origin the Visnudharma also was a Pañcaratra work but was later on appropriated and recast by the Bhagavatas to its present form and character.

The text of the Viṣṇudharma, that we find now in Mss, does not agree completely with those used by the commentators and Nibandhawriters. A very large number of verses ascribed to the 'Viṣnudharma' in these works is not found in the present text of this work. For instance, none of the numerous verses of the 'Viṣnudharma' quoted in Raghunandana's Smṛṭi-tattva, Govindānanda Kavikankaṇācārya's Srāddha-kaumudī, Suddhi-kaumudī and Varsa-kaumudī, Madanapāla's Madana-pārijāta, and Madhavācārya's Kālanirnaya, occurs in the present Viṣnudharma; of the 103 metrical lines quored from this work in Gopālabhatṭa's Haribhaktivilāsa, only 37 are traceable in the present text of the same; and among the verses ascribed to the 'Viṣnudharma' in Aparārka's commentary on the Yājñavalkya-smrti, the number of those which are not traceable in the present Visnudharma, is considerable. This large proportion of the untraceable verses indicates that a more extensive text of the Visnudharma was once current in some parts of India.

As to the provenance of the present Visnudharma it is very difficult to say anything definitely. From the facts that of the holy places named in chap. 36 almost all belong to Northern India, and a large number to its western part, and that the small river Devikā has been mentioned on two occasions (in chaps. 32 and 36) and considered as much sacred as the Gangā, Yamunā etc., it appears that the Visnudharma was written in the north-western part of Northern India.

2 THE VISNUDHARMOTTARA¹²²

This work, as we have it now, is an encyclopaedic work consisting of three Khandas and dealing not only with various stories, myths and legends but also with varied subjects, viz, cosmology and cosmogony, geography, astronomy and astrology, division of time, pacification of unfavourable planets and stars, omens and portents, genealogies

121 A list of these untraceable verses will be given in Appendix II in the final Volume of the present work

The only printed edition of this work is that published by the Venkat. press, Bombay.

Being based on highly insufficient Ms material, this edition contains various defects, some of which are as follows.—

- (a) Besides printing mistakas, it has lacunae in a large number of places
- (b) One complete metrical line after Visnudh I. 81 4a is missing.
- (c) In Visnudh 1. 146 the description of the characteristics of bulls (vrsalaksana) is begun abruptly (from verse 41b) with the second half of a verse in which the description of bulls called 'samudra' (rsabhah samudrakhyah) was given. The missing verses of this incomplete chapter are to be found in Mat, 207
 - (d) A few lines after Visnudh I 175 1 appear to be missing,
- (c) Visnudh I, chaps, 223 and 225 are incomplete, and chap 224 is wanting

It may be mentioned here that H P. Shastri also found chaps. 223 and 224 incomplete (trayovimśa-caturvimśādhyāyau khanditau) in the Ms of the Visnudharmottara described by him in his Notices, II, pp. 164-172.

(mainly of kings and sages), manners and customs, penances, results of actions, rules about urata and śrāddba, description and praise of various kinds of donations, law and politics, science of war, anatomy, medicine, treatment of diseases of human beings and lower animals, cookery, manufacture of perfumes, horticulture, grammar, lexicography.

- (f) Though in Visnudh, I 226. 63b-64a Nadayana proposes to mention the names of the 'thirty-two' Matrs created by Narasimha from his own body. he practically names twenty-four Matrs only Hence a complete verse after Visnudh I. 226. 66a must have been lost. This verse occurs in the Matsya-p (179. 69b-701).
- (g) One complete chapter on ahirbudhnya snāna is wanting This chapter is referred to in Visnudh. II. 99. 81b (ahirbudhoyam tatha snanam godam uktam purā tava) and is found quoted, in its entirety, in Caturvarga-cintāmani, II. ii. pp. 654-5.

According to Buhler's description, the text of the Visnudharmottara, as preserved in these Mss, consists of three Kandas, of which the first two appear to have the same contents as those of the first two Khandas of the printed edition, but the third 'is much shorter than metrics, rhetorics, dramaturgy, dancing, vocal and instrumental music, sculpture, painting, architecture, Vaisnava theology, and so on As, due to want of space, it is not possible to give a complete summary of the contents of all its chapters, we note below the different topics dealt with in it, with the mention of some of the most striking points.

Khanda I.

Chap. 1.—Vajta's request to some sages to speak on various kinds of 'Visnu-dharma' or 'Vaisnava dharma' (duties to Visnu), and the latter's selection of Mārkandeya to do so. Mārkandeya's consent to comply with Vajta's request.

Chaps. 2-3.—Description of the origin of the universe as well as of Brahmā, Rudra and others from Nārāyaṇa. Account of Visnu's raising of the earth by assuming the form of a Boar.

Chaps. 4-5.—Description of the nether worlds (viz., Pātāla, Sutala etc.) and the different regions (viz., Varāha-loka, Kālāgmrudra-loka, Viṣṇu-loka, bbūrloka, bbuvarloka etc.), in which Visnu remains with Lakṣmī by assuming different forms.

In chap. 4, verses 1-4 there is a description of the different measurements of space, viz., trasareņu, līkṣā, rāja-sarṣapa, gaura-sarsapa, sarṣapa, yava, angulī, śanku, basta, dhanuḥ, krośa, gavyūtī and yojana Chaps. 6-11.— Geography of the earth.—Names and description of its dvipas. Names of its mountains, oceans etc. Position of mount Mern, and the names of the cities (of Indra, Vahin, Yama, Varina and others) situated round it. Description of Jambu-dvipa, with the mention of the names of its varsas, mountains etc. Description of Bhārata-varṣa¹²⁴ (including Lankā)¹²⁵—the names of the tribes living in its central, eastern, south-castern, southern, south-western, western, north-western, northern and north-eastern parts; ¹²⁶ the names of its seven principal mountains (kula-parvata) as well as of the principal rivers arising from them; the names of those chief rivers¹²⁷ which arose from the Himālaya and are regarded as specially sacred Chaps, 12-22 - Description of Kośala and Ayodhyā.

Names and accounts of the kings of the Solar dynasty from Iksvāku (son of Vaivasvata Manu) downwards

Story of Sagara, whose sons were burnt to ashes by Kapıla, a form of Vāsudeva. Story of Bhagīratha's bringing Gangā¹²⁸ down to earth.

lampagās tālanāgāś ca maru gāndhārajāhutāh/ himavan-nilayā mlecchā hy udīcīm diśam āśritāh// trigarta-mīna-kaulūtā brahmaputrāh satīganāh/ abhisārāś ca kāśmīrāś codak-pūrvena kirtitāh//

127 The names of these rivers are as follows — Kauśikī, Gandakī, Lohitya, Drsadvatī, Menā, Bāhudā, Mahāṇadī, Gomatī, Devikā, Vitastā, Candrabhāgā, Saravū, Irāvatī, Vipāśā, Satadru, Yamunā and Sarasvatī

Of these rivers, the Kauśiki is said to be the beloved of Kauśika and is described as 'nimnagottama', 'gajendra-bhinna-kūlā', and 'gangā-tulyā ca punyatah'; the Bāhudā is said to have restored the severed arm of the sage Likhita, the Devikā is identified with the beloved wife of Samkara, the Vitastā is called 'visnu-loka-pradā' and 'agha-nāśinī', the Candrabhāgā is described as 'candraloka pradā', the Irāvatī is called 'indrebha-sevita-tatā' and 'indra loka-pradāyini', the Vipāśā is said to be 'viśista-pāśa-vicchede kuśalā', and the Satadru is described as 'sarva-pāpānām vipākakārini' and 'vaśistha-vidrutā'

For description of all the above-mentioned rivers see Visnudh I. 11 2-21. In this description, the Sarasvatī is called 'sapta-prakārā' and is said to consist of seven parts known by seven names, viz, Suprabhā (at Puskara), Kātarāksī (at Naimisa), Viśālā (at Gayā), Mānasa-hradā (at Kośala), Sarasvatī (at Kuruksetra), Ogha-nādā (at Gangā-dvāra), and Suvenu (on the Himācala)

It is to be noted that in these verses the word 'devi' has been used with respect to the following rivers — Devikā, Vitastā, Irāvatī, Satadru and Sarasvatī

128 In chap. 19, verses 18ff it is said that Gangā, being let out from Siva's matted hair, first entered the Bindu-saras (which had been created by the drops of water of Gangā) and then divided herself into seven streams, of which three (viz, Hlādinī, Hrādinī and Plāvinī) flowed towards the east, three (viz, Sītā, Vaktra and Sindhu) rushed towards the west, and one (viz, Gangā) flowed towards the south by following the track shown by Bhagīratha

Digressions: -

- (1) Visnu's killing of the demons Madhu and Kaitabha, who had originated from a drop of Brahma's perspiration.—Chap. 15.
- (u) Story of Kuvalayasva, who was named Dhundhumara for killing the aquatic demon Dhundhu (son of Madhu and Kanabha) with the help of sage Uttanka—Chap. 16
- (iii) Story of Jahnu, king of Kanyakubja, who drank up Ganga, because the latter flooded his sacrificial hall in which preparations were made for the performance of a horse-sacrifice. Jahnu's letting Ganga out through his ear.—Chap. 20.
- (iv) Story of Vāmana (Trivikrama), who chastised Bāskali and ushered Gangā into the world. Presence of Gangā in different places in different names and forms. 120

Chaps. 23-71.—Story of Visou's birth as Bhargava Rama, his attainment of Kṣatriya characteristics, and his performance of various exploits, viz., his extermination of the Saimhikeyas as well as of the demons living in the nether world, and his killing of the Kṣatriyas including Kārtavīryārjuna.

Stories of Nahusa's change into a snake; Indra's residence in a lotus-stalk in the Mānasa lake for getting rid of Brahma-hatyā ansing from Vṛṭra-vadha; Visnu's manifestation as Dattātreya; Vasistha's curse on Kārtavīryārjuna for burning his forest for pleasing Ādnya, birth of Viśvāmitra, and the cause of his turning a Brahmin, Sūtya's offer of an umbrella and a pair of shoes to Renukā, wife of Jamadagni, churning of the ocean by gods and demons; Visnu's beheading of Rāhu; and Bhārgava Rāma's meeting with Varuṇa in the latter's residence.

In connection with these stories, portents (utpāta) have been dealt with in chap. 37, bad dreams (duḥsvapna) in chap. 39, and evil omens (durnimitta) in chap. 46.

Chaps. 52-65 constitute a separate section called 'Samkara-gitā,' in which Samkara, being requested by Bhārgava Rāma, glorifies Nārā-

129 Gangā is said to sanctify the Daradas, Jahudas, Kāśmīras, Nairasas, Ābhīras, Kalāpa-grāmakas, Tāmra'iptakas, Vangas, Pundras and others.— Chap. 21, verses 17-24 yaṇa (i.e. Visnu) as Para Brahma and the source of the universe, admits that he himself meditates on Nārāyaṇa, and then speaks on the following topics:—Visnu's manifestation as Varāha, Narasiṃha and Vāmana; Viṣṇu's various vibhūtis; praise of devotion (bhakti) to Viṣṇu; enumeration of actions¹³⁰ which please Keśava, results of worshipping Visṇu by observing fast on the different days (from Sunday to Saturday) of the week, on different Tithis (from Pratipad to Pañcadaśi) and under different Naksatras from Kṛttikā to Bharanī); worship of Viṣṇu with the due observance of 'pañca-kāla,' viz., abhigamana-kāla, upādāna-kāla, ijyā-kāla, svādhyāya-kāla and yoga-kāla.¹³¹

Chaps. 72-73.—Varuna's speech to Bhārgava Rāma on the following topics:—Division of time according to saura, cāndra, sāvana and nāksatra māna; measurement of time—duration of a nimeṣa, truṭi, prāṇa, vinādikā, nāḍikā, muhūrta, ahorātra, pakṣa, māsa, ayana, samvatsara, yuga, kalpa etc.; duration of the day and night of the Piṭṛs, longevity of Brahmā; condition of dharma etc. during the four yugas, especially in the Kali-yuga.

Chap. 74.—Condition of Bhārata-varṣa at the end of each yuga; and Visnu's appearance in human forms (such as those of Pramati, Bhīmaratha, Vāsudeva-and-Arjuna, and Kalkin) for relieving the earth of her burden.

This chapter gives us information regarding the literary activity of Vālmīki and Vyāsa at the ends of Tretā and Dvāpara respectively. It is said that at the end of the Dvāpara-yuga Viṣṇu would be born as Vyāsa, divide the original Veda into four, viz., Rg-veda, Sāma-veda, Ātharvaṇa and Yajur-veda, and write Vākovākya, Purāna and Bhārata, and that at the end of the Tretā-yuga Viṣṇu would be born as Vālmīki and write the 'Rāmākhyāna'. (See verses 22ff.).

Chaps. 78-79.—Entrance of Mārkandeya and Brahmā into the Chap. 80.—Measurement of time beginning from the origin of Brahmā. Duration of the periods of reign of Vajra and Parīkṣit.

Chap. 81.—Names of fourteen Manus. Difference between the Manvantaras and Kalpas.

Chaps. 82-105.—On astrology and astronomy.—Different kinds of years, and their characteristics and results; names of deities dominating the different seasons, months, planets, stars, tithis and mubūrtas; names and description of karaṇas (viz., bava, bālava, kaulava etc.), and the names of their presiding deities; description of borā, kulika-velā and lagna; nature of the influence of planets and stars on different countries under different circumstances; long and detailed description of the method of performing graha-yajña (which consists of prāk-tantra and uttara-tantra); relative position of the planets and stars.

Chap. 106.—Stories of the birth of Dhruva and the different Planets. 132

Chap. 107.—Brahma's creation of gods, demons, sages, Pitrs and others, as well as of planets, birds, snakes etc.

Dakşa's descendants (including Satī, who is said to have forsaken her body and been reborn as Umā).

Chaps. 108-109.—Dhruva's descendants including Vena¹³³ and Prthu, whose stories have been given at length. Daksa's rebitth as the son of Pracetas, and his creation by sexual intercourse.

Chaps. 110-118.—Descendants of Bhrgu, Angiras, Atri, Visvāmitra, Parāsara and other sages. Origin of gotras and pravaras. Restriction as regards marriage among them.

Digression: -Story of Nimi and Vasistha's mutual curse, and the latter's birth as the son of Mitra and Varuna. -Chap. 117.

Chaps. 119-121.—Descendants of Dharma and Kasyapa.

Chaps. 122-8.—Story of Krsna's killing of Kālanemi. Visnu's manifestation as Varāha. Birth of Maruts. Creation of Apsarases, viz., Tilottamā, Abalyā, Urvaśī and others.

Chaps. 129-137.—Story of Purūravas and Urvašī.—The latter's origin from Nārāyana's thighs; Tumburu's curse on her; her love for and residence with Purūravas (of Pratisthāna)¹³⁴ on certain conditions; Urvašī's departure, and Purūravas's vain enquiry for her to beasts and birds; Nārada's request to Urvašī to pass one night with the king; Urvašī's meeting with Purūravas in a lake in Kuruksetra; and so on.

[Though based on its Vedic and Puranic versions, this story has innovations and betrays the influence of Kalidasa's Vikramorvasiya.]

Cause and praise of performing śrāddha on the Amāvāsyā Tithi. (Chap. 137, verses 29ff.).

Chap. 138.—Names and classification of Pitrs; and the effect of offering śrāddba to them.

Chap. 139.—The custom of offering śrāddha—first introduced on the Varāha-parvata by Viṣṇu in the form of Varāha in the Vaivasvata Manyantara.

Chaps. 140-144.—Performance of śrāddha.—Detailed description of its procedure; persons entitled to offer śrāddha under different circumstances; selection of proper place; different kinds of articles (including meat of particular animals) to be offered to the Pitṛs; proper time and occasions for the performance of śrāddha; persons (viz., vārdhuṣika, cikitsaka and others) who do not deserve to be invited in śrāddha ceremonies; persons who are 'pankti-pāvana'; results of Chap. 145.—Pitṛ-gāthās. Method of observing the Aśūnya-śayana-dvitīyā (as described by Pulastya to Dālbhya).

Chap. 146.—Ways of release from rebitths. Characteristics of bulls (vṛṣa-laksaṇa) as mentioned by Kṛṣṇa to Yudhisthira.

[This chapter refers to the contents of the Santi and Anusasana Parvans of the Mahabharata, and to the Dhatmasastras of Manu, Vasistha, Parasara, Atri, Sankha, Gargya, Likhita, Yama, Javali and many others.]

Chap. 147.—Procedure and praise of dedication of bulls (visotsarga) to the Pitrs.

Chaps. 148-156.—Purūravas's penance and worship of Visnu on the Dvādaśī Tithis in the Himālaya in his previous birth as a king of Madra, his performance of the Rūpa-satra-vrata according to the method described by Atri, and his consequent attainment of uncommon physical beauty through Visnu's favour.

Chaps. 157-161.—Description of various kinds of Dvādašī-vratas, viz., Rājya-prada-dvādašī-vrata, Kāmn-dvādašī-vrata, Sukla-pakṣa-dvādašī-vrata, and Sravana-dvādašī-vrata (in all of which Viṣnu is to be worshipped.)

Chap. 162.—Praise of the Śravaṇa-dvādaśī-vrata by means of a story of a merchant who strayed into a forest in Dāśeraka and met a group of spirits (preta), one of whom told him that he had been a merchant of Śākala and that, as a result of his observance of the Śravaṇa-dvādaśī-vrata and giving food to Brahmins on this occasion at the confluence of the rivers Tauṣī and Candrabhāgā, he used to have a regular supply of food and water even after his death.

In this chapter, the Candrabhaga is described as a part of the or Ayurveda but do not earn their livelihood with these; and so on.—Chap. 143, verses 12-19.

Gangā, 137 and the Tauṣī is called 'arka-nandinī' (daughter of the Sun), 138 and the meeting places of the following rivers are said to be highly sacred —(a) Gaṅgā and Sarayū, (b) Gaṅgā and Sona, (c) Gaṅgā and Ikṣumatī, (d) Gangā and Yamunā, (e) Gomatī and Sarayū, (f) Kauśikī and Gaṇḍakī, (g) Vipāśā and Devahradā, (h) Vipāśā and Satadru, (i) Sindhu and Irāvatī, (j) Candrabhāgā and Vitastā, and (k) Sindhu and Vitastā.—Verses 61-65.

Chaps. 163-164.—Description of the Tila-dvādaśī-vrata (which is Vaisnava).

Praise of this Vrata by means of the story of Nayanasundari, wife of king Candavega of Magadha, who, in her previous birth in a country watered by the river Vitasta, performed the Tila-dvadasi-vrata on the bank of this river and consequently attained royalty.

In Chap. 164, verses 23-26 the Vitastā has been praised as a highly sacred river and identified with Umā, the beloved wife of Hata.

Chap. 165.—Method and praise of muttering the Gāyatrī, and the cause and efficacy of its use in various kinds of Vaisnava homa (viz., lakṣa-homa, koṭi-homa etc.) and in abhicāra.

[For the method of using Gayatri in abbicara and the restrictions under which it is to be employed for this purpose, see verses 55-67.]

Chaps. 166-7—The method and result of dipa-dana in Visnutemples and other places. (The use of animal-fat and of blue or red wicks in lamps is strictly prohibited.—Verses 31 and 35).

Story of Lilitika (or Lalita), daughter of king Citraratha of Vidarbha and wife of the king of Kasi, who always kept herself engaged in dipa-dana and who, in her previous birth as a female mouse, chanced to cause an extinguishing lamp to continue to burn in a Visnu-temple constructed by Maîtreya (the Brahmin minister of the king of Sauvira) at Nṛṣiṃha-tīrtha on the bank of the river

Devikā in Madra and was consequently born and matried in royal families.

In chap. 167, verses 15-18 it is said that, for the good of man-kind, Brahmins caused Uma, wife of Hara, to come down to the earth in the form of the river Devika.

Chap. 168.—Praise of Visnu-worship with wild flowers, fruits etc. by poor people.

Chaps. 169-170.—Results of sweeping a Visnu-temple and besmearing it with cow-dung.

Story of a destitute Sūdra and his wife, who felt a strong desire for royal fortune at the sight of Citravāhana, king of Sauvīra, and were reborn as Māndhātṛ (son of Yuvanāśva and king of Ayodhyā) and Prabhāvatī (daughter of Bhīmavega, king of Kāśi) respectively as a result of besmearing, with cow-dung, a Viṣṇu-temple which was situated on the bank of the Sindhu and in which an image of Varāha was established by sages of old. Māndhātṛ's conquest of the world, and his devotion to Viṣṇu.

[The river Sindhu has been praised in chap. 170, verses 4st.].

Chaps. 171-172.—Being questioned by Vajta as to how this Mandharr could be killed by Lavana with the sula of Mahesvara, Markandeya says that such an incident became possible simply because the energy of Viṣṇu (vaiṣṇavaṃ tejah) resorted to the tip of Siva's śūla.

Mārkaņdeya's description and praise of 'vaiṣṇava-tejas', without which, Mārkaṇdeya says, even Brahmā and Siva cannot live and which cannot be comprehended without bhakti. Mārkaṇdeya adds that it is Viṣṇu who is the single eternal Being (avināśi tad evaikaṇ) known by different names such as Sadāśiva, Vāsudeva, Kāla, Daiva, Svabhāva, Putuṣa, Praṇava etc. and who, though himself eternal, formless, omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent, manifests himself as Varāha etc. for accomplishing various objects but is not bound by his actions.

Description of kings of the Treta-yuga.—It is said that these kings could cleanse their faces with their own tongues; each of them had 68 teeth and possessed seven gems (sapta ratnani), viz., basti-ratna, asva-ratna, ratha-ratna, bbaryā-ratna, āyudba-ratna, maņi-ratna and nidbi-ratna; their movement was not obstructed in the nether world, the sky, the mountains and the sea; and so on.—Chap. 172, verses 37-46.

Chaps. 173-174.—Description of the Ananta-vrata (by performing which Yuvanāśva and Krtavīrya had Māndhātṛ and Kārtavīryārjuna respectively as sons) and Māsa-naksatra-pūjana-vrata (in which Viṣnu is to be worshipped for one year from Kārttika).

[In chaps. 175-191 Mārkandeya reports, in connection with Māsa-nakṣatra-pūjana-vrata, what Sāmbarāyanī said to Indra.]

Chaps. 175-189.—Accounts of the past, present and future Manvantaras, with the mention of Visnu's killing of the foes of the respective Indras during these Manvantaras by assuming different forms such as those of Matsya, Kürma, Hamsa, Aśva, Nṛ-varāha, Mayūra etc.

Chap. 190 — Eternity of Visnu; and his innumerable manifestations in different Manvantaras, viz., Varāha, Vāmana, Trivikrama, Narasimha, Matsya, Kūrma, Hamsa, Nṛ-varāha, Rāma (Bhārgava), Rāma, Māndhātṛ, Pṛthu, Kārtavīryārjuna and others.

Chap. 191.—Sāmbarāyanī's statement that it was by observing the Māsa-nakṣatra-pūjana-vrata that she was able to attain such an extremely long life and residence in heaven.

Chaps. 192-194.—Praise of Visnu-stuti.

Story of the transformation of the Gandharvas Hāhā and Hūhū into an elephant and a crocodile respectively as a result of Devala's curse, because these Gandharvas disrespected Devala by taking him to be ignorant of music.

Fight between the elephant and the crocodile; and the former's eulogy of Viṣṇu, who consequently saved the elephant by killing the crocodile and restored both the animals to their former states.

[This story is called 'gajendra-mokṣaṇa'. In chap. 194, verses 58 ff. Gaṅgā, Naimiṣāraṇya, Prayāga, Brahma-tīrtha and Daṇḍakāraṇya have been praised.]

Chap. 195.—Method of self-protection by means of the Viṣṇu-pañjara-stotra, which Brahmā discovered for Saṃkara's safety when the latter destroyed Tripura.

Chap. 196.—Protection of others from various kinds of diseases and calamities by means of the Viṣṇu-pañjara-stotra and other Vaiṣṇava stotras and mantras (especially those of Narasımha).

Chaps. 197-198.—Origin of Yaksas, Rāksasas, Pisācas and Yātudhānas; and the names of their descendants (including Heii, Praheti, Rāvaṇa, Puloman and others).

Chap. 199.—Story of the birth of Cyavana and his reducing Puloman to ashes with an angry glance when Cyavana's mother Pulomā was being abducted by this Rākṣasa.

Chap. 200.—Birth of the Rākṣasa named Lavaṇa, and his death at the hand of Satrughna.

Chaps. 201-269.—Rāma's order to Bharata to chastise the impious (adharma-nirata) Gandharvas living on both banks of the Sindhu; and Bharata's consequent match against, and killing of, these Gandharvas including Sailūşa, and sending the rest to the Himālaya.

Bharata's march against the Gandharvas has been described elaborately in chaps. 202-209.

According to chap. 203 Rāma sent with Bharata a retinue consisting of actors, musicians, dancing girls, public women, merchants (or contractors), poison-doctors, physicians, surgeons. dentists (dantakātāh, dantopajīvinah), engineers, weavers, leather-workers, fishermen, tailors, scribes, astrologers, manufacturers of weapons, washermen, painters etc. 140

During his march Bharata is said to have seen the following rivers and places: —Gangā, Yamunā, Sannīti (a holy place in Kurukṣetra), Amarakantaka, Satadru (also called Gaurī), Vipāšā, Irāvatī, Devikā, Candrabhāgā, Vitastā, Sudāmā (a river) and Rājagiha (capital of Kekaya).—Chaps. 206-207.

In chap. 207 the holy place Sannīti and the rivers Yamunā, Satadru, Vipāśā, Irāvatī, Devikā, Candrabhāgā and Vitastā have been specially glorified as being highly sacred; regarding Sannīti it has been said that here Dadhīca called together all the holy places and rivers on earth before giving up his life for the sake of Indra and that thence-forward all the gods and tirthas used to visit this place every month; the reasons for the names 'Satadru' and 'Vīpāśā' have been stated; and the rivers Satadru and Devikā have been identified with Umā, the beloved wife of Hara.

Chap. 208 contains description of the hurry and eagerness of women of Rajagrha to see Bharata when he was entering the city.

In chaps. 212-247 Nādāyana advises Sailūsa not to declate war against Bharata but to repair peacefully to the Himālaya, and relates the following stories:—

- (1) Agastya's drinking of the waters of the ocean for helping Indra to kill the demons who had taken shelter in it after Vṛṭra's death; his lowering of the Vindhya which had covered the paths of the sun and the moon; his killing of Vātāpin by thoroughly digesting him; and his furnishing the bows of Rāma and Laksmaṇa with invincible 'vaiṣṇava-tejas.'—Chap. 213.
- (2) Visnu's war with and killing of the demon Mālin of Lankā, —a story which had been narrated to Rāma by Agastya.—Chaps. 214-215.

The following rivers are said to have joined Vişnu in his march against Mālin:—Gangā, Kālindī, Sarayū, Gomatī, Godāvarī, Sarasvarī, Satadru, Vipāśā, Candrabhāgā, Irāvatī, Sindhu, Vitastā, Devikā, Ganḍakī, Kāverī, Hiranvatī, Iksumatī, Parnāśā, Kauśikī, Vedasmṛti, Narmadā, Sītā, Hrādinī, Pāvanī, Lauhityā, Sindhu, Cakṣu, Sītā, Gautamī, Dṛṣadvatī, and 'others.'—Chap. 215, verses 43-52.

(3) Story of Rāvaṇa and his exploits and death.—Birth of Kuvera from Devavarṇinī by Viśravas, and his residence at Lankā which was situated on the mountain Trikūṭa. Birth of Daśagrīva, Kumbhakarna, Vibhīṣaṇa and Sūrpaṇakhā from Kaikasī by Viśravas, their penance at Gokarṇa, and their receipt of boons from Brahmā; Rāvaṇa's leadership of those Rāksasas who had fled to Pātāla after Mālin's death, his wresting of Lankā from Kuvera, and his world-conquest. Rāvaṇa's attempt to molest Vedavatī, daughter of Kuśadhvaja, and the latter's entrance into fire with the threat that she would be born again as an ¹⁴¹ For the story of Vedavati, see chap. 221, verses 17st. This story is based on Rāmāyana VII. 17.

'ayonna' being for bringing about his destruction; birth of Vedavati as Sītā; and the incidents in her life (including her entrance into the nether world). Rāvaṇa's taking away of the chariot called Puspaka from Kuvera, and his sad experience in Kailāsa (where he was cursed by Nandin that monkeys would bring about his destruction); his victory over the gods; his conquest of Pātāla; and his experience at Kiṣkindhyā (where there was a conflict between Bālin and Sugrīva). Rāvaṇa's meeting with Bali, the former's inability to remove one of the ear-rings which Bali inherited from Hiraṇyakasipu, and Bali's praise of Viṣṇu who had killed Hiraṇyakasipu; Rāvaṇa's meeting with Viṣṇu, in whose body he saw all the gods and the whole universe and who told him that he would be born as a human being and kill Rāvaṇa.—Chaps. 219-223 and 238-239.

- (4) Siva's eulogy of Vināyaka, and his burning of Triputa with an arrow, the tip of which was occupied by Viṣnu,—Chaps. 224(?)¹⁴²-225.
- (5) Siva's killing of the demon Andhaka with the help of the Mātṛs created by himself as well as by Viṣṇu and Narasiṃha whom Siva had eulogised for help.—Chap. 226. (This chapter contains the names of a large number of Mātṛs including Kālī and Mahākālī).
- (6) Birth of Şadānana on the mountain Sveta; his boons to the Kṛttikās to be worshipped with himself at a time when the moon would remain with the Kṛttikās, and to Gangā to be worshipped on the Vaiśākha-śukla-tṛtīyā (which is called Akṣaya-tṛtīyā); Indra's creation of a large number of highly pernicious beings called Grahas, viz., gods, Pitṛs, demons, Rākṣasas, evil spirits, Nāgas etc., for doing harm to Ṣadānana's life; Ṣadānana's creation of a far larger number of similar Grahas named Skanda, Viśākha etc. to counteract the influence of those created by Indra, and his prescription of particular duties to these Grahas; Indra's praise of Skanda and his worship; Siva's appointment of Skanda as the general of gods; and Skanda's killing of the demon Mahiṣa and others.—Chaps. 228-230 and 233.

¹⁴² In the printed ed, chaps. 223 and 225 are incomplete and chap 224 is wanting.

- (7) Nārāyana's saving of Yajña from the hand of Siva.— Chap. 234
- (8) Destruction of Dakṣa's sacrifice by Vīrabhadra and Bhadrakālī born of Siva and Pārvatī respectively, because Daksa refused to give to Siva a share of the sacrificial offerings; Dakṣa's eulogy of Siva at Bhadra-karneśvara according to Vīrabhadra's advice; Siva's boon to Dakṣa.—Chap. 235.

(In this chapter the confluence of the Sarasvatī and the Jāhnavī at Bhadrakarņeśvara as well as the five holy places—'tīrthā-pañcaka', viz., Gangādvāra, Kuśāvarta, Bilvaka, Nīlaparvata and Kanakhala, have been highly praised by Siva, Mahākālī has been eulogised and described as 'aṣṭādaśa-bhujā', 'śūla-mudgara-dhāriṇī', 'kamaṇḍalu-dharā', 'pītakauśēya-vasanā', and 'nīlotpala-dala-śyāmā', and her worship has been prescribed on the Sukla-navamī).

- (9) Story of sage Sveta, who used to worship a Siva-linga and whom Siva saved from the hands of Yama by reducing him to ashes, because Yama refused to wait till Sveta could finish his worship of Siva. Description of Visnu-kavaca, with which Siva protected himself against Yama.—Chaps. 236-237.
- (10) Satrughna's fight with and killing of the Rākṣasa named Lavaṇa who lived at Madhuvana.—Chaps. 240-247.

Chap. 227 contains the names of herbs, food meterials etc. with which the enraged Matrs can be pacified.

Chaps. 231-232 deal with the following topics:—Various kinds of actions which bring people under the influence of the Grahas created by Indra and Ṣadānana; causes which encourage these Grahas to exert their influence; symptoms of persons influenced by different kinds of Grahas; and treatment of such persons by means of herbs, mantras etc.

Beasts and birds descended from Pulaha.—Chap. 248.

Yakṣas, Daityas, Dānavas, Piśācas etc.; coronation of Indra.—Chaps. 249-250.

Origin of the eight elephants named Airāvaņa, Padma, Puspadanta etc. (which are called quarter-elephants—dig-gajāḥ), and the classification of their descendants.

Location of the eight forests in which the eight quarter-elephants live with their descendants. Characteristics of elephants living in these forests.—Chap. 251.

Monkeys descended from Pulaha.—Chap. 252.

Description of the fight between the elephants and monkeys at Antarvedī. Indra's severing of the wings of elephants and sending them down to earth to serve Lomapāda, king of Anga. Lomapāda's authorship of a Sūtra-work on medical treatment of elephants.—Chap. 253.

Chaps. 254-257.—Sailūṣa's determination to wage war against Bharata in spite of Nāḍāyana's advice to the contrary. Inability of the Gandharvas, sent by Sailūṣa, to create the least disturbance in Ayodhyā, Rājagṛha and Bharata's camp.

Description of love-lorn women in Ayodhyā.

Chaps. 258-268.—Description of the war between Bharata and Sailūṣa,—a war which resulted in the death of the latter. Description of the battle-field.

Chap. 269.—Bharata's performance of Visnu's śayanotsava and jāgaranotsava for five days each from Āṣāḍha-śuklaikādaśī and Kārttika-śuklaikādaśī respectively; his construction, for his sons Puṣkara and Takṣa, of two cities named Puskarāvatī and Takṣaśilā on both banks of the Sindhu; his return to Ayodhyā and worship of Viṣṇu.

Khanda II

[This Khanda deals with the duties of kings-raja-dharma.]

Chap. 1.—Vajra praises Mārkandeya for narrating, with various other topics, the story of Bharata's successful war against the Gandharvas and requests him to describe what Bhārgava Rāma heard from Varuṇa after reaching the latter's region. Mārkandeya says that Rāma Jāmadagnya first heard from Varuṇa about measurement of time and then asked him to speak on the duties of kings (rāja-dharma), that Varuṇa referred Bhārgava Rāma to his own son Puskara, who, Varuṇa said, had heard about rāja-dharma from Indra, and that, in compliance with Varuṇa'a request, Puṣkara took Bhārgava Rāma to his own residence.

Chaps. 2-7.—Being requested by Bhārgava Rāma, Puṣkara spoke on the following topics:—

Necessity of a pious and dutiful king for the establishment of law and order in the country; various qualifications (such as submission to the opinions of ministers and the state-astrologer) that a king must possess; selection, to be made by the king's predecessors as well as by the most prominent people of the state, of a worthy member of the royal family for the throne;144 the king's oath; appointment of a qualified Brahmin as state-astrologer (sāmvatsara)—the first duty of the king; qualifications of the state-astrologer, and the king's submission to him; selection of ministers, priest (purohita) and chief queen in accordance with the instructions of the state-astrologer; the king's coronation to be performed by the state-astrologer; qualifications of the Purohita (who is to be an Atharvan versed in the Yajur-veda and the Atharva-veda and to have thorough knowledge of the five kalpas, viz., naksatra-kalpa, vaitāna-kalpa, samhitā-kalpa, angirah-kalpa and śānti-kalpa), necessity of Purohita for peace and prosperity of the king; qualifications of ministers, who are to be Brahmins versed in the Vedas and the Nīti-śāstras of Brhaspati and Uśanas; 145 qualifications to be possessed by the chief queen.

Chaps. 8-9-Auspicious signs of men and women.

Chaps. 10-11.—Characteristic signs of good and bad elephants and horses.

Chaps. 12-14.—Making of a chowry, an umbrella and a holy seat (bhadrasana) for the king.

Chap. 15.—Names and characteristics of jewels to be worn by the king.

¹⁴⁵ See chap. 6, verse 2.

Chaps. 16-17.—Construction of bows with metals (such as gold, silver, copper and steel), horns (of buffaloes, sarabbas and other beasts), bamboo, wood etc. Construction of arrows, and of swords with steel of different countries, viz., Vanga, Sūrpāraka, Videha, Anga etc. Characteristics of swords manufactured in these countries.

Story of the origin of 'khadga' (sword) from a divine being named Nandaka and of 'loba' (steel) from the different limbs of a demon named Loha.

[In connection with the selection of materials for the construction of bows, Puskara says:

vaṃśānām apī tac chrestam yatra gaṅgā mahānadī/ sālānām apī tac chrestam gomatī yatra bhārgava/ vītastā-kūlajaṃ śreṣṭhaṃ vetasīnāṃ tathaīva ca//

The countries manufacturing the best arrows are mentioned in the following lines: - śarāḥ kırātajāḥ śreṣṭhāḥ kāńcīpura-samīpatah/ tebhyo'pı te śreṣṭhatamāh skanda-janma-samīpataḥ//, Chap. 16, verses 20b-212.

The following verses name the countries producing steel of different qualities for the manufacture of swords :--- loham pradhānam khadgārthe prasastam tad visesatah/katīkadūra-rṣīkam vange sūrpārakesu ca//videheṣu tathāngeṣu madhyamam grāmacediṣu/sahagrāmeṣu nīpesu tathā kālañjare 'pi ca//

Chap 17, verses 21b-23a.]

Chaps. 18-23.—On coronation.—Proper time for coronation; performance of Purandara-Sānti, characteristics of fire in which homas are to be performed; procedure of coronation; mantras to be used on this occasion,—all these mantras being Purānic in character and containing invocations to the gods, goddesses (including Durgā mounted on a lion), Dik-pālas, Prajāpatis, Pitṛs, Mātṛs, wives of Dharma, Kaśyapa and others, Nakṣatras, Planets, Manus, Rudras (including Dhūmaketu, Bharata and Kāpāli), Sādhyas, Ādityas, Maruts, Gandharvas, Apsarases, Daityas, Dānavas, Rākṣasas, Yakṣas, Piśācas, Suparnas and others.

In some of the mantras given in chap. 22, there is mention of

- (1) Rg-veda, Yajur-deda, Sāma-veda, Atharva-veda, Itihāsa, Dhanurveda, Gandharva-veda, Ayurveda, the six Angas (viz, śikṣā, kalpa etc.), Mīmāmsā, Dharmaśāstra, Purāna, Sāmkhya, Yoga, Pāñca-rātra, and Pāśupata (chap. 22, verses 129-134);
- (ii) a large number of holy places, rivers, lakes etc., the majority of which belongs to the western and north-western parts of Northern India (chap. 22, verses 142-184).

It is to be noted that the names of the rivers include the following:—Sindhu (mentioned thrice), Sarasvatī, Satadru, Gomatī (mentioned twice), Sarayū, Vipāśā, Candrabhāgā, Irāvatī, Vitastā, Devikā (mentioned twice) and Iksumatī.

Kauśikī and Karatoyā also have been mentioned.]

Chaps. 24-25.—The first and the most important duty of a newly crowned king.—Selection of qualified persons for the posts of generals (who should be Brahmins or Kṣatriyas), messengers (who should know the local dialects), body-guards, tāmbūla-dhārin, sandhi-vigrahaka, khadga-dhārin, kośa-dhārin, sārathi, sūdādhyaksa, cooks, judge, scribe (lekbaka), gate-keeper, gajādhyakṣa, aśvādhyakṣa, durgādhyakṣa etc. Conduct of these officers towards the king.

Chaps. 26-27.—Selection of proper place for residence; construction of forts (viz., dhanva-durga, mahī-durga, nara-durga, vārksa-durga, ambu-durga and giri-durga) and furnishing these with houses, means of protection, herbs etc.

awakening the Bhagavat (bhagavad-vibodhana), bathing and anointing the Bhagavat; offer of various things to the deity; worship of the deity according to Vedic and Sattvata methods, taking out the image in procession.

Chaps. 118-125.—Results of, and occasions for, worshipping Visnu's different manifestations¹⁸⁸ and muttering their names; proper time and places¹⁸⁷ of such worship and muttering.

Chaps, 126-225 — Description of various Vratas, viz., Brāhmī Pratipad, Trimūrti-vrata, Paurusī Pratipad, Prakṛti-Puruṣa-vrata, Nāsatya-dvitīyā-vrata, Bālendu-dvitīyā-vrata, Aśūnya-śayana-dvitīyāvrata, Trivikrama-trtīyā-vrata (of three varieties), Visnu-trimūrti-vrata, Visnu-caturmūrti-vrata (of fifteen varieties), Pañca-mūrti-vrata (of four varieties), Şanmürti-vrata, Sapta-mürti-vrata, Pātāla-vrata, Sapta-dvīpavrata, Sapta-samudra-vrata, Sapta-saila-vrata, Sapta-loka-vrata, Saptanadī-vrata, Sapta-hrada-vrata, Saptarşı-vrata, Marud-vrata, Sūrya-vrata (with the mention of the names of those who follow the Sun in the different months), (Saura-)-Saptamī-vrata, (Saura-) Rakta-saptamī-vrata, Astāvasu-vrata, Maheśvarāstamī-vrata, Parvatāstamī-vrata, Bhadrakālīvrata, Viśvedeva-vrata, Angiro-vrata, Dharma-vrata, Rudra-vrata, Bhṛgu-vrata, Sādhya-vrata, Dvādaśādītya-vrata, Kāmadeva-vrata, Dhanavrata, Vāyu-vrata, Virūpākṣa-vrata, Yama-vrata, Maheśvara-vrata, Pitrvrata, Vahni-vrata, Candra-vrata, Paurnamāsī-vrata, Varuna-vrata. Sakra-vrata, Brahmakūrca-vrata, Mahāvrata, Roca-vrata, etc.

The deities, to be worshipped in these Vratas, are called the different forms of Visnu.

In chaps. 215-220 Märkandeya reports to Vajra what Pulastya said to Dälbhya about the procedure of some Vratas. These six chapters form a distinct section ending with the words 'samāptah pulastya-dālbhya-saṃvādah.'

Chaps. 223-224 contain the story of Astāvakra, who learnt, from Kuvera and an old woman, about the various Roca-vratas and the unstable nature of women respectively.

Chaps. 226-342.—In these chapters, which constitute the Hamsagītā, Visņu is said to have assumed the form of Hamsa and spoken to the sages on the following topics:—

Duties of the four main castes and of the mixed castes. Duties of students and householders. Selection of food¹⁸⁸ (bhaksyābhaksya) Purification of things (dravya-śuddhi). Impurity caused by birth, death and miscarriage. Good manners and customs. Sacraments. Various prescriptions and prohibitions Sins and expiations. Results of actions—Chaps. 227-237.

[None of these chapters contains anything striking. They consist mainly of verses derived from the Manu-smrti, Yājñavalkya-smrti, Parāśara-smṛti etc.]

Various unfavourable symptoms (arista) of approaching death.—

Chap. 238.

Evils of nescience (ajñāna), sins, passion, overjoy, self-concert, intoxication, greed, anger, atheism, egotism, want of purity, violation of ācāra, telling lies (except in some special cases), and practice of bimsā (except in certain special cases).—Chaps. 239-252.

the amounts of fine in different kinds of crimes (viz., thefr, murder, adultery, drinking of wine, killing of lower animals, defamation, criminal assault, etc.).—Chaps. 324-338

Duties of vanaprasthas and yatts.—Chaps. 339-340.

[These two chapters contain verses of the Manu-smrti; and the second has a few metrical lines from the Upanisads.]

Results of building new Visnu-temples or repairing old ones, constructing images of Visnu, serving Visnu in various ways, singing his praise, and offering to him various things (including female slaves and dancing girls).—Chap. 341.

The sages' eulogy of Viṣṇu, and their vision of the universe in the latter's body. Praise of the Hamsa-gītā.—Chap. 342.

[The colophon of chap. 342 is followed by the words 'hamsa-gītā samāptā.']

Chaps. 343-348.—In glorifying Visnu as extremely kind to his devotees, Mārkandeya narrates the stories of (a) Visnu's favour to Garuda, although the latter, being offended with the former for assuring safety to a Nāga named Sumukha, boasted of his own capacity and reproached Viṣṇu as ungrateful, (b) Viṣṇu's birth as Vāmana to recover Indra's kingdom from Bah, and (c) king Vasu Uparicara's self-protection in the nether world by means of the Aparājitā Vidyā which was instructed to him by Bṛhaspati, and his winning of Viṣnu's favour.

In these stories there are eulogies of Visnu and Garuda and a description of the Vaisnavi Aparājitā Vidyā.

Chaps. 349-354.—Glorification of Viṣṇu by means of the stories of

(a) Nārada, who went to Sveta-dvīpa in accordance with the advice of Nara and Nārāyaṇa, pleased Vāsudeva there by eulogising him and by taking to ekānta-bhāva, learnt from him about thousands of his past and future manifestations, and won Vāsudeva's favour by zealously worshipping him in accordance with the method described to him by Nara and Narayana (chaps. 349-353), and

(b) a Sāttvata named Visvaksena, who, being 'ekānta-bhāvo-pagata', violated the order of a Māheśvara and worshipped Narasimha, instead of Siva, in a Siva-linga, and whose life was saved from the hands of the Māheśvara by Visnu himself who came out of the Sivalinga by assuming the form of Narasimha (chap. 354).

Chap. 355.—The hymn (called Lingasphota) that was recited by Visvaksena.

Conclusion of the Visnudharmottara.

From the summary of the contents given above it is evident that the Visnudharmottara is an ambitious work containing chapters on multifarious subjects. But it does not claim originality in all matters. There are indications which show that this work has more the character of a compilation than that of an original work. It contains summaries of, and extracts and isolated verses from, some of the early works of the different branches of Sanskrit literature. For instance, it widely utilises the Rāmāyaṇa and incorporates a large number of verses from the Mahābhārata, the Bhagavad-gītā and the Upanisads. In its chapters on astronomy and astrology, it has verses from the works

tasmāt tvam rāja-śārdūla prastum arlio dvijottamān/ vaisnavān vividhān dharmān sarahasyān sasamgrabān//

198 For example, Visnudh. III. 343-355 are based on the Nārāyaniya section of the Sānti-parvan of the Mahābhārata, the verse 'sāmkhyam yogam pāñcarātram' (Visnudh I. 74. 34 and II. 22, 133) is much the same as Mbh XII. 349. 1 and 64; and so on.

¹⁹⁹ For verses borrowed from the Bhagavad-gitā see Visņudh I 38. 10, 52, 5b-7a, 122. 9b-10a, 171. 10-11, 172 8, 20 and 33, and 190, 14 15, II 74. 23, 78. 28-34, and 82, 33; and so on.

of Garga, Vrddha-garga, Patāśara and Brhaspati. 201 In Visnudh. II. 154 (verses 18 and 22) Garga is said to have instructed king Vasu on the method of worshipping the Sakra-dhvaja (banner of Indra); in Visnudh. II. 134-144 Vrddha-garga speaks to Atri on various kinds of omens; and in Visnudh. II. 159-161 Parasara is said to have spoken to Gālava on the mantras of chatra, asva etc. as well as on Glitta-kambala-sants. Visnudh. II. 166-174, which constitute a distinct section called 'Paitamaha-siddhanta' and have Brahma and Bhrgu as the interlocutors, most probably give the summary of a bigger work of some similar title. Visnudh, III. 86-95 (on the building of temples) are said to have been based on an earlier work ascribed to Pitamaha (Brahmā) 202 In its sections on ācāra, vyavahāra and prāyaścitta, the Visnudharmottara refers to Manu as a law-giver on several occasions203 and utilises the language and contents chiefly of the Manu-smrti, 204

201 For instance, the verse 'mayūra-candrikābho vā', which Vallālasena found in his Ms of the Visnudharmottara, occurred in the work of Garga (see Adbhutasagara, p 17), and Visnudh. I. 85. 27b-28a (udayastamane bhanoh etc.) greatly resembled a verse of Garga (see Adbhutasagara, pp. 290-1); Visnudh II. 136. 1. 135. 6a and 7a, 137. 5b-6a, 11a, 7a, 6b and 7b-8a, and 141. 1 occurred in the work of Vrddha-garga (see Adbhutasagara, pp. 416, 427, 429, 441, 442-3, 443, 444 and 563); Visnudh I. 85 34b-352, 26b-272, 33b-34a, and 48b-49a, and III. 238. 2, 31, 27, 26, 28, 19 and 32 occurred in the work or works of Parāśara (see Adbhutasāgara, pp. 66, 86, 90, 101, 516, 517, 526, 541 and 551); Vișnudh. II. 135. 6a and 7a, 156, 1-2 and 5, 137.7a and 6b, 141, 1, and 134, 14-26 occurred in the work of Brhaspati (see Adbhutasagara, pp. 427, 429, 437, 442-3, 443, 563 and 743-4); and so on 204 The Visnudharmottara (especially II, 61-131 and III 226-342) has incorporated a large number of verses from chaps, 2ff of the Manu-smrtt, as the following list will indicate.

Yājñavalkya-smrtı, 205 Nārada-smṛtı, 208 Viṣnu-smṛti 207 and Parāśara-smṛtı. 208 It also seems to have incorporated verses from the Smṛti-works

In its chapters on alamkāra the Viṣṇudharmottara often refers to the opinions of ancient writers on poetics (purātana).²¹³ The stories of Lalitikā (or Lalitā), Sāmbarāyanī and gajendra-moṣaṇa in Viṣṇudh. In narrating these stories the Viṣṇudharmottara not only retains a large number of verses of the Viṣṇudharma but also introduces innovations not found in the latter. For instance, it identifies the river Devika with Uma, wife of Hara, 214 elaborates Sambarayani's account with the mention of the names of many of Visnu's manifestations, and says that two Gandharvas named Hāhā and Hūhū were transformed into the elephant and the crocodile by Devala's curse. So, there is no doubt that the Viṣṇudharmottara gives the later versions of these stories. It is probable that Visnudh. I, chaps. 169-170 (on Mandhatr's activities in his previous birth as a Sūdra) and 196 (on the Visnu-panjara-stotra) also are based on Visnudharma, chaps. 82 and 69 respectively. It is needless to multiply examples. It is to be noted that the Visnudharmottara does not utilise Varāhamihira's Brhatsamhitā, Bhāmaha's Kāvyālamkāra, Dandin's Kavyadarsa, or any other work written later than 500 A. D. and that although the Visnudharmottara is indebted to earlier authorities for many of its materials, it has not failed to improve considerably upon the borrowed portions by innovations of its own. For instance, in his Adbhutasagara 215 Vallalasena quotes from the works of Garga, Vrddha-garga, Parāśara and Brhaspati some verses which do not agree, as regards contents, with those of the Visnudharmottara and the principles of dramaturgy, as laid down in the Visnudharmottara, differ on some points from those of the Natya-śastra.

Of the various types of works known to it, the Viṣṇudharmottara gives us valuable information. It speaks of 'nṛṭya-śāstra', 'gīta-śāstra', 'kalā-sāstra', 'aśvāyurveda', 'hastyāyurveda', 'aśvāyurveda', 'vṛkṣā-yurveda', 'phala-veda', 'sūda-śāstra' etc. and mentions the four Vedas, '200 the Vedāngas, '211 'the Bhārata (i.e. the Mahābhārata) comin his previous birth for attaining extraordinary physical beauty. Of these, the last group of chapters (i.e. chaps. 148-156) begins thus:—

A large number of chapters is found common to the Visnudharmottara and the Matsya-p., as the following list will show.

That as regards these common chapters the Matsya-p. is the bortower, can be proved definitely by a number of evidences, some of which are given below.

In these verses there is clear reference to the contents of chaps. 129-137 (on the story of Purūravas, son of Budha), chaps. 138-145 (on śrāddha), chaps. 146-147 (on vrsa-lakṣana and vrsotsarga), and chap. 130 (verses 3ff., in which Purūravas is said to have possessed uncommon physical beauty). Though in the printed edition of the Viṣnudharmottara there is no chapter or chapters on 'prasūyamāna-dhenu-dāna' and 'krsnājina-dāna', this work was not originally bereft of chapters on these topics. In his Dānasāgara, pp. 531-532 Vallālasena ascribes to the 'Viṣṇudharmottara' twenty-one metrical lines which deal with krṣnājina-dāna and all of which occur in Matsya-p., chap-206. In his Caturvarga-cintāmani, I, pp. 704-5 and 705-7 Hemādri also ascribes to the 'Viṣṇudharmottara' two complete chapters on 'madhyama-kṛṣṇājina-dāna' and 'mahā-kṛṣṇājina-dāna' respectively.

The Matsya-p., on the other hand, contains only the story of Purūravas's penance in his previous birth in chaps. 115-120 (which are practically the same as Visnudh. I, chaps. 148-153 and verses 1-7 of chap. 154) and deals with prasūyamāna-dhenu-dāna, kṛṣṇājina-dāna and vṛṣa-laksana as late as in chaps. 205, 206 and 207 respectively, but it does not contain any chapter on vrsotsarga. Yet the opening verses of chap. 115 are the same as those of Viṣṇudh. I. 148 quoted above. It is also to be noted that although in the Matsya-p. the story of Purūravas's love affairs does not immediately precede the story of his penance in his previous birth but occurs very briefly in chap. 24 and śrāddha is dealt with in chaps. 11-22, the opening verses of chap. 115 do not refer to the contents of the intervening chapters (25-114).

The Matsya-p. describes the characteristics of bulls (visa-laksana) fully in the entire chap. 207, but this topic is dealt with partially in in Visnudh. I. 146, 41b-59 (which are the same as Mar, 207, 24b-41). Moreover, in the Visnudharmottara this topic is begun abruptly with the line 'reabhah sa samudrakhyah satatam kula-vardhanah' (which really forms the second half of the verse 'svetam tu jatharam yasya bhavet pṛṣṭhaṃ ca gopateḥ/ṛṣabhaḥ sa samudrākhyaḥ satatam kula-vardhanah//' as found in Mat. 207. 24). But this abrupt beginning and incomplete treatment of the above-mentioned topic in the Visnudharmottara should not be taken to prove that the Visnudharmottara borrowed its verses from the Matsya-p. As a matter of fact, the original Visnudharmottara contained all those verses on visalaksana which are now found in Matsya-p., chap. 207. In his Dānasāgara, p. 115 Vallālasena ascribes to the 'Visnudharmottata' three verses on vṛṣa-lakṣaṇa which do not occur in Viṣṇudh. I. 148 but are the same as Mat. 207. 13-15.

- (ii) The story of Purūravas in Matsya-p., chaps. 115-120 ends abruptly, whereas in the Viṣṇudharmottara it is continued through a few more chapters to its logical conclusion.
- (iii) In Matsya-p., chap. 195 (which is practically the same as Visnudh. I. 111), the second verse runs as follows:

mahādevena īṣayaḥ śaptāḥ svāyambhuve 'ntare/ teṣām vaivasvate prāpte saṃbhavaṃ mama kūtaya//

This verse, as occurring in the Matsya-p., has no preceding story or statement to refer to, whereas in the Visnudharmottara it occurs in chap. 111 of Khanda I and refers to Visnudh. I. 110. 28.

(iv) A textual comparison between the Viṣṇudharmottara and the Matsya-p. shows that the latter work has adapted the above-mentioned chapters of the Viṣṇudharmottara to its own interlocutors often by using unsuitable words. For instance, for Viṣṇudh. I. 148.8 (purūravā madrapatiḥ karmaṇā kena bhārgava/babhūva karmaṇā kena kurūpaś ca tathā dvija//), Mat. 115.9 reads 'purūravā madrapatiḥ... pārtbivaḥ/babhūva..... virūpaś caiva sūtaja//; in Viṣṇudh. II. 24. 62 Puṣkara addresses Bhārgava Rāma as 'manuja-śārdūla' ('a tiger among the descendants of Manu, i.e. among men'), and this word ('manuja-śārdūla'), though not applicable to Manu himself, has been retained in Matsya-p., chap. 215 (verse 88) in which Matsya speaks to Manu; and so on.

(v) The story of Savitri in Visnudh. II. 36-41 naturally follows chaps. 33-35 (on the conduct and duties of chaste women, and the treatment they deserve from the king). But the Matsya-p., though containing this story in chaps. 208-214, has no chapters corresponding to chaps. 33-35 of the Visnudharmottara. Moreover, in chaps. 208-214 the Matsya-p. has a large number of additional verses which are not found in the Visnudharmottara.

The above evidences are perhaps sufficient to show that the Matsya-p. borrowed the above-mentioned chapters from the Visnudharmottara.

We shall now try to determine the date of composition of the Visnudharmottara.

This work is quite familiar with the Greek terms 'hibuka', 'kendra', 'lipta', 'sunaphā' etc.²²⁷ and mentions 'horā', ²²⁸ 'dreskāṇa', ²²⁹ and the names of the rāśis²³⁰ and week-days²³¹ in several places. By its mention of Mülasthāna²³² as a place of Sun-worship as well as of the girdle called 'aviyānga', ²³³ worn by the Sun-worshippers, it betrays

227 See Visnudh, II. 167ff

228 Visnudh I. 83 47ff.; II. 168ff; III 96 97, and so on.

The occurrence of the term bord in two verses quoted by Varahamihira from Garga shows that it came to be used by the Indians much carlier than the sixth century A D., but there is no evidence to prove that it was used by them earlier than the end of the first century A.D

229 Visnudh II. 167ff., III. 96. 97.

²³⁰ Visnudh. I, 72. 11, 73 8ff., 84 1ff., and 94. 6ff., II. 18.11, II. 167ff.; III 319 38ff., and so on.

The total absence of the term rāsi in all early works down to the time of the Yājñavalkya-smrti, tends to show that the Indians were not familiar with the rāsis earlier than the second century A.D.

231 Visnudh I, 59, 2-5, and 60, 5; II 47 4, 50, 68, and 52 84 and 124; III 317, 16ff., and so on.

The earliest dated mention of a week-day has been traced in the Eran inscription of 484 A D. (See Fleet, Gupta Inscriptions, pp. 88-89).

its knowledge of the Persian elements in the method of worshipping the Sun. It utilises, as we have already seen, the language and contents of the Upanṣads, Mahābhārata, Bhagavad-gītā, Bharata's Nātyaśāstra, the astronomical works of Garga, Vrddha-garga, Parāśara and Brhaspati, the Dharmaśāstras of Manu, Yājñavalkya, Nātada and Parassara, and the Visnudharma. By its description of 'Purana' as consisting of four Padas254 it points definitely to the Vayu-p.255 which only claims to consist of, and is practically divided into, four Padas, viz., Prakriyā, Upodghāta, Anuşanga and Upasamhāra. In the story of Purūravas and Urvašī, as given in chaps. 129-137 of Khanda I, it clearly betrays the influence of Kālidāsa's Vikramorvašīya.236 Vișnudh. I. 208 contains the description of the hurry and eagerness of women of Rajagrha to have a glance at Bharata when the latter was entering that city. This description bears the unmistakable stamp of the influence of Kālidāsa's Raghuvamsa.237 Hence the Visnudharmottara cannot be earlier than 400 A.D.

Again, the Visnudharmottara has been profusely drawn upon by almost all the Smrti-commentators and Nibandha-writers, viz., Bhava-

prakriyā prathamaḥ pādah kathāvastu-pangrahah/ upodghātānuṣangau ca tathā samhāra eva ca/ catuṣpādam hi kathitam purānam bhrgu-nandana//

The first two lines are the same as Vayu-p. 4. 13. (The Vayu-p reads the second line as 'upodghato'nusangas ca upasamhara eva ca').

235 The Vaju-p. and the Brahmanda-p. were originally the same

236 The similarity in ideas and expressions between the Visnudharmottara and the Vikramorvasiya will be evident from the following parallel passages.

(a) Visnudh, I. 133 52.—Before leaving Urvasi with Pururavas, Rambhā says to the latter:

yathā ceyam sakhī mahyam notkanthām kurute šubbā/ sakhī-janasya svatgyasya tathā kāryam tvayānagha//

Cf. Vikramorvasiya, Act III—citralehhā—tā jahā iam me piasahi saggassa ņa ukkanthedi taha vaassena kādavvam.

(b) Visnich. 1. 135. 26-33 (in which Pururavas variety enquires for Urvasi to beasts, birds and plants).—Cf. Vikramorvasiya, Act IV.

deva, Vijnāneśvara, Jīmūtavāhana, Aparārka, Aniruddhabhaṭta, Vallūlasena, Halāyudha, Devanabhaṭṭa, Hemādri, Madanapāla, Mādhavācārya, Sūlapāṇi, Caṇdeśvara, Vidyāpati, Vācaspati-miśra, Govindānanda, Srīnāthācāryacūdāmaṇi, Gadādhara, Raghunandana and others. Some of these Smṛti-writers have made their quotations under the title 'Viṣṇu-dharmottara', some of them (such as Bhavadeva and Vijnāneśvara) have done so under the name of 'Mārkandeya' (the speaker in the Viṣnu-dharmottara), 238 and the rest (such as Jīmūtavāhana, Aparārka, Devanabhatta, Hemādri and others) have ascribed some of the quoted verses to

238. The verses of 'Mārkandeya' (the word 'mārkandeya' being often used in the masculine gender), quoted in the commentaries and Nibandhas, are, except in a very few cases, not found in the present Mārkandeya-p.

The facts that many of the verses ascribed to 'Markandeya' are found in the Visnudharmottara wherein the sage Markandeya is the speaker, that the same verses are sometimes ascribed to the 'Visnudharmottara' in some places (viz., in Kālavīveka, pp 538 and 539, Caturvarga-cintāmanī, III 11 pp 379-380, and Varsa-kaumudi, p. 103, Tithi-viveka, pp. 6-7, and so on) and to 'Mārkandeya' in others (viz, in Mitaksara on Yaj III, 289, Apararka's com, on the Yaj, p. 429, Smrti-candrikā, II, p. 620, Smrti-candrikā, IV, p 49, Caturvargacintamani, III it pp. 93 and 116, and so on), and that in some places (viz., in Kālaviveka, p. 265, Hāralatā pp. 19 and 29, Smrti-candrikā, IV, pp 85-86 and 332, and so on) verses of the Visnudharmottara are quoted with the words 'Visnudharmottare mārkandeyah', show that 'Mārkandeya' to whom these verses are ascribed in the Nibandhas, is, in the great majority of cases, identical with the sage Markandeya, the speaker in the Visnudharmottara cases in which the verses ascribed to 'Markandeya' are not found in the Visnudharmottara, the changes in the text of the latter are to be held responsible. As to the few cases in which the verses of 'Markandeya' are found in the Markandeya-p, it may be said that due to a confusion created by the similarity between the name of the sage and the title of the Purana, verses of the Mārkandeya-p. were sometimes wrongly ascribed to 'Mārkandeya' or vice versa. For instance, the verses 'ekabhaktena naktena' and 'sukla-paksasya pūrvāhne', which are ascribed to the 'Mārkandeya-p.' in Caturvarga-cintāmani, II. 1, p 100 and III 1 p. 320 respectively but are not found in the present Purana of the same title, are ascribed to 'Markandeya' (the word 'markandeya' being used in the musculine gender) in Caturvarga cintāmani III. 11 pp. 176 and 575 respectively See also Apararka's com. on the Yaj, p. 206, Smrticandrikā, IV, p. 64, Smrti-tattva, I, p 109 and II, pp. 88 and 95, and so on, wherein the former verse is ascribed to 'Markandeya'

'Mārkaṇḍeya' and the rest to the 'Viṣṇudharmottara'. In his account of India Alberūnī refers to and draws upon the present Viṣṇudharmottara on many occasions, and most of these references and quotations have been traced by Buhler in the extant text of this work. The present Kālikā-p., which was written somewhere about Kāmarūpa not later than the first half of the eleventh century A. D., knows and mentions the present Viṣṇudharmottara in its encyclopâedic character. So also does the present Naradiya-p. (I. 94), which refers to the contents of the Visnudharmottara and takes it to be the second part of the Visnu-p. According to Sūlapāni, Bālaka and Srīkara knew the Visnudharmottara and utilised its contents in their respective works.241 The spurious Agni-p. (now available in print), which was written, most probably in western Bengal, during the ninth century A.D., has incorporated a large number of chapters and verses from the Visnudharmottara, as a comparison of Agni-p., chaps. 151-172, 218-237, 245 ff. and 259-272 with Visnudh. II, chaps, 80 ff., 76ff., 21ff., 16ff., 15. 124ff., 105ff. and 159ff. will show. In most of these chapters the Agni-p. has retained Puskara as the speaker, but in a few Agni appears in his place; sometimes the Agni-p. rewrites the verses briefly by retaining as much as possible the language of the Visnudharmottara; and although, following the Visnudharmottara, the Agni-p retains the old order of the Naksatras from Krttika of Bharani in all other places, it replaces this order with the new one in verse 8 of chap, 219 in spite of the mention of the old order in the corresponding passage (viz., II. 22. 20-24) of the Visnudharmottara. The Visnu-sahasra-nāma-stotrabhāṣya, ascrībed to Samkarācārya,242 names and draws upon the Viṣṇudharmottara as well as the Viṣṇudharma. From all these references, quotations and common passages it is evident that by the middle of eighth century A. D. the present Visnudharmottara attained great popularity as a highly authoritative work in all parts of India. It has already been mentioned that the Matsya-p. has borrowed a large number of chapters from the Vışnudharmottara. Hence the Vışnudharmottara must have been written not later than 600 A. D. On p. 460 of his Kalaviveka Jimūtavāhana ascribes to the 'Brhad-visnudharma' a few verses which have Markandeya and Vajra as the interlocutors and are the same as Visnudh. I. 161. 1-8; and on p. 464 he quotes two more verses from a Visnudharmottaramita, but these two verses do not occur in the Visnudharmottara. The titles of these two works as well as the nature of the quoted verses show that the Brhad-viṣṇudharma and the Viṣṇudharmottarāmṛta, which must have preceded Jīmūtavāhana by a few centuries, were distinct works written on the basis of the Visnudharmottara. Hence the Visnudharmottara must have preceded the Brhad-visnudharma and the Visnudharmottaramita by a few centuries, otherwise it could not be recognised as an authoritative work at the time of composition of these two works. In his commentary on the Parāśara-smṛti Mādhavācārya ascribes to 'Kātyāyana' a verse which mentions the 'Viṣṇudharmottara' along with the name of Markandeya as the speaker and refers to the contents of Visnudh. I. 140. 19a.243 We do not know definitely who this Katyayana was. He might have been identical the author of the Chandoga-parisista or with that either with of a Dharma-śāstra which is now lost. Whoever this Kātyāyana might have been, he could not be later than 600 A. D. It has already been said that the Visnudharmottara has not utilised Bhāmaha's Kāvyālamkāra and Daņḍin's Kāvyādarśa. These two works mention a much greater number of Alamkaras and a considerably smaller number of Prahelikas and thus indicate the comparatively early origin of the Visnudharma.244 Nay, there is ample evidence to prove definitely that both Bhamaha and Dandin knew the Visnudharmottara and used it in their respective works.245 In describing the method of building temples in chaps, 86-95 of Khanda III the Visnudharmottara makes no mention of the three styles of architecture popularly known as Nāgara, Dravida and Vesara, of which the first two developed into distinction after the Gupta period. According to some commentators, Brahmagupta wrote his Sphuta-brahma-siddhānta in 628 A.D. on the basis of the 'Paitamaha-siddhanta' as found in the Visnudharmottara. This view of the commentators, which most probably owed its origin to some tradition as well as to the lines common to Brahmagupta's work and the Visnudharmottara,246 seems to be highly plausible because of the fact that the Visnudharmottara does not refer to or utilise the works of Varāhamihira or any other later author on astrology and astronomy. As a matter of fact, we have not been able to find any work, written later than 500 A.D., which has been utilised in the Visnudharmottara. Visnudh. I. 9 gives the names of the tribes living in the different parts of India but does not mention the Hūnas. On the other hand, it speaks of the Sakas and the Yavanas as living in the south-western and western parts respectively. The Visnudharmottara believes in 'thousands of manifestations' (prādurbhāva-sahasrāņi) of Visņu and gives shorter or longer lists of these (including Matsya, Kūrma, Varāha, Nṛ-varāha, Vāmana, Narasımha, Bhārgava Rāma, Dattātreya, Nara-Nārāyaṇa, Haṃsa, Aśva, Mayura etc.) in numerous places, but it does not refer to any group of 'ten incarnations', nor does it mention the Buddha anywhere except 244 A study of the history of Sanskrit Poetics shows that the number of Alamkāras was multiplied in later times, but the Prahelikās, which were once very widely popular, came to lose their importance as literary compositions and experienced a gradual decrease in their number.

According to P. V. Kane, Bālaka 'flourished before 1100 A.D.' and Srikara 'must be placed somewhere between 800 and 1050 A.D.' and probably in the ninth century.—See Kane, History of Dharmaśāstra, I, pp 283-4 and 266-8.

245 For a datailed treatment (in Bengali) of the influence of the Visnudharmottara on Bhāmaha and Dandin see Our Heritage, II, 1954, pp 375-404, and III, 1955.

246 For instance, the line 'sarvarksa-parivartais' ca nāksatra iti cocyate' is ascribed to the Brahma-siddhānta in Smrti-tattva, I, p 741 but to the Visnudharmottara in Kālanirnaya, p. 63, Varsa-kaumudī, p 224, Smrti-tattva, I, pp.740-1, and so on.

in III. 351 (verse 54) which is most probably spurious. It should be mentioned here that the Buddha began to be regarded as an incarnation of Viṣṇu not very much eather than 500 A.D.²⁴⁷ The Viṣṇu-dharmottara names the Nakṣatras on many occasions, and it does so invariably in the order from Kṛṭṭikā to Bhataṇi,²⁴⁸ which, as the Yājñavalkya-smṛṭi, the latest books of the Mahābhātata,²⁴⁹ and Varāhamihira's Bṛhat-samhitā indicate, held ground at best down to the latter half of the fifth century A.D.

From all the evidences adduced above it is clear that the Visnu-dharmottara cannot be dated earlier than 400 A.D. and later than 500 A.D. Bühler also is of opinion that 'the date of its composition cannot be placed later than about 500 A.D.'250 This early date of the Viṣṇudharmottara is fully supported by its non-Tantric character as well as by the frequent use of the word 'prādurbhāva' instead of 'avatāra' which occurs only in two places (viz., in I. 172. 56 and III. 353.8).

Although the numerous cross-references in the Visnudharmottara and indicate that the above-mentioned general date may be taken to be that

According to M. Winternitz, the Visnudharmottara was 'compiled between 628 and 1000 A.D' (see Winternitz, History of Indian Literature, I, p.580)
Stella Kramrisch is of opinion that this work 'cannot date earlier than the 5th century A.D.' and later than Sankarācārya (See Journal of the Department of Letters, XI, p. 3).

251 For instance, Visnudh. of the great majority of its chapters, there are certainly some extracts and even complete chapters which are spurious. For instance, Visnudh. 1. 105.5-20 (in which Pulastya speaks to a Brahmin named Dalbhya on Aśūnya-śayana-dvitīyā) and 1. 146. 1-41a (in which Pulastya's speech to Dālbhya on the ways of release from rebirths-samsāra-mukti-hetuis followed by an interlocution between Kṛṣṇa and Yudhiṣthira) must bave been added at a comparatively late date. These verses begin abruptly with the words 'dalbhya uvaca', although nothing is said in any of the preceding verses about Dalbhya and Pulastya; and their subjectmatter is quite unconnected with those of verses 1-4 of chap. 145 and verses 41b ff. of chap. 146. As a matter of fact, they create a serious breach in the topics of the chapters and verses preceding and following them. The spurious character of these verses is further shown definitely by the facts that they occur neither in the Matsya-p. (although it contains verses 1-2 and 4 of chap. 145 and verses 41b-59 of chap. 146 of Visnudh. I) nor in the Ms of the Visnudharmottara noticed by H.P. Shastri252 and that their subject-matter is not mentioned in Visnudh. I. 148, 1-3 which refer to the topics dealt with in the preceding chapters (129-147). As the Visnudharma contains a good number of consecutive chapters dealing with the same topics and also others and having the same interlocutors as those of the verses mentioned above, 283 it is undoubted that somebody took most of these verses from the Visnudharma, adapted them to the interlocution between Vajra and Markandeya, and then inserted them into the Visnudharmottara after the Matsya-p. had plagrarised chapters and verses from it.

Sımılarly, Vışnudlı. III. 215-220 (on Sugatı-dvādaśī-vrata, Sugati-paurnamāsī-kalpa, Santānāṣtamī-vrata, Ası-dhārā-vrata, Ananta-dvādaśī-

In this Ms, chap 145 deals with 'śrāddha-deśānukīrtana', chap. 146 with 'vrsa-laksana', and chap. 147 with 'vrsotsarga-vidhi'. These chapters correspond respectively to chaps. 144, 146 (verses 41b to the end) and 147 of the printed ed of the Visnudharmottara and do not deal with Aśūnya-śayana-dvitīyā etc vrata and Brahma-dvādašī-vrata) must be later additions. These six chapters have Pulastya and Dālbhya as the interlocutors and form a distinct section ending with the words 'samāptaḥ pulastya-dālbhya-saṃvādaḥ'. They do not occur in the Matsya-p., and of them the first three and the fifth agree with Viṣṇudharma, chaps. 4, 5, 7 and 8 respectively, in which Pulastya speaks to Dālbhya. There is no doubt that the Viṣṇudharmottara derived these chapters from the Viṣṇudharma.

As regards the provenance of the Visnudharmottara it can be said that this work must have been compiled either in Kashmir or in the northernmost part of the Punjab. The evidences supporting this view are as follows.

- (i) The law of inheritance (with regard to the right of the father and the son to the property inherited from the grandfather), as given in the Viṣṇudharmottara, 254 is the same as that of the Mitākṣarā school.
- (ii) The incidents of most of the stories given in the Visnudharmottara have been located in the western part of Northern India, especially in or about the land of the five rivers.²⁵⁸
- (iii) Camels have been mentioned in connection with donation etc. 256
- (iv) Vışnudh. III. 314 mentions different kinds of rice, of which Rakta-śāli (which is a variety of Sāli rice) is said to be the best.
- (v) In giving an account of the distribution of tribes in India, the Visnudharmottara (l. 9) divides this country into several parts, viz., central, eastern, south-eastern, southern, south-western, western, north-western, northern and north-eastern. The localities, comprised in these parts, show that the author of the Visnudharmottara must have lived somewhere about the land of the 'five rivers'.

- (vi) The rivers Sarayū, Yamunā, İkṣumatī, Sarasvatī, Dṛṣadvatī, Devikā, Sindhu, Vitastā, Candrabhāgā, Irāvatī, Vipāśā and Satadru, especially the last seven, have been mentioned and praised as divine on many occasions. For instance, the Devikā²⁶⁸ and the Vitastā²⁶⁹ have been identified with 'Umā, wife of Saṃkara', and the Irāvatī, Satadru and Sarasvatī have been called 'devī'. As a matter of fact, the author of the Viṣṇudharmottara seems to have created occasions for praising these rivers whenever possible.
- (vii) In Visnudh. I. 162. 61-65 the meeting places of the following rivers have been described as highly sacred:—(a) Gangā and Sarayū, (b) Gangā and Soṇa, (c) Gangā and Ikṣumatī, (d) Gangā and Yamunā, (e) Gomatī and Sarayū, (f) Kauśikī and Ganḍakī, (g) Vipāśā and Devahradā, (h) Vipāśā and Satadru, (i) Sindhu and Irāvatī, (j) Candrabhāgā and Vitastā, and (k) Sindhu and Vitastā.
- (viii) In Visnudh. I. 162. 33-35 the confluence of the Candrabhāgā and the Tausī (a small river in Kashmir) is praised as follows:—

sā kadācin mayā sārdham tauṣim nāma nadīm yayau/, tasyāś ca samgamah punyo yatrāsīc candrabhāgayā//, candrabhāgā saric-chreṣṭhā yatra sītāmalodakā/, mahādeva-jaṭā-jūṭe gangā nipatitā purā// candreṇa bhāgato nyastā candrabhāgā smrtā tataḥ/ tat-kāla-tapta-salilā tauṣī tatrārka-nandinī//

- (x) Visnudh. I. 139 states that Visnu assumed the form of Varāha, raised the earth after killing Hiranyākṣa, and stationed himself on the Varaha-parvata (in Kashmir), and that it was at this place that the custom of offering sraddba to the deceased was first introduced by him in the Vaivasvata Manvantara.
- (xi) A study of the Visnudharmortara shows that the author or authors of this work had an intimate acquaintance with the geography of Kashmir as well as of the northern part of the Punjub. In Visnudh. III. 125. 10 Kashmir has been mentioned as a seat of Vișnu,

From the evidences adduced above it is highly probable that the Visnudharmottara was composed somewhere in Southern Kashmir. Buhler and Winternitz also take it to be a work of Kashmir.268

The Visqueharmottara is avowedly a Vaisnava work claiming to deal with the 'various duties of the Vaisnavas'.284 It belongs to the Pancaratras and is not 'a production of the Bhagavata sect' as Bühler takes it to be. 265 It recommends the Pancaratra method of Visnuworship, adds great importance to the due observance of 'panca-kala', 266 holds the scriptures of the Pancaratras in high esteem,267 and extols one who honours, or makes gifts to, those who are versed in these scriptures.268 According to the Viṣṇudharmottara,269 Nārāyaṇa 15 the highest deity and Supreme Brahma (param brahma) He is the original source of both matter and spirit. For the sake of creation he takes to gunas and appears as Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Hara. Viṣṇu, who carries on the work of protection with the help of Laksmi, exists in different parts of the universe by assuming different forms through māyā. In the world of mortals he resides with Lakṣmī in Svetadvīpa which is said to be situated in the ocean of milk lying on the east of the mountain Meru. The Visnudharmottara calls Nārāyana 'caturātman' and believes in the doctrine of Vyuha as expounded in the Pancaratra Samhitas. 210 It states that by persistently worshipping Visnu with absolute devotion (ekanta-bhava) according to the Pancaratra method, one can pass to Svetadvīpa after death, reside there for long in a divine form, and then attain final emancipation by entering Vāsudeva after passing successively through the Sun (āditya-mandalam), Brahma, Aniruddha, Pradyumna and Samkarşana. It lays special stress on image-worship²⁷¹ and recommends to the Visnu-worshippers both the Vedic mantras (viz., savitri etc.) and the sectarian ones (tom namo nārāyaṇāya' and 'om namo bhagavate vāsudevāya' of eight and twelve syllables respectively) but says that women and Sudras are allowed to use the latter mantras only.272 As it regards Visnu as 'sarva-devamaya' and 'sarva-rūpadhara,'278 it recommends the vows and worship of other deities also and thereby tries to infuse the worshippers of these deities with Vaisnava ideas. It looks upon Kṛṣṇa as one of the manifestations of Visnu and seems to add little importance to cowherd Kṛṣṇa (of Vṛndāvana), who is mentioned very briefly on two occasions only.274 It adds special importance to the Pāśupatas, whose scriptures it mentions along with those of the Pancaratras in more places than one,275 but it subordinates Samkara to Nārāyaṇa So, it seems that the Pāncarātras had the Pāsupatas as their most powerful rivals.

The Viṣṇudharmottara is practically free from Tantric influence. It advises the Vaiṣṇavas to worship Viṣṇu and other deities in images, pictures, altars, pitchers (full of water), or lotuses (drawn on the ground)278 and recommends the use of Vedic or Puranic mantras or both in vows and worship. But it does not recognise the Tantric 'yantra' as a medium of worship, nor does it prescribe the use of Tantric mantras. The Tantric bijas, found in some of the stotras and kavacas contained in the Visnudharmottara, 277 are most probably due to the influence of the Pancaratra Samhitas, which the Visnudharmottara follows in form and ideas.

Although the Visnudharmottara decries the Pasandas as extremely unholy and detestable, it seems to have been influenced by Buddhism. It recommends the worship of Aidūka, Dharma and Vyoman and describes their images. 278 By its recognition of Mayura, 279 Hamsa 280 etc. as manifestations of Visnu and by its statement that whenever there is decline of dharma, Vasudeva is born, according to necessity, among gods, men, Gandharvas, serpents, birds, or others and behaves like those creatures among whom he is born, 281 the Visnudharmottara reminds us of the Jataka stories.

The Visnudharmottara is written mostly in verse, but some of its chapters, or parts thereof, are written in prose.283 Regarding the language of this work it may be said that like many other Puranas it contains a number of ungrammatical forms. For instance, it has 'vartata' for 'vartamanena' (l. 1.14), 'yatrastham' for 'yatra tişthantam' (I. 4.38), 'tatrastham' for 'tatra tisthantam' (I. 6.58 and 61), 'sandhyāsaha' for 'sandhyayā saha' (I. 26.8), 'prathame' for 'prathamam' (I. 139.1), 'duhitām' for 'duhitaram' (I. 252.8), 'patnayaḥ' for 'patnyah' (III. 67.15a and III. 103.21), and so on.

3. THE NARASIMHA-PURĀNA

The present Narasımha-purāna, 283 which is also called Nṛsimha-(or Nārasimha-) purāṇa, is one of the oldest and most important of the extant Vaiṣṇava Upapurānas It begins with a salutation to Narasimha and states that once, in the month of Māgha, some Vedaknowing sages came with their disciples to Prayāga from different 283 Edited by Uddhavācārya and published by Gopal Narayan & Co, Bombay Second edition, Bombay 1911.

This is a very careless edition based on three Mss which have been referred to simply as क, ख and ज, but of which no information or description has been given by the editor

In this edition, the chapter immediately following chap 10 is called eleventh at the beginning but twelfth at the end. As a matter of fact, chaps 11 and 12 have been combined without any demarcation, though Ms 4 says that chap 12 begins from verse 54

Though I am fully conscious of the fact that no serious chronological deduction should be based on this worthless edition, the absence of any better, or even a second, edition of this Purāna has compelled me to utilise it here. I have, however, consulted a number of Mss of this work and have not used any evidence which is not supported at least by, most of these Mss.

For Mss of this Purana see

The list of its contents, as given by Mitra, shows that it lacks the story of Dhruva as occurring in chap. 31, verses 1-97 of the printed edition; the story of Prahlada as given in chaps. 40 (verses 60b-61b), 41-43 and 44 (verses 1-13) of the printed edition; the description of the characteristic evils of the Kali age as given in chap. 54, verses 8-61 of the printed edition; as well as chaps. 64 (on the interlocution of Narada and Pundarika on the glory of Narayana) and 68 (on the glorification of the Narasumha-p) of the printed edition.

It also seems to lack the story of the Pandavas' killing of the demons Bahuroman and Sthulasiras on the bank of the Reva for carrying away Draupadi by force (as given in chap. 33, verses 15-85 and chap. 34, verse 1 of the printed ed); and the story of Indra's getting rid of his female form by muttering the eight-syllabled mantra 'om namo narayanaya' (as found in chap. 63, verses 10-119a of the printed ed.).

It inserts a chapter on the praise of holy places (tîrtha-prasamsā) in Ayo-dhyā immediately after the chapters on Rāma-prādurbhāva.]

but its end and final colophon are not given by Aufrecht, Aufrecht's description of its contents shows that it not only lacks, like Mitra's Ms, the stories of Dhruva and Prahlada and the description of the characteristics of the Kali age, but also the topics on Yoga (as found in chap 61 of the printed ed.), and the enumeration of tirthas (as found in chaps 65-67 of the printed ed.).

It also seems to lack the story of the killing of the demons Bahuroman after mutual greetings, they were engaged in 'talks about Kṛṣṇa' (kṛṣṇāśritāh kathāh), there arrived a Sūta named Lomaharsana, who was a disciple of Vyāsa and was versed in the Purānas (purāṇajūa). After Lomaharsana had been duly received by the sages, Bharadvāja thanked him for having narrated to them the Saṃhitā named Vārāha (i e. the Varāha-purāna) during the great sacrifice instituted by Saunaka and then wishing to hear from him the 'Paurāna-saṃhitā named Nāra-simha' put to him the following questions for detailed treatment:

- (1) Whence did this universe, with its moving and stationary objects, originate? Who preserves it? And where will it go after dissolution?
- (2) What is the extent of the earth?
- (3) What acts please Narasimha?
- (4) How does creation begin, and how does it end?

and Sthülasıras by the Pāndavas, and the story of Indra's getting rid of his female form by muttering the eight-syllabled mantra.

The story of Rāma-prādurbhāva is given in this Ms in five chapters as against six (viz, 47-52) of the printed ed. (See also Dacca Univ Ms No 2713, described below, which also gives in five chapters the contents of chaps 47-52 of the printed ed)

It does not insert any chapter on the praise of holy places in Ayodhyā.

It lacks chaps 64 and 68 of the printed ed

As Eggeling does not give the contents of the chapters, it is not known

- (5) What are the four Yugas? How are these to be reckoned, and what are their characteristics?
- (6) What will be the condition of people during the Kali age?
- (7) How is Narasimha to be worshipped, and what places, mountains and rivers are sacred to him?
- (8) How were the gods, Manus, Vidyadharas and others first created?
- (9) Which kings were sacrificers, and who attained the highest

The Sūta consented to narrate the 'Nārasiṃha Purāṇa.' Consequently, he saluted his teacher Vyāsa, through whose favour he learnt definitely whether this Ms also lacks the stories of Dhruva and Prahlāda, the story of the Pāṇḍavas' killing of the demons Bahuroman and Sthūlaśiras, the story of Indra's getting rid of his female form by muttering the eight-syllabled mantra, and the description of the evils of the Kali age. It is also not known whether it inserts a chapter on holy places in Ayodhyā.

(ii) The next two Mss (Cat. Nos. 3376-77), which also are written in Devanāgarī and of which the second one lacks the first Adhyāya, are practically the same as the preceding Ms. Their concluding verses are (with some variations in readings) the same as those of the Ms noticed by Mitra, and their colophon is as follows:—

iti śrīnarasiṃhapurāṇe ādye dharmārtha-kāma-mokṣa-pradāyini para-brahma-svarūpiṇi idam ekaṃ suniṣpannaṃ dhyeyo nārāyaṇaḥ sadā/na vāsudevāt param asti kiṃcit//iti narasiṃha-purāṇaṃ samāptam//

- (iii) The fourth Ms (Cat. No. 3378) is written in Devanāgarī by different hands. It was copied in about 1500-1600 A.D., its last five folios being supplied in 1789 A.D. It begins with the verse 'nakha-mukha-vilikhita-diti-tanayoraḥ-'. In the modern portion of this Ms the story of Indra's getting rid of his female form by muttering the eight-syllabled mantra (as found in chap. 63, verses 10-119a of the printed ed.) and the interlocution between Nārada and Puṇḍarīka on the glory of Nārāyaṇa (as occurring in chap. 64 of the printed ed.) are given.

•	sımha-p

On the other hand, the printed edition lacks chap 46 (on holy places in Ayodhyā) and about 25 verses (on the selection of leaves and flowers for Visnu-worship) of chap. 51 of the Ms.

This Ms deals with the story of Rāma-prādurbhāva in five chapters (viz., 41-45) as against six (viz., 47-52) of the printed ed, chap. 45 of the former consisting of chaps. 51-52 of the latter.

The agreement between this Ms and that described by Mitra is very close, and as both these Mss were copied in Saka 1567, they are either based on the same original or derived from the same archetype.

(ii) Ms No. 323, which was procured from Ulā in the district of Nadia, is written in Bengali characters and consists of 131 folios, of which fols 37-40 (containing chaps. 19-27, and verses 1-16 of chap 28 of the printed ed) are missing and fol. 131 is wrongly numbered 139. It contains 64 chapters and is dated Saka 1588.

It begins and ends with the same verses (though with occasional variations in readings) as the preceding Ms, and its final colophon (viz, iti śri-narasimha-purāne ādye dharmārtha-moksa-pradāyini parambrahma-svarūpini idam ekam sunispannam dhyeyo nārāyaṇaḥ sadā/na vāsudevāt param asti kimeit narasimha-purāṇaṃ samāptam/śubham astu śakābdāh 1588/haraye namah govindāya namah/) also agrees very closely with that of the latter. (It should be mentioned here that the colophon of its final chapter, which is almost the same as its final colophon, runs thus,—iti śri-narasimha-purāṇe ādye. na vāsudevāt param asti kimeit prathamo'dhyāyaḥ/).

This Ms lacks the same sections of the printed ed as the preceding Ms It also contains, like the preceding Ms, a chapter (viz, chap 47 on holy places in Ayodhyā) and about 50 lines (on the selection of leaves and flowers for Visnuworship) in chap. 52, which do not occur in the printed ed.

Thus, this Ms seems to have been derived from the same archetype as the sages Marīci, Atri, Angiras etc. from Brahmā's mind; Brahmā's creation of Satarūpā, who was given in marriage to Manu, creation by the sages except Nārada who was given to nivṛtti-dharma; creation by Rudra; creation by Daksa; descendants of Dakṣa's daughters. (—Chaps. 4-5). Description of the saṃsāra-vṛkṣa (tree of rebirths) which causes delusion of the mind; praise of jñāna, Viṣnu-worship and meditation on Viṣṇu-Brahma as the means of getting rid of all sufferings brought on by rebirths, method and praise of muttering the eight-syllabled preceding Ms The difference in the number of chapters in these two Mss is due to the fact that the story of Rāma-prādurbhāva is given in the preceding Ms in five chapters as against six (viz., chaps 41-46) of the present one

(111) Ms No 284A, which was procured from Nalāhāti in the district of Burdwan, consists of 121 folios and 1s written in Bengali script. It is dated Saka 1742 and contains 53 chapters, of which chaps. 14-53 are not numbered

It begins with the verses 'nārāyanam namaskrtya', 'tapta-hātaka-keśāgra' and 'nakha-mukha-vilikhita-diti-tanayorah-', and ends thus:—

In this Ms, chap 53 consists of chaps 57 (verses 8-20) and 65 of the printed edition. In verses 1-16 of chap 53 of this Ms (which correspond to verses 8-20 of chap. 57 of the printed ed.) king Sahasrānika asks Mārkandeya to describe to him the duties of the four castes and orders of life (varnāśramadharma) Consequently, Mārkandeya begins to report what Hārīta, being requested by some sages to speak on 'varnāśrama-dharma', 'yoga-śāstra' and 'visnu-tattva' (cf bhagavan sarvva-dharmmajña sarvva-dharmma-pravarttaka/varnānām āśramānāñca dharmmān prabrūhi śāśvatān/samāsād yoga-śāstantu yam dhyātvā mucyate narah/visnu-tattvam muni-śrestha tvam hi nah paramo guruh/), said to them on these topics But in these verses Hārīta is found only to introduce his subject by briefly narrating the origin of the four castes and the place fit for their residence and to say nothing on Varnāśrama-dharma etc On the other hand, in verses 17ff. of this chapter (which corresponds to chap. 65 of the printed ed.) Sūta, being requested by Bharadvāja, names the 68 places mantra 'om namo nārāyaṇāya' for the purpose. (—Chaps. 16-18). Enumeration of Āditya's 108 names (including Sambhu, Tvaṣtr, Kapila, Mṛtyu, Hari, Haṃsa, Pratardana, Taraṇi, Mahendra, Varuṇa, Viṣṇu, Agni etc.) as mentioned by Viśvakarman (chap. 20). 'Short' genealogical lists of the kings of the Solar and the Lunar race, the former ending with Budha (v.l. 'Buddha' in some Mss), son of Suddhodana, and the latter with Kṣemaka, son of Naravāhana and grandson of Udayana and Vāsavadattā (chaps. 22-23). Accounts of the past, present and future Manus and Manvantaras (chap. 24). History of the prominent kings of the Solar and the Lunar race (vaṃśānucarita), especially of those who worshipped Narasiṃha and performed sacrifices sacred to Visnu Hence it is sure that in the original Ms from which our present one was copied, verses 1-16 of chap, 53 were followed by chapters on Varnāśrama-dharma, Yoga and Visnu-tatīva, 1e by chaps, 57 (verses 21-30—on the duties of Brahmins), 58-60 (on the duties of the Ksatriyas, Vaiśyas and Sūdras, as well as of the students, householders, forest-hermits and yain), 61 (on Yoga), 62 (on the Vedic procedure of Visnu-worship) and 63 (verses 1-9 and 119b-122—on the popular method of Visnu-worship) of the printed ed It is most probably due to the madvertence of the scribe that these intervening chapters and verses have been omitted in our present Ms.

As, like the other two Mss, it lacks the following sections of the printed ed., viz.,

chap. 33. verses 15-85

—on the story of the Pāndavas' killing of the demons Bahuroman and Sthūlasīras, chap. 40. verses 60b-61b, chaps. 41-43, chap. 44. verses 1-13

chap. 54. verses 8-61

—on the story of Prahlāda, chap. 54. verses 8-61

—on the characteristic evils of the Kali age,

we may assume that the story of Indra's getting rid of his female form (as found in chap. 63, verses 10-119a of the printed ed.) and the interlocution between Narada and Pundaril a on the glory of Narayana (as given in chap 64 of the printed ed.) were wanting in the original Ms from which our present one was copied

(It should be mentioned here that the corresponding chapters of the Dacca University Mss on the one hand and the printed ed on the other, differ not only in readings but also occasionally in the numbers of verses. For instance, after verse 31 of chap. 5 the Dacca University Mss have 24 metrical lines which are not found in the printed ed.)]

(chaps. 25-29). Geography of the earth (chap. 30). Glorification of performance of duties towards parents and husband (chap. 14). Glorification of Brahmins and of service rendered to them (chap. 28). Results of giving various articles (chap. 30). Method of worship of Gaņeśa (chap. 26). Glorification of Narasiṃha-worship as well as of the different kinds of service rendered to Narasiṃha and his temple (viz., construction and sweeping of the temple and besmearing it with cow-dung; bathing the image with pure water, milk, curd, honey etc. or with mantra, offer of various articles; recitation of hymns of praise; presentation of flags marked with the figure of Garuḍa; songs, musical concerts, or theatrical performances etc. held for Narasiṃha's pleasure, removal of the flowers etc. with which Narasimha has been worshipped; and so on.—Chaps. 32-34). Sins arising out of crossing the flowers

(8) Mitra, Bikaner Cat, pp 207-8, No 452

Ms	Printed ed	Ms	Printed ed.

So this Ms, which ends after dealing with only a few of the ten incarnations of Visnu, is necessarily incomplete. It lacks the stories of Dhruva, Prahlāda, and the Pāndavas who killed the demons Bahuroman and Sthūlasiras for carrying away Draupadī by force]

- 286 In enumerating the duties of the members of the four castes and orders of life this Purana says that a Ksatriya king should try to attain victory through fair means, that the Sudras should serve the twice-born, follow agriculture for earning their livelihood, and hear the Puranas from Brahmins, that a twice-born be practised by one who belongs to the fourth order of life (chap. 61). Enumeration and praise of rivers²⁸⁷ and holy places²⁸⁸ sacred to Visnu (chaps. 65-66). Praise of certain qualities of the mind (chap. 67). Mention and praise of a few Vratas (viz., Eka-bhakta, Nakta, Sauranakta, Agastyārgha-dāna, etc.—chap. 67). Praise of the Narasiṃhapurāṇa (chap 68).

In connection with these topics the following stories have been introduced in this Purana:

The story of the birth of Vasistha and Agastya from Mitra and Vatuna when the latter saw Urvaśī in a lake called Paundarika in a forest in Kuruksetra (chap. 6); the story of Markandeya who, being destined to die at the age of twelve, worshipped Visnu, according to Bhrgu's advice, with the twelve-syllabled mantra (om namo bhagavate vāsudevāya) at Bhadravata on the bank of the river Tunga-bhadrā, with the result that even Death had no influence on him, and when Death and his assistants went to Yama to report how, in their attempt to bring Markandeya to the abode of Yama, they had been beaten back by the Viṣnu-dūtas, Yama reproached them for their conduct towards the Visnu-dūtas, and praised Visnu (also called Vāsudeva and Krsna) as the chastiser even of himself (chaps. 7-12); the story of Yama, who, though repeatedly tempted by his passionate sister Yami to incest, did not agree to her proposal and was thus able to attain divinity (chap. 13), the story of a Brahmacarin named Deva-sarman who turned a wandering mendicant after his father's death, began to live at Nandigrāma in Madhyadeśa after visiting numerous holy places, became proud of his occult power by being able to reduce to ashes, by an angry glance, a crow and a crane which were carrying away his rag, chanced to meet Savitri, the devoted, and consequently omniscient, wife of a pious and learned Brahmin named Kasyapa, and was reproached by her for his pride as well as for his neglect of duries to his mother and forefathers (chap. 14); the story of a learned Brahmin, who, after his wife's death, visited numerous holy places, turned a yats at the advice of Narasimha (who warned him that one, who does not belong to any order of life, is not favoured by him), and attained salvation after death (chap. 15); the stories of the birth of the Asvins and the Maruts, said to have been summarised from those told respectively by Vayu and by Sakti-putra²⁸⁸ (i. e. Parasara) in the 'Vaisnavākhya Purāņa' (chaps. 19-21); the story of Ikṣvāku, who, considering renunciation to be the best way of Visnu-worship, went to the hermitage of Galava and others after eulogising and worshipping Ganesa according to Vasistha's instructions, practised severe penance there, and muttered the twelve-syllabled mantra 'om namo bhagavate vasudevaya', with the result that Brahma revealed himself before king Ikṣvāku, told him how, being directed by a voice from the air, he himself could experience Visou by worshipping this god as well as by performing his own duties, and gave instructions to Iksvāku, who accordingly returned to his capital, did his duties as a householder, worshipped the images of Ananta and Madhava given to him by Brahma, and attained the region of Viṣṇu (chaps. 25-26), the story of Santanu who, though worshipping Narasimha according to the method learnt from Nārada, once passed over Narasimhanirmalya (1. e. the followers erc. with which Narasimha was worshipped) and was thus disabled from mounting his divine chariot but who regained his power by clearing the remnants of food of Brahmins for twelve years in Kurukṣetra (chap. 28); the story of Indra's son who used to steal flowers from the garden of a florist named Ravi and was disabled from mounting his chariot in consequence of passing over regaining his eye which was pierced by Vamana (chap. 55); the story of Indra, who muttered the eight-syllabled mantra and got rid of his female form that was brought on him by the curse of the sage Tṛṇabindu for killing in his hermitage the demoness Dīrghajanghā who, under the guise of an extremely beautiful woman, acted as a spy to Kuvera whose wife Citrasenā was stolen by Indra (chap. 63); the story of a Brahmin named Pundarika, who became a wandering mendicant without entering the second stage of life, settled at Saligrāma and became an attendant (pārṣada) of Nārāyaṇa by muttering the eight-syllabled mantra (om namo nārāyanāya), and meditating on the deity according to the instructions of Narada who introduced himself as a servant (dasa) of Vasudeva (chap. 64).

²⁹⁰ In connection with the Rāma-story it is said that being ordered by Sugriva the monkeys searched for Sitā in different places, viz., Kāśmīra, the eastern countries, Kāmarūra, Kośala, Sapta-konkanakas, etc (Nar 50 20-21), and that Rāma, before his decisive fight with Rāvana, muttered the Āditya-hrdaya mantra which was imparted to him by Agastya (Nar 52 96-97).

²⁹¹ Balabhadra, who is said to be none but Narasimha's white energy (sitā śakti), is said to have killed Rukmina, king of Kalinga, by uprooting his teeth.

²⁹² Krsna, who is the dark energy (krsnā śakti) of Narasimha, is said to have killed Naraka and many other Daityas (such as Hayagrīva) of Prāgiyotisa.

From the contents of the present Narasımha-p. summarised above it is clear that this Purana is meant exclusively for the glorification of Narasımlıa who is identified with Narayana (or Vișnu) as one of the forms (mūrti) of the latter204 and is thus called not only Nārāyana but also Vișnu, Vasudeva, Hari, Madhava, Ananta, Kṛṣṇa, 208 Damodara etc. So, Narasımha, though a form of Nārāyana or Visnu, is himself the principal god also. It is this supreme deity called Nārāyana (or Viṣṇu or Narasimha) who takes the forms of Brahma and Rudra for the sake of creation and destruction respectively; and for the work of preservation he takes the forms of (the inferior) Vișnu, Narasimha etc.296 In creation he takes to maya.297 Though in this Purana Viṣṇu (or Nārāyana) is described as four-armed, yellow-robed, having a complexion like that of the cloud, and holding a conch-shell, a disc, a mace and a locus in his hands, he is called nirvikalpa, nisprapañea, advasta, sarvātmaka, ātma-castanya-rūpa, jyotsh-svarūpa, avyakta-svarūpa, ānanda-riipa, cidātmaka etc. 298 and is identified with Brahma of Vedanta and Purusa of Samkhya. 250

It has already been said that the present Narasimha-p. is one of the oldest of the extant Vaisnava Upapuranas. It was translated into Telugu about 1300 A.D.300 and is profusely drawn upon by the commentators and Nibandha-writers both early and late. For instance, Gadadhara quotes verses from chap. 58 in his Kalasara; Nilakntha from chaps 34 and 58 in his Acara-mayukha; Gopalabhatta from chaps. 8, 9, 18, 28, 32, 33, 34, 57 (as occurring in some Mss), 58 and 66 in his Hatibhaktivilasa; Anantabhatta from chaps. 34 and 35 in his Vidhāna-pārijāta, I; Narasimha Vājapeyin from chaps. 7, 8, 28, 33, 34, 57 (as occurring in some Mss), 58 and 63 in his Nityācāra-pradīpa; Raghunandana from chap. 62 in his Durgā-pūjā-tattva and from chaps. 8, 18, 28, 30, 32, 33, 34, 57 (as occurring in some Mss), 58, 62, 63, 66 and 67 in his Smrti-tattva; Govindananda from chaps. 30, 34, 57 (as occurring in some Mss), 58, 62 and 67 in his Varşa-kaumudī, from chap. 58 in his Suddhi-kaumudī and Srāddhakaumudī, and from chap. 30 in his Dāna-kaumudī; Srīnāthācāryacūdāmaņi from chap. 58 m his Kṛṭya-tattvārnava; Rudradhara Upadhyaya from chaps 30 and 67 in his Varsa-kṛtya; Vidyakara Vājapeyin from chaps. 8, 15, 32, 58 and 63 in his Nityācāra-paddhari; Sūlapāņi from chap. 58 in his Dīpa-kalıkā; Vācaspati-miśra from chap. 65 in his Tirtha-cintāmaņi; Vidyāpati Upādhyāya from chaps. 30, 32 and 58 in his Gangā-vākyāvalī; Candeśvara Thakkura from chaps. 30, 34, 58 and 67 in his Kṛṭya-ratnākara, and from chaps. 55 (as occurring in some Mss) and 58 in his Grhastha-ratnakara; Madhavācārya from chaps. 58 and 60 in his commentary on the Parasarasmṛti; Śrīdatta Upādhyāya from chaps. 28, 32, 34, 55 (as occurring in some Mss) and 58 in his Ācārādarśa (alias Kṛtyācāra), and from chap. 67 in his Samaya-pradīpa; Madanapāla from chaps 34, 57 (as occurring in some Mss) and 58 in his Madana-pārijāta; Hemādri from chaps. 26, 30, 58 and 67 in his Caturvarga-cintāmaņi; Halāyudha from chaps. 58 and 62 in his Brāhmaṇa-sarvasva; Vallālasena from chaps. 30, 34 and 58 in his Danasagara; Devaņa-bhatta from chaps. 30, 34, 57 (as occurring in some Mss) and 58 in his Smṛti-candrikā; Aparārka from chaps. 58, 60, 62 and 63 in his commentary on the Yājñavalkya-smṛti; and Lakṣmīdhara from chaps. 17, 26, 30, 55, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 65, 66 and 67 in his Kṛtya-kalpataru, Vols. I-III, V, VI, VIII and XIV. In his Smrti-tattva, II, pp. 84 and 284 Raghunandana quotes Nar. 66. 45 and Nar. 30. 29-30a not direct from the Narasimha-p. but from the 'Tīrtha-kānda-kalpataru' and 'Dāna-ratnākara' respectively. Though Vallālasena is very particular about the authenticity of the Purāṇas which he draws upon in his Dānasāgara, 301 he describes the present Narasimha-p. as a work 301 Interesting information about the Puranas is supplied by Vallalasena when, in his Danasagara, he refers to the contents of a few Puranic works by way of explaining why he rejected them partly or wholly Regarding the Adipurana he says that though it was well-known for its treatment of gifts divided according to the division of the year, it was slightly touched upon in the Dānasāgara, because its contents were already fully utilised in the Ācāra-sāgara; the Bhagavata, the Brahmanda and the Naradiya-purana did not contain any chapter on gifts and were consequently set aside, the Linga-purana, whose volume was expanded by the chapters on big donations (mahādāna) contained in the Matsya-purana and which was thus no better than a digest on gifts, was not drawn upon, because the substance of its contents was already obtained from other Puranas; the Bhavisya-purana was utilised upto the chapters dealing with the saptami (-kalpa), while those on the astami and navami (-kalpa) were rejected on account of their imbibing Tantric influence, the Visnu-rahasya and the Siva-rahasya, which were famous among the people, were mere compilations and were consequently not utilised, and though the Bhavisyottara was famous for its customary laws (or was popularly followed) and did not contradict good customs, it was avoided in the Danasagara for want of sufficient evidence to prove its authenticity.

Next, Vallālasena names a set of Purāṇas rejected by him as spurious, viz. Tārksya (1 c. Gāruda), Brāhma, Āgneya, Vaisnava consisting of 23000 ślokas, and Linga of 6000 ślokas, and in connexion with their contents he says that these works, dealing with initiation, consecration, ways of salvation for the Tantriks, testing of gems, fictitious genealogies, lexicography, grammar etc, and containing irrelevant and contradictory statements, were used as means of deception by Mīna-ketanas (followers of Mīnanātha?) and others, who are hypocrites, heretics and pseudo-ascetics. By his remark that due to its wide circulation the Skanda-purāna existed in more parts than one, and that three of its parts dealt with the accounts (kathā) of Paundra, Revā and Avanti, Vallālasena seems to include those three parts among the spurious Purānas—See Dānasāgara, pp. 6-7 (verses 55-68).

dealing prominently with donations⁸⁰² and utilises it without the least shade of doubt as regards its authenticity, antiquity and non-Tantric character. These show that by the first half of the eleventh century A. D. the Narasimha-p. attained so much prominence that its authenticity as an ancient 'Purāṇa' was not at all questioned. Hence this Purāṇa must have been written not later than 850 A.D.

The mention of a 'Vārāhākhyā Saṃhitā' or 'Vārāha'303 in the Narasimha-p. must not be taken to point to the extant Varāha-p. and thus be used as an evidence in favour of the late date of the present Narasiṃha. In Nar. I. 14-15 Bharadvāja says, "O Sūta, the Saṃhitā named Vārāha has already been heard from you by these (sages) and ourselves during the great sacrifice of Saunaka; at present these sages and myself want to hear from you the Paurāṇa-saṃhitā named Nāra-simha''204, and in Nar. 31. 10b-11a Sūta says in connection with geography, "The region of Viṣṇu is situated at a distance double in comparison with that of the region of Brahmā, its glory has been described in the Vārāha by those who think over the (different) regions''. From these it is clear that the Narasimha-p. speaks of a Varāha-p. which was narrated by Sūta to the sages Bharadvāja and others during the great sacrifice of Saunaka and which dealt, among other topics, with the praise of the region of Viṣṇu. But in the present Varāha-p. there is no mention of Saunaka's great sacrifice as the occasion for the narration of the Purāṇa or of Bharadvāja as one of the interlocutors, nor does this Purāṇa deal with the praise of the Viṣṇuloka. So, the Varāha-p., mentioned in the Narasiṃha-p., must have been different from the extant Varāha, which was thus unknown to the present Narasiṃha-p. The original chapters of the extant Varāha-p. being written about 800 AD., the date of the present Narasiṃha-p. must be placed earlier.

The verses common to the Narasimha-p. and the present Varāha in their chapters on primary and secondary creation need not be taken to prove the indebtedness of one of these two Purāṇas to the other. These common verses must have been taken by these two Purāṇas from the earlier Varāha-p. which is now lost.

In chaps. 26, 33 (verses 1-14), 34, 35, 56, 62 and 63 (verses 1-9 and 119-122) the Narasimha-p. gives the method of Ganesa-worship, the Vedic and popular methods of Viṣṇu-worship, the method of consecrating the images of Viṣṇu, and the procedure to be followed in the performance of lakṣa-homa and koṭi-homa. But neither in these chapters nor anywhere else in the whole Purāṇa there is the slightest trace of Tantric influence. This Purāṇa does not mention the Tantriks or the Tantras even for the sake of denouncement. So, it is evident that this Purāṇa was composed at a time when the Tantras did not begin to influence the people very seriously. Now, from an examination of the Mahāpurāṇas we have seen that Tantric influence began to be imbibed by the Purāṇic works from about 800 A.D. Hence the Narasimha-p. must be dated not later than 700 A.D.

Though in chap. 36 of the Narasimha-p. Markandeya promises to narrate the stories on the following (eleven) incarnations of Visnu, viz., Matsya, Kūrma, Varāha, Narasimha, Vāmana, Paraśurāma, Rāma, aos Balarama, Kṛṣṇa, Buddha and Kalki, he gives, in chaps. 37-54, the stories on all these except the Buddha and adds at the end, "I have spoken on the ten incarnations of (Visnu) the destroyer of (all) earthly sins. The devotee of Nrsimha, who always listens to these, attains Visnu" (Nar. 54. 6). So, the only line 'kalau prapte yatha buddho bhaven nārāyaṇah prabhuh' (Nar. 36. 9a), which mentions the Buddha incarnation, is undoubtedly spurious. This line does not occur in most of the Mss of the Narasimha-p. Thus the Narasimha-p. knows the group of the 'ten' incarnations of Visnu but is quite ignorant of the Buddha incarnation. An examination of the different lists of incarnations of Visnu shows that the Buddha came to be regarded as an incarnation of Visnu not very much earlier than 500 A.D. 309 Hence the date of the Narasimha-p. is to be placed not later than about 500 A.D.

According to the Narasimha-p. Krsna embodies only a part of Viṣnu's Śakti. The state of this inferior position of Kṛsna that Yama says in Nar. 9. 3, "I submit to the slayer of (the demon) Madhu; even Kṛṣna is not able to restrain me of his own accord". Hence the Narasiṃha-p. is to be dated earlier than the present Bhāgavata, in which Kṛsna is given a higher position and is even called the Bhagavat himself. As the present Bhāgavata is to be dated in the sixth century A.D.,312 the Narasimha-p. is to be placed not later than 500 A.D.

Thus we get the lower limit of the date of this Purana.

Again, in Narasimha-p., chaps. 47-52, a summary of the contents of the Ramayana is given in connection with the Rama incarnation of Visnu; Nar. 29. 3 mentions some of the notable incidents of the Mahābhārata, viz., Arjuna's receipt of the Pāśupata weapon from Samkara and the assistance given by him to Agni in consuming the Khāndava forest, the Pāndavas' residence incognito with Draupadi in Virāta's capital, and so on; and in Nar. 29.6 Janamejaya is said to have theard the entire Mahābhārata from Vaisampāyana, a student of Vyāsa, in order to get rid of the sin arising out of killing a Brahmin (brahma-hatyā)'. Thus the Narasımha-p. knows both the Rāmāyana and the Mahabharata. In Nar. 19. 5-6 Süta says to Bharadvaja, "O high-minded one, the origin of the Maruts has already been described elaborately by the son of Saktı (i.e by Parāśara) in the Purāņa named Vaisnava, and the creation of the twin gods Asvins has been narrated in minute details by Vāyu. I shall speak to you briefly on this creation. Listen to me."313 Thus, the Narasimha-p. mentions two Purānas, of which the second is decidedly the present Vayu-p., which contains 312 As there are a few parallelisms in idea as well as language between the works of Samkarācārya and the present Bhāgavata-p, some scholars are inclined to date the Bhāgavata after that great Vedāntist scholar. (See Bhāratiya Vidyā, II, pp. 129-139, and IHQ, XXVII, 1951, pp. 138ff.) But these scholars overlook the facts that the present Bhāgavata, like the other Purānic works, has been revised and emended on more occasions than one, and that Samkarācārya, Māgha and others' influence must be due to these revisions and emendations. On the other hand, there are evidences to prove the pre-Samkara origin of the earlier portions of the present Bhāgavata. (See Hazra, Purānic Records, pp 55-57)

the story of the birth of the Asvins in chap. 84 and is declared by Vāyu, 314 but the information regarding the 'Vaisnavākhya Purāna' in which Sakti's son (Parasara) was the narrator of the story of the birth of the Maruts, does not tally fully with the present Visnu-p. which, though narrated by Parasara, does not contain this story. But this absence of the story of the birth of the Maruts in the present text of the Visnu-p. must not be taken very seriously, because it can be explained away by saying that the particular Ms or recension of the present Visnu-p. which was used by the Narasimha-p. contained the above-mentioned story, and also because there are verses common to the Narasımha and the Visnu-p. 315 Hence the Narasımha-p. must be dated later than the present Vayu-p. and Visnu -p. That the Narasimha-p, was composed later than the Visnu-p. is shown by another piece of evidence. In the Visnu-p. two hairs of Viṣṇu, one black and the other white, are said to have been incarnated as Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma respectively. 316 Thus Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma are incarnations of exceedingly small portions of Visnu. But in the Narasımha-p. it is two Saktis of Viṣṇu, one black and the other white, which appear in the forms of Kṛṣṇa and (Bala-) Rāma respectively for the destruction of Kamsa and others. 317. So, the position of Krsna and Balarama as incarnations of Visnu is better in the Narasimha-p.

314 This identity seems to be supported by the verses common to the Väyu and the Narasimha-p, viz., than in the Viṣṇu. Now, the present Vāyu-p., with the exception of those of its chapters which were added later, being earlier than the present Viṣṇu-p., and the Viṣṇu-p. being to be dated about 300 A.D., the date of the Narasiṃha-p. should be palced not earlier than about 400 A.D. This upper limit of the date of the present Narasiṃha-p. is supported by its mention of week-days (viz., Arka-divasa and Guru-vāra) in chap. 67 (verses 8 and 10 respectively), because the earliest epigraphic mention of a week-day is found in the Eran inscription of 484 A.D.²¹⁸

Thus, the date of the present Narasimha-p. is to be placed between 400 and 500 A.D. It is highly probable that this Purana was written in the latter half of this century.

The introductory verses of the Narasımha-p. do not throw any light on the date of this Purāṇa. As all the Mss do not agree in this respect, some of these introductory verses may be later additions. Moreover, the date of these verses is uncertain. The verse 'tapta-hāṭaka-keśānta' is the same as Viṣṇudh. I. 196. 18b-19a; and the verse 'kiṃ kiṃ siṃhas tataḥ kiṃ,' being ascribed to Vyāsa in the Kavīndra-vacana-samuccaya (p. 13) and Śrīdharadāsa's Sadukti-karṇāmṭta (p. 53), seems to have been taken from the Narasımha-p.

That a Narasimha-p, was written at a fairly early date is shown not only by its mention in Albertini's work³¹⁹ as well as in all the lists of Upapuranas³²⁰ except that contained in the Ekamra-p., ³²¹ but also by

319 In his account of India Albertini gives two lists of eighteen 'Puranas'; and of these two lists the first, which was dictated to him, consists of the following 'Puranas':—

320 For these lists and the approximate date of formation of the group of 'eighteen Upapuranas', see Chap 1.

321 In its list of 'Puranas' the Ekamra-p. (chap. 1) menuous the 'Narasimha' in place of the 'Naradiya'.

The Vanga, ed. of the Brhaddharma-p. (1, 25.20) wrongly mentions the 'Nrsimha' as a Mahāpurāna in place of the Mahābhāgavata.

the Matsya-p. (53.59) which says that the Upapurāṇas, viz., Nāra-simha, Nandī-purāna, Sāmba and Āditya, were 'well-established in society' (loke......sampratiṣthitāḥ), thus testifying to a much earlier date of these Upapurānas. But it is very difficult to say whether our present Narasimha-p. is the same as that mentioned in these lists and in the Matsya-p. The commentators and Nibandha-writers are, however, quite sure of the identity of the two. Of these, Narasimha Vājapeyin even explains the shorter form of the present Narasimha-p. saying, "As the number (of ślokas) of the famous Nārasimha is not found to be 18000, it seems that a portion has been lost in course of time." 1522

The above date of the present Narasimha-p. must not be taken to be that of the entire Purāna as found in the printed edition, because in the printed edition there are chapters and verses which are decidedly later interpolations. In order to be able to find our these spurious portions a list of such chapters and verses as are not found in all the Mss of the Narasimha-p. is given below with the mention of those Mss in which they occur and also of those in which they are not found.

though eliminated in some Mss, are genuine.

The spurious character of the chapters and verses of the former group is also shown by their position, by the nature of their insertion, as well as by other evidences. For instance, the story of Dhriva in chap. 31, verses 1-97 is inserted so abruptly that none can have the slightest doubt regarding the fact that verses 98-113 of chap. 31 are direct continuations of the verses in chap. 30. As a matter of fact, chap. 30 and verses 98-113 of chap. 31 of the printed ed. form one single chapter in a large number of Mss (such as those of the Calcutta Sanskrit College, Calcutta Asiatic society, and Dacca University). 324 Similarly, the story of the Pāndavas' killing of the demons Bahuroman and Sthūlasıras in chap. 33 (verses 15-85) and chap. 34 (verse 1) separates verses 1-14 of chap. 33 and verses 2ff. of chap. 34 of the Viṣṇu and of rendering various kinds of service to this deity and which thus rightly form a single chapter in the above-mentioned Mss. Regarding the suprious character of verse 9a of chap. 36 much has already been said in connection with the determination of the date of this Purāṇa. As to the chapters and verses on the story of Prahlāda, they are placed between verses 1-60a of chap. 40 and verses 14ff. of chap. 44 of the printed edition which form one single chapter in the above-mentioned Mss as well as in the Ms π used in the printed edition. In these Mss, those verses, which are separated, with modifications, by the chapters on the story of Prahlāda in the printed edition, read, with slight variations, as follows:

gacchadhvam adhunā devāh svasthānam vigata-jvarāh! aham adya gamışyamı ındrasyendratva-siddhaye// hiranya-kasipor naso bhavatam api viddhaye/, yuşmākam vijayāyaiva ajayāya sura-dviṣām// mārkandeya uvāca/ ity uktā visņunā devā natvā visņum yayur nīpa/ bhagavan apı deveso narasimham athakarot// bahu-yojana-vistirnam bahu-yojanam ayatam/ auraudram mahākāyam dānavānām bhayamkaram// mahānetram mahāvaktram mahādamstram mahānakham/ mahābāhum mahāpādam kālāgni-sadrsopamam// kṛtvettham narasımham tu yayau viṣṇus trivikrainah/ stūyamāno muni-gaņair hiraņya-kasipoh purah// nțsimhas tatra gatvă ca mahănādam nanāda ca/ tan-nāda-ścavaṇād daityā nārasiṃham avestayan// tān hatvā sakalāms tarra sva-pauruşa-parākramāt/ babhañja ca sabhām divyām hiranya-kasipor nṛpa// ctc.

How these verses have been changed in the printed edition in order to accommodate the chapters on the story of Prahlada will be obvious from a comparison of these verses with Nar. 40. 6off. and 44. 14ff. The word 'yayau' in the line 'kṛtvetthaṃ nārasiṃhaṃ tu yayau visṇus trivikramaḥ', which has been retained in the printed edition, does not agree with what has been said to Viṣṇu in the story of Prahlada. As regards the spuriousness of chap. 68 it can be said that the Narasimhap. really ends with chap. 67, which deals not only with the mental tirthas but also with the praise of the Purāṇa, and of which lines 24b-25a say, "Having heard (the Purāṇa topics) in company with the snātakas (i.e. the sages who took their holy bath in the Ganges), Bharadvāja remained there after showing proper respect to Sūta, but the (other) sages went away". Further, though in several places of the Narasimha-p. unswerving (acalā, avyabhicārinī) bhakti is mentioned and praised as the means of attaining the blissful state of existence, 125 it is only in some of those chapters which we have taken as spurious that there are mention and praise of dāsya-bhakti. 126 It is also noteworthy that none of these spurious chapters is referred to by any of the remaining chapters, although there are numerous cross references in the latter. 1251

The above table further shows that there were distinct stages in the process of addition and elimination of chapters and verses. For instance, Ms π (used in the printed ed.) interpolates chaps. 36 (verse 9a), 54 (verses 8-61) and 64, but eliminates nothing; Dacca University Ms No. 284A interpolates nothing but eliminates chaps. 66 and 67; and Aufrecht's Ms No. 139 interpolates chaps. 64 and 68 and eliminates chap. 61. Aufrecht's Ms No. 138 not only combines all the interpolations and eliminations of the Dacca University Ms (No. 284A) and Aufrecht's Ms No. 139 but also eliminates one chapter more, viz., chap. 65. Mss π and π (used in the printed ed.) go a step further not only by combining all the interpolations and eliminations of Ms π and Aufrecht's Ms No. 138 but also by interpolating chaps. 31 (verses 1-97), 33 (verses 15-85), 40 (verses 60b-61b), 41-43, 44 (verses 1-13) and 63 (verses 10-119a).

Even among the chapters other than those which have been differentiated above as spurious, there are some which are most probably comparatively late additions. Such chapters are especially Nar. 6 (on the story of the birth of Vasistha and Agastya as sons of Mitra and Varuna) and Nar. 7-18 (on the story of Mārkandeya, the story of Yama and Yamī, etc. narrated by Vyāsa to Suka). In Nar. 5. 48ff. the names of those thirteen daughters of Dakṣa who were given in marriage to Kasyapa, are the following:—Aditi, Diti, Danu, Aristā, Svarasā, Svasā, Surabhi, Vinatā, Tāmrā, Krodha-vasā, Irā, Kadrū and Muni; but in Nar. 6. 4-8 the list of the names of the 'thirteen daughters' married to Kasyapa omits Ariṣṭā and Tāmrā but adds Kālā, Muhūrtā, Siṃhikā and Saramā, thus increasing the number to fifteen. Even in the Mss preserved in the Calcutta Sanskrit College, Asiatic Society (Calcutta), and Dacca University the names of these 'thirteen daughters' are different from those given in chap. 5. 228 It is to be noted that in Nar. 5. 43 Muhūrtā is said to have been given in marriage to Dharma. This disagreement between chap. 5 (which deals with pratisarga and cannot, therefore, be spurious) and chap. 6 seems to indicate the spurious character of the latter. In order to introduce this chapter the interpolator adds verse 2 (mitrā-varuna-putratvam vasisthasya katham bhavet, etc.) of chap. 5. It is, however, not improbable that only verses 6-8a (containing the names of the '13 daughters') are spurious, and not the entire chap. 6. As to the chaps. 7-18 (on the story of Mārkandeya, etc.), their introductory verse is as follows:

mārkandeyena muninā katham mriyuh parājitah/, etad ākhyāhi me sūta tvayastat sūcitam purā//

Though in chaps. 1-6 of the printed ed. there is no verse containing the mention of Märkandeya or of the way of his subduing Death, the expression 'tvayaitat sūcitaṃ purā' refers to the following verses (which occurred among those 12 verses which have been lost after verse 31 of chap. 5 of the printed ed. but are found in chap. 5 of the Calcutta Sanskrit College, Calcutta Asiatic Society, and Dacca University Mss):

bhrgoh khyātyām samutpannā laksmīr visņu-parigrahah/, tathā dhātā-vidhātārau khyātyām jātau sutau bhṛgoh// āyatir niyatis caiva meroh kanye susobhane/, dhātur vidhātus ca te bhārye tayor jātau sutāv ubhau//, prānas caiva mrkandus ca mārkandeyo mṛkandutaḥ/ yena mṛtyur jito vipra purā nārāyanāsrayāt//,

Hence the absence of the verse containing the mention of Mārkaṇ-deya in chaps. 1-6 of the printed ed is no cause for taking chaps. 7-18 as spurious. These chapters are considered as interpolated, because Nar. 19. 4 refers to Nar. 5. 46-47 ignoring the intervening chaps 7-18 and because Mārkaṇdeya, who is called the great-grandson of Bhrgu in the lost verses mentioned above, is mentioned as Bhṛgu's grandson in chaps. 7-12. 320 Of these twelve intervening chapters (7-18), chaps. 7-12 (dealing with the story of Mārkandeya) differ from chaps. 13-18 in certain matters. In the former six chapters (7-12) the use of the twelve-syllabled mantra om namo bhagavate vāsudevāya' is prescribed more than once; the name 'Kṛṣṇa' for Vṛṣṇu (also called Nārāyaṇa) 1s given on many occasions; and the names 'Devakīnandana,' 'Vāsudeva' etc. also are found. Once Yama says,

329 See Nar. 7 10-12, 25, 27 etc., 8 3 and 10; 9 13, 12 65.

"sugatım abhılaşami vasudevad aham apı bhagavate sthıtantaratma/madhu-vadha-vasago 'smı na svatantrah prabhavati samyamane mamapi kṛṣṇaḥ//"

Hence these chapters, though not recognising Kṛṣṇa as the Bhagavat himself, have a Bhāgavata tinge. On the other hand, chaps. 13-18 have a Pāñcarātra stamp, because in these chapters Nārāyaṇa and the eight-syllabled mantra 'oṃ namo nārāyaṇāya' are praised, and there is no mention of the name 'Kṛṣṇa'. That chap. 13 is a later addition is also shown by the absence of praise of Viṣṇu or Vaiṣṇavism in this chapter (dealing with Yama-yamī-saṃvāda) except in the line 'cittaṃ me nirmalaṃ bhadre viṣṇau rudre ca saṃsthitam' (spoken by Yama to Yamī) which gives, unlike the other chapters, the same place to Viṣṇu and Rudra. As the interlocutors Suka and Vyāsa of chaps. 13-18 are first introduced in chap. 7, these chapters are most probably later than chaps. 7-12.

From what has been said above regarding the addition and elimination of chapters and verses in the present Narasimha-p., it is clear that this Purana has been revised on more occasions than one. A comparison between the texts of the same extracts as quoted by different Smrti-writers and occurring in the printed ed., also lends strong support in this direction. The verses and even large extracts, 330 For instance, a comparison between Nar. 34. 6-12 and these very verses as quoted by Narasimha Vājapeyin in his Nityācāra-pradipa, I, pp. 558-560, shows how single lines of the quoted passage have been expanded into verses in the printed ed. For example, the line 'toyena bhaktyā samsnāpya viṣṇu-loke mahīyate' (in Nityācāra-pradipa, I, p. 558)=the verse 'snāpya toyena payasā narasimham narādhipa/ sarva-pāpa-vinirmukto viṣṇu-loke mahīyate//' (Nar. 34. 6); the line 'snāpya dadhnā sakṛd viṣnum viṣnu-lokam avāpnuyāt' (in Nityācāra-pradīpa, I, p. 558)=the verse 'snāpya dadhnā sakṛd yas tu nirmalah priya-daršanaḥ/ viṣṇu-lokam avāpnoti pūjyamānah surottamaih//' (Nar. 34. 7), and so on. Again, a comparison between the texts of the verses quoted from the Narasimha-p in Madana-pārijāta, pp. 301-2, Smrti-tattva, I, p. 411 and quoted by Hemādri from the 'Narasimha-p.' on different kinds of Vratas³³¹ and donations but not found in the present Narasimha-p., show that the text of this Purāna as used by Hemādri was more extensive. Narasimha Vājapeyin explains the smaller bulk of the present Narasimha-p. saying, "As the number (of ślokas) of the famous Nārasimha is not found to be 18000, it seems that a portion has been lost in course of time." 352

The mention of Tulasi in chaps. 31 (verse 87) and 34 (verses 19 and 23) and in the additional verses contained in the Mss (preserved in the Calcutta Sanskrit College, Calcutta Asiatic Society, Dacca University, etc.) in their chapters corresponding to chap. 57 of the printed ed., should not be taken to go against the above date of the Narasimha-p. This mention is certainly due to later revisions of the Purāna; because, of the above-mentioned chapters containing the mention of Tulasi, chap. 31 (verses 1-97) has been found to be spurious, and Nar. 34. 19 does not occur in the Ms 4 used in the printed ed. Moreover, in chap. 33, which deals with the results of various kinds of service rendered to Viṣṇu and of offering different articles to this deity, there is mention of 'bilva-patra' but not of Tulasi, nor is Tulasi mentioned in chaps. 56 (on the method of consecration of the images of Viṣṇu), 62 (on the Vedic method of Viṣṇu-worship) and 63 (on the popular method of Viṣṇu-worship).

It is probably due to the repeated revisions of the present Nara-simha-p, that there are disagreements between a number of statements even in those chapters which cannot be taken as spurious. For instance, in Nar. 3. 8 Sväyambhuva Manu is said to have been the son of Dakṣa and his wife born respectively from Brahmā's right and left thumbs, but in Nar. 5. 22 Sväyambhuva Manu is said to have given his daughter Prasūti in marriage to Dakṣa; in Nar. 3. 3-5 Rudra is said to have been born of Brahmā's rage (roṣa), but in Nar. 5. 4-5 it is said that when Brahmā was thinking of some worthy son at the beginning of the Brāhma Kalpa, the blue-red (nīla-lohita) Rudra is said to have appeared on Brahmā's lap as a child with a body half male and half female; in Nar. 4. 2-4 Brahmā is said to have created from his mind ten sons (viz., Marīci, Atri, Angiras, Pulaha, Kratu, Pulastya, Pracetas, Bhṛgu, Nārada and Vasiṣtha), of whom Nārada took to abstention (nivṛtti-dharma), but in Nar. 5. 17-19 Brahmā is said to have created nine sons (Marīci and others, except Nārada) who were known as 'nine Brahmās'; and so on.

Nityācāra-pradīpa, I, p 617 shows that the texts of the Narasimha-p. used by Raghunandana and Narasimha Vājapeyin agree more with that of the printed ed. than with the text used by Madanapāla

Though the Narasimha-p. proposes to give 'in brief' (saṃkṣepāt) the genealogies of kings which were elaborately dealt with in the Puranas,'ssa the defects, found in these genealogies, seem to be due as much to the carelessness of the people of later ages in maintaining the correctness of these dynastic lists in their respective Mss as to their attempt at abridgment. For instance, in chaps, 22 and 27, the printed edition as well as the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No 304 and Dacca University Ms No. 284A mentions Aja as the son of Dîrghabāhu, but the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 36 and Dacca University Ms No. 2713, though following the printed ed. in chap. 27, give the pedigree of Aja as 'dirghabahor dilipah dilipad raghuh raghor ajah' in chap. 22; in chaps. 22 and 27, the printed ed. as well as the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 304 and Dacca University Ms No. 284A makes Mandhatt the son of Asamhatasva (v. l. Asamkhyātāśva in chap. 22 of the printed ed.), but in chap. 27 they give a popular verse in which Mandhatt is called Yauvanasva (i.e. son of Yuvanāśva), the latter pedigree of Māndhātṛ is supported by the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 36 and Dacca University Ms No. 2713 which mention Mandhatt as the son of Yuvanasva in chap. 24 (yuvanāśvān māndhātā); after Nar. 27. 1 the Mss used in the printed ed. have lost an extract854 which is found in a large number of Mss (such as the Calcutta Sanskrit College Mss Nos. 36 and 304

³³³ Nar. 22. 2. Also see Nar. 23. 1.

³³⁴ The text of this extract, as reconstructed from the Cal. Sans, Coll, and Dacca Univ. Mss, runs as follows: 'tat-putro venas tasya prthus tasya prthāsvah/ prthāsvād asamhatāsvah/ te catvāro rājāno bhūm-tejasah kramād rājyam krtvā dharmato harim ananta-sayanam ārādhya bhaktyā kratubhis cestvā svarlokam gatāḥ/' and Dacca University Mss Nos. 2713 and 284A); and so on. There are, of course, a few cases in which the disagreements are either to be removed by referring to other better Mss or to be ascribed to the revisions to which the extant Narasimha-p. was subjected. For instance, different pedigrees of Soma are given in chaps. 23 and 28 of the printed edition as well as the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 36 and the Dacca University Mss; in chap. 22 Saudāsa's son is called Satrumdama in the printed edition as well as in the Calcutta Sanskrit College Mss Nos. 36 and 304 and Dacca University Ms No. 2713, but in chap. 27 he is called Satrasava in the printed edition and the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 304, Satreśvara in the Dacca University Ms No. 284A, and Satrusty Ms No. 284A, and Satyaśrava in the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 36 and Dacca University Ms No. 2713; and so on.

The disagreements in the names and pedigrees of some of the kings in chaps. 22-23 (on the genealogies of the kings of the Solar and Lunar dynasties) on the one hand and chaps. 27-29 (on vamsanucarita, i. e. the accounts of the kings of these dynasties) on the other, are not real but are due to the editor of this Purana who has not used a sufficient number of Mss for his edition. For instance, in chap. 22 the name of Prthāśva's son 1s given as Asamkhyātāśva in the printed ed. and Asamhatāsva in the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 304, but in the Dacca University Mss as well as in the Calcutta Sankrit College Ms No. 36 he is named as Samhatūśva, while in chap. 27 he is called Asamhatāśva in the printed ed. as well as in the Calcutta Sanskrit College and Dacca University Mss; in chap. 22 Māndhātṛ's son 1s called Purukutsa in the printed ed. as well as in the Calcutta Sanskrit College Mss and the Dacca University Mss Nos. 284A and 2713, but in chap. 27 Mandhati's son is named Purukusya in the printed ed., Kurupuccha in the Dacca University Ms No. 284A, and Purukutsa in the Calcutta Sanskrit College Mss and the Dacca University Ms No. 2713, in chap. 22 Dīrghabāhu's father is named Anarana in the printed ed. and Anaranya in the Calcutta Sanskrit College and Dacca University Mss as well as in the Ms v used in the printed ed., but in chap. 27 he is called Anarana in all these sources; in chap. 22 Padma's son is Anuparṇa in the printed ed. and Rtuparṇa in the Calcutta Sanskrit College Ms No. 304 and in the Dacca Vniversity Mss, but in chap. 27 he is called Rtuparṇa in all these sources; and so on.

Though the Matsya-p., 336 the Skanda-p. 337 and the Revā-māhār-mya 338 attach the 'Narasiṃha-p.' to the Padma-p. as a sub-division (upabheda) of the latter, the present Narasiṃha-p. always calls itself a 'Purāṇa' 338 and never an 'Upapurāṇa', nor does it attach itself to any Mahāpurāṇa for the sake of authority. As a matter of fact, in chap. 1, verses 33-34 it speaks of the five characteristics of 'Purāṇa', viz., sarga, pratisarga, vaṃśa, manuantara and vaṃśānucarita and proposes to deal with all these topics, and in chap. 67 verses 17-18 it says that it has dealt with the five topics, viz., sarga, pratisarga etc; but it betrays no knowledge of the Upapurāṇas. So, it is evident that though according to the later tradition the Narasiṃha-p. is classed as an Upapurāṇa, it is really an independent 'Purāṇa' like the Vāyu, Viṣṇu etc.

It has already been said that the present Narasimha-p. knows the extant Vāyu and Viṣṇu and the earlier Varāha-p. Its mention of the word 'Purāṇa' in the plural number on several occasions to mean distinct Puranic works, shows that more Puranas than one came into existence before its composition. It is not known whether the Markandeya-p. or the Visnudharmottara is referred to in chap. 10 (verses 54-55) which seems to be a later addition.

A careful examination of the original and the spurious chapters of the present Narasimha-p. shows that this Purāna was originally a work of the Pāncarātra sect with remarkable Bhāgavata inclination. The Pāncarātras themselves added a few more chapters and extracts at a later date. It was then considerably changed by the Bhāgavatas with further additions and alterations.

The entire Narasimha-p., as we have it now, is not composed in verse. There are a few chapters and extracts which are written in simple prose. These are the following:—Nar. 19. 7-23 (on the birth of the Aśvins), chap. 21 (on the origin of the Maruts); 22. 4-15 (on the names of the kings of the Solar race), 23. 2-13 (on the names of the kings of the Lunar race), 24. 1-36 (on the Manvantaras); 27. 1-12 (on the accounts of the kings of the Solar race); 28. 1-16 (on the accounts of the kings of the Lunar race), 29. 1-12 (on the accounts of the kings of the Lunar race), 30. 2-16 (except 5, which is a verse), 52. 25-31. A portion of chap. 9 is written in Puspitāgrā (also called Aupacchandasika).

The language of the Narasimha-p. contains numerous solecisms. For instance, it has 'abhūvan' for 'abhavan' (Nar. 1. 62), 'vyajāyata' for 'vyajanayat' (Nai 5. 21), 'jajñe' for 'janayāmāsa' (Nar. 5. 29, 31 and 35), 'snāyantī' for 'snāntī' (Nar. 6. 26), 'vedavidaih' for 'vedavidbhih' (6. 46) 'susangītavidaih' for '-vidbhih' (34. 36), 'mātṛ-pitarau' for 'mātā-pitarau' (7. 14), 'vīksayāmāsa' for 'vīkṣāmāsa' (14. 23), 'vartatīm' for 'vartamānām' (19. 15), 'manujām' for 'manujānām' (18. 12), 'pravartatīm' for 'pravartamānām' (19. 17), and so on.

Like the other Puranic works, the Narasimha-p. also tries to give itself a garb of great sanctity and high antiquity by tracing its descent from Brahma. In chap. 67, verses 19-22 it gives the following tradition of inheritance: — Brahmā himself spoke out this Putāņa to the sages Marīci and others; the next recipient was Mārkandeya, who then narrated it to a king of the Nāga family; sai Vyāsa then received it through Narasimha's favour.

Nar. 57 (verses 8 to the end) and 58-61, which deal with the duties of the four castes and orders of life, are found printed word for word under the title Hārīta-saṃhitā in the Unavimśati Samhitā. These chapters also appear as Laghu-hārīta-smṛti in Jīvānanda Vidyā-sāgara's Dharmaśāstra-saṃgraha (Vol. I. pp. 172 ff.). Now, the question arises as to whether it was the Hārīta-saṃhitā (or Laghu-hārīta-smṛti) which was incorporated in the present Narasiṃha-p., or the above-mentioned chapters of the Narasiṃha-p. were given the character of an independent Smṛti work under the title 'Hārīta-saṃhitā' (or 'Laghu-hārīta-smṛti'). An examination of the Hārīta-saṃhitā shows that it was the above-mentioned chapters of the present Narasiṃha-p. which were taken off and given the form of an independent work under the title 'Hārīta-saṃhitā' or 'Laghu-hārīta-smṛti' which was derived from the name of the original speaker Hārīta. The Hārīta-saṃhitā begins as follows:

ye varņāsrama-dharmasthās te bhaktāḥ kesavaṃ prati/
iti pūrvaṃ tvayā proktaṃ bhūr bhuvaḥ svar dvijottamāḥ// varṇānām āśramāṇāṃ ca dharmān no brūhi sattama/

mārkaṇḍeya uvāca/
atrāhaṃ kathayiṣyāmi purā-vṛttam anuttamam/
ṛṣībhiḥ saha saṃvādaṃ hārītasya mahātmanaḥ//

Of these verses, which are the same as Nar. 57. 8-10, the first shows that something has already been said, of which these verses form a continuation; and in fact the first verse points to Nar. 57. 2-7

342 Edited (with a Bengali translation) by Pancanana Tarl aratna and published by the Vangavasi Press, Calcutta. Second edition, 1316 B S.

wherein Märkandeya, being asked by king Sahasranika, enumerates the characteristics of the devotees of Vişnu thus:

visnu-bhaktā mahotsāhā viṣnvarcana-vidhau sadā/samyatā dharma-saṃpannāh sarvārthān sādhayanti te// paropakāra-niratā guru-śuśrūsane ratāh/varṇāśramācāra-yutāḥ sarveṣāṃ supriyaṃvadāh//
etc. etc.

Though from a perusal of the Hārīta-saṃhitā we understand that Mārkandeya reports to a king named Sahasrānīka what Hārīta said to the sages on the duties of the four castes and orders of life, nothing is said in the Hārīta-samhitā either about the identity of these two persons or about the occasion, time or place in which they met each other. Even the name of the king is given as late as in chap, 7 (verse 20). But it is the Narasimha-p. which tells us who king Sahasrānīka was and how he met the sage Markandeya. We have already said that the Narasimha-p. is a work meant for the glorification of the worship of Narasimha. This character is betrayed by the Hārītasamhitā also.348 Moreover, none of the quotations made in their works by Viśvarūpa, Aparārka, Bhavadeva, Jīmūtavāhana, Devaņabhatta and Aniruddha-bhatta from Hārīta, Veddha-hārīta, Laghuhārīta, Bṛhaddhārīta and Svalpa-hārīta is to be met with in our socalled Hārīta-samhitā. On the other hand, some of the quotations made by Aparārka from the 'Nṛṣimha-p.' are traceable in the Hārītasamhitā. For example,

Laghu-hārīta-smṛti, originally belonged to the Narasiṃha-p. These chapters seem to be based on different Smṛti works such as the Parāśara-smṛti and the Hārīta-dharmaśāstra (as known to Devaṇabhaṭta), because Parāśara-smṛti 1.50 (vaiśvadeve tu saṃprāpte etc.) greatly resembles Nar. 58. 100-101a (akṛte vaiśvadeve tu etc.), and the verse 'anena vidhinā yo hi āśramān upasevate etc.', quoted from the 'Hārīta-dharma-śāstra' in Smṛti-candrikā, I, p. 174, slightly resembles Nar. 58. 37 (evaṃ yo vidhim āsthāya etc.).

Here we should like to say a few words on the contents of the Narasimha-p. as known to some of the Nibandha-writers. In his Smrti-tattva, I, p. 351 Raghunandana quotes from the 'Narasımha-p.' twenty-four metrical lines on general maxims (naya), such as 'One should give salutary advice to his friend in proper time, even though he may not be asked for it,' 'One, who believes the servants of the king or the bastards, do not live long', 'One should not allow the remaining part of the enemies, debt and fire to continue, because these increase again,' One should not begin any work which may create repentance in the end,' and so on. He also quotes in Smrti-tattva, I, p. 827 a verse on the proper time for marriage. In his Smrti-tattva, II, p. 66 Raghunandana quotes from the same source a verse in which 'Tulasi' and 'Kṛṣṇa-tulasī' have been mentioned as pleasing to Hari. In his Vidhāna-pārijāta, I, p. 451 Anantabhaṭṭa quotes from the 'Nārasmha' seventeen metrical lines on dressing a child with clothes for the first time. In his Caturvarga-cintamani, II, 11. pp. 41-49 Hemadri quotes a large extract of 173 metrical lines on a vow called Narasimhacaturdasi which was given in the 'Narasimha-p.' in connection with the Narasımha-prādurbhāva. In this extract Nrsimha, being asked by Prahlāda as to how he became devoted to Nrsımha and was blessed with good, says that in his previous birth Prahlada was a Brahmin named Vasudava and was addicted to a prostitute and that this Vasudeva performed no other good deed than a Vrata of Nṛsiṃha. Prahlāda again asked Nṛṣiṃha to narrate in details the whole story. Consequently Nṛṣṣṃha said that in the city of Avantī there was a famous Brahmin named Susarman who mastered all the Vedas and performed all his duties. This Susarman had a chaste and devoted wife named Suśila, who gave birth to five worthy sons, of whom Vasudeva was the youngest. Unlike the other brothers, Vasudeva was addicted to prostitutes, became a drunkard, and stole gold for financing his evil deeds. Once he quarrelled with a prostitute and kept awake throughout the whole night without taking food. The prostitute also did so. Thus, Vasudeva unconsciously performed the Vrata of Nrsimha, was born as Prahlada, and became devoted to Nrsimha. The prostitute became an Apsaras. Next, being asked by Prahlada to describe the Vrata in details, Nṛṣiṃha did so. Hemādri also quotes verses on Hari-vrata, Patra-vrata, and offer of different articles such as kamandalu, fruits, foot-wears, umbrella, clothes etc. to the Pitrs in śrāddha ceremonies. Sülapāni quotes verses on śrāddha in his Vrata-kālaviveka, Śrāddha-viveka and Tithi-viveka. In his Caitanya-caritāmṛta, III, pp. 67 and 289 Krsnadasa Kavıraja quotes from the 'Nrsımha-p.' three verses, in one of which it is said that even a Mleccha (i. e. a Muhammadan), who, being attacked by a boar, cries out 'Härāma' 'Hārāma' ('Boar', 'Boar'), attains final emancipation.345 It is needless to say that none of these verses is found in the present Narasimha-p.

In his Haribhaktiviläsa, pp. 923-7 and 929-931 Gopālabhaṭṭa quotes, from the 'Bṛhannarasiṃha-p.', 126 metrical lines on Narasiṃha-caturdaśi-vrata. As all these verses are found ascribed to the 'Narasiṃha-p.' in Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmaṇi, II. 11. pp. 41-49, it seems that either Gopālabhaṭṭa was wrong in his ascription of these verses or the 'Bṛhannarasiṃha-p.' derived some of its extracts and verses from the Narasiṃha-p. In the Ekāmra-p. (chap.1) the 'Bṛhannarasiṃha-p.' has been clearly distinguished from the 'Nārasiṃha', the former being included among the Upapurāṇas and the latter among the principal Purāṇas.

Many of these verses are the same as Bhav. I. 163. 57ff. From the position of these verses in the Narasimha-p. it seems that the Narasimha-p. is the borrower. As Gopālabhatṭa, Narasimha Vājapeyin, Raghunandana, Govindānanda, Madanapāla and Devaṇabhaṭta quote many of these verses in their respective works, it is sure that these verses have been occurring in the Narasimha-p. from a time eather than Devaṇabhaṭta.]

CHAPTER IV

THE MINOR VAISŅAVA UPAPURĀŅAS

Besides the Vaisnava Upapurāṇas examined in the immediately preceding Chapter there were many others which dealt with the cult of Viṣnu and belonged to comparatively late dates; but of these, only a few have come down to us, the rest appearing to have been extinct on account of their importance being restricted to particular localities or times. As, due to various inconveniences, I could not get access to the manuscripts of all those of these extant Upapurāṇas which have not yet been published, my treatment of these works could not be expected to be exhaustive. I should, however, point out that the minor Vaisṇava Upapurāṇas, lest out of consideration here, are very few (being about two or three in number) and come from very late dates.

From our examination of the Upapurānas below we shall see that many of these works were compiled in eastern India, especially in Bengal, under varying circumstances created by the spread of the heresies, mainly Buddhism, and the Tantric cults. A study of the history of Vaiṣṇavism shows that this religious faith, being more closely connected with the Vedas than Saivism, Sāktism etc., has been used in different ages as a corrective of social indiscipline caused and encouraged by the heresies and the popular cults. Moreover, there were changes in the ideas, rites and customs of the Vaiṣṇavas with the progress of time, and these also must have given them impetus to compile new Upapurāṇic works for the guidance of the people.

1. THE KRIYĀYOGASĀRA1

In the chapter-colophons of its printed editions as well as of its Mss this work claims to belong to the Padma-p. Hence it has been regarded as one of the Khandas of the latter and printed accordingly

The Vanga ed of this work consists of 26 chapters and is practically the same as that published with the Venkat, ed. of the Padma-p.

in the Venkat. ed. of the Padma-p. with the words 'atha kriyayogasara-khandam arabhyate'. But really it is a distinct and independent work attached, most probably at a later date, to the Padma-p. for the sake of authority. It begins like other independent Puranic works and styles itself 'Upapurana' in its concluding verse; and nowhere in the body of its text there is any reference to its connection with the Padma-p. In some of the chapter-colophons of two of its Mss³ it does not claim to belong to the Padma-p. The Nāradīya-p. (I. 93) also, though giving the names and contents of the different Khaṇḍas of the Padma-p., makes no mention of the Kriyāyogasāra. The independent character of this work is shown definitely by the Bṛhaddharma-p. (I. 25.24) which names this work in its list of eighteen Upapurānas.

The Kriyāyogasāra begins with three verses containing salutations to Hari, 'lord of Laksmī', who is said to have assumed various forms including that of Vyāsa, the author of the Purāṇas. It then states that once Sūta came with his pupils to Naimisāranya where the sages were holding a meeting for the good of the world. One of these sages, Saunaka by name, referred to the evils of the Kali age and requested Sūta to tell them how people could be highly devoted to Hari. Consequently, Sūta reported to the sages what Vyāsa had said to Jaimini on 'kriyāyoga-sāra' (i.c. 'the essence of yoga by work'), which was furnished with various stories as well as with discourses on Nātāyaṇa. Thus the topics of the Kriyāyogasāra have been introduced in chap. 1. The contents of the remaining chapters as are follows.

Mahāviṣnu's appearance as Brahmā, Visnu and Rudra, who were created respectively from the right, left and middle parts of his body; and his Ādyā Prakrti's assumption of the forms of Brāhmī, Lakṣmī and Ambikā in order to urge and help Brahmā, Visnu and Rudra respectively in their works. Brahmā's creation of the five elements as well as of the different lokas including the earth.

Geography of the earth (with its continents, oceans and mountains). Position of Bhāratavarsa, which is said to be bounded on the north by the Himalayas and on the south by the Vindhya mountain. Praise of Bhāratavarṣa as the 'karma-dhūmi' (place of work) for the Vaisnavas (called Bhāgavatas). Praise of Vaiṣṇavas.

In our Venkat, and Vanga editions as well as in some of the Mss of the Kriyā-yogasāra the reading 'ruciratara-purānam' is found in place of 'ruciram upapurānam' occurring in the great majority of the Mss mentioned above. Mitra's Ms reads 'sarasatara-purānam' (see Mitra, Notices, III, p. 114).

Story of Visnu's killing of the demons Madhu and Kaitabha.

Viṣṇu's enumeration of the characteristics of Vaiṣṇavas, who are to look upon Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Rudra as equal, to wear garlands made of Tulasī wood and Dhātrī fruits, to mark their limbs with the figures of śaṅkha, cakra, gadā and padma, to bathe regularly in the waters of the Gangā, to study the Bhāgavata (śāstraṃ bhāgavatam), to construct new Viṣṇu-temples or repair old ones, to plant Pippala (Aśvattha) trees, to serve cows and superiors, to have no regard for the Pāṣanḍas, to be devoted to Śiva, to worship Viṣṇu, and to do various other works.

Chap. 3.—Praise of 'kriyā-yoga' over 'dhyāna-yoga'. Kriyā-yoga consists of (1) worship of Gangā, Śrī and Visnu, (11) donation, (111) devotion to Brahmins, (111) observance of the Ekādaśî-vrata, (112) regard for Dhātrī trees and Tulasī plants, and (112) hospitality to guests.

Jaimini's request to Vyāsa to describe the benefits of the pious acts constituting 'kriyā-yoga'. Vyāsa's consequent praise of the Gangā (which is said to be specially sacred at Gangā-dvāra, Prayāga and Gangā-sāgara-sangama) by narrating the story of a vulture which described to king Manobhadra of the Lunar race its experience of the benefits of bathing and dying in the waters of the Gangā and the outcome of ignoring one's parents.

Chaps. 4-9.—Praise of the Gangā continued.—Glorification of the waters of, and bath and death in, the Gangā especially at Prayāga and Gangā-sāgara-sangama; and narration of various relevant stories⁶ includ-

Method and praise of Gangā-yātrā.

Chap. 10.—Praise of worshipping Visnu (especially with Campaka flowers) and of doing various other pious acts during the month of Māgha.

Chaps. 11-14.—Daily duties which a Vaisnava must do after leaving bed in the morning. Method and praise of worshipping Visnu with the offer of different articles and of rendering various kinds of service to him during the months of Phālguna, Caitra etc. Praise of Visnu-pādodaka. Glorification of Aśvattha trees by identifying them with Visnu. Story of a Brahmin named Dhanañjaya who learnt from Praise of painting the figures of śańkha, cakra etc. on the different parts of the body. Results of worshipping Viṣṇu with different kinds of flowers and leaves. Story of a pious Brahmin who learnt from Siva how, in his previous birth as a Savara, he acquired merit by supplying a lotus to a Brahmin for Viṣṇu-worship.

Chaps. 15-17.—Glorification of Visnu (Nārāyaṇa). Results of uttering the name of Rāma and of muttering the six-syllabled mantra 'om namo rāmāya'. Praise of Hari-bhakti. Glorification of the twelve-syllabled mantra 'om namo bhagavate vāsudevāya'. Enumeration of the 108 names of Kṛṣṇa (17. 98-117). Narration of relevant stories, one of which (given in chap. 17) is clearly based on the story of the attachment of Bilvamangala (author of the Kṛṣṇakaṛṇāmrta) towards a courtesan named Cintāmaṇi.

Chap. 18.—Praise of Purusottamaksetra.—Praise of the place, praise of food (anna) which is offered to Viṣṇu and is said to be acceptable to the members of the higher castes even if it is touched by a Cāṇḍāla, worship of Jagannātha, Balabhadra and Subhadrā; praise of bath in the Indradyumna-saras, Mārkaṇḍeya-hrada, Svetagangā etc. and of visiting Svetamādhava, Hanūmat, the Akṣaya-vata tree etc.; praise of receiving cane-strokes until blood comes out in profusion, performance of dola-yātrā, mahāsnāna, tatha-yātrā and Gundicāmaṇḍapa-yātrā; and so on.

Chap. 19.—Praise of revering Vișnu and dedicating various kinds of food to him. Praise of Visnu-naivedya. Narration of the stories of Urvišu (who, although a robber, dedicated to Vișnu a cart made of guda and was consequently favoured by the deity) and a Brahmin named Sarvajani (who, in his previous birth, got rid of his birdhood by taking Vișnu-naivedya).

Qualifications of persons with whom Visnu is satisfied.

Chaps. 20-21.—Praise of giving food, water, land, cows, sesamum, gems, horses, elephants, Sälagräma stone, tulä-purusa etc. Denouncement of a kanyä-vikrayin (verses 128-132). Qualifications of Brahmins who are worthy recipients of gifts. Narration of relevant stories.

Chaps. 22-23.—Praise of Ekādaśī-vrata; and the rules for its observance. Natration of relevant stories including that of Pāpapurusa (a being made of sins) who is to reside in food on the Ekādaśī Tithi.

Chaps. 24-25.—Praise of a Tulasi plant which is said to be capable of conferring on its devotees the four ends of life. Results of rendering various kinds of service to it.

Praise of Dhātrī trees, which are said to be as sacred as Tulasī plants. Praise of hospitality to guests.

Narration of relevant stories.

Chap. 26.—Conduct of people during the different yugas, especially the Kali-yuga.

The above contents of the Kriyāyogasāra show that this work is to be valued mainly from the religious point of view. It is a Bhāgavata document on the praise of Visnu-worship. It conceives of Mahāvisnu as identical with Parātman and states that this Mahāvisnu appears as Brahmā, Visnu and Rudra for the sake of creation, and his Ādyā Prakrti, being the cause of the universe, assumes the forms of Brāhmī, Lakṣmī and Ambikā to urge and help Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Rudra respectively in their works. It advocates bbakti, lays special stress on dāsya-bhakti, and believes that by devoutly worshipping

Viṣṇu one can attain sārūpya, sālokya and kaivalya. It is of opinion that a Cāṇḍāla, who is devoted to Viṣṇu, is really superior to a Brahmin who is not so. It rarely uses the name 'Kṛṣṇa,' but its mention of Balarāma instead of Kṛṣṇa in its lists of incarnations (including Buddha and Kalkin) shows that it looks upon Kṛṣṇa as identical with Mahāviṣṇu himself. It recommends the study of the Bhāgavata-p., calls the Vaiṣṇavas 'Bhāgavata,' and preaches the equality of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Siva. The sectarian mantras mentioned in it are the following: 'oṃ namo nārāyaṇāya,' 'oṃ namo bhagavate vāsudevāya' and 'oṃ namo rāmāya.'

That the Kriyāyogasāra is a work of Bengal, 12 and most probably of its eastern part, can be shown by the following pieces of evidence. (1) Mss of this work are found in Bengal in large numbers, but they are very rare in other provinces. (2) All of the numerous Mss of this work, hitherto discovered and preserved in different places in and outside India, are written in Bengali script. (3) That this work was very popular in Bengali is shown by the fact that it was translated into Bengali by different authors at different times. In the Dacca University collection there are several Mss of Bengali translations of this work by different writers, viz., Ananta Datta, Rāmeśvara Nandī, Prāṇa-nārā-yaṇa and Sīva-nārāyaṇa. (4) It was the writers of Bengal who first recognised the Kriyāyogasāra as an authoritative work. The Bṛhaddharma-p., which is the first and most probably the only work to include the Kriyāyogasāra among the 'eighteen' Upapurāṇas, belongs decidedly to Bengal. (5) Although the Kriyayogasara says that the Gangā is specially sacred at three places, viz., Gangādvāra, Prayāga and Gangā-sāgara-sangama, it gives more attention to the praise of the last one. (6) The fruits and flowers, mentioned in the Kriyayogasara, are very common in Bengal. (7) The description of Madhava's marriage with Sulocana, as given in chap. 5 of the Kriyayogasara, includes certain rites which are peculiar to Bengal. These rites are (a) the performance of adhivasa of the bride on the day immediately preceding that of marriage, and the tying of Dürva grass to her hand with a few folds of thread on this occasion, 15 (b) the sounding of conch-shells before marriage, 16 and (c) the taking of the bride, seated on a flat seat (pītha-popularly called offer in Bengal) of 'Gambhari wood,' by her paternal blood-relations to the bridegroom in the marriage-pandal at the time of marriage.¹⁷ It is to be noted that Gambhari wood is very commonly used for making seats, boats etc. in Eastern Bengal and Assam (especially in the districts of Mymensingh, Sylhet, Tipperah etc.). In the vernacular works of mediaeval Bengal, there are numerous references to the use of 'Gamari' or 'Gambhari' wood for the construction of various things such as boats and flat seats (popularly called पींडि and meant for use especially in marriage), and so on.18 (8) Some words have been used in the same peculiar meanings as they are found to carry in present-day Bengal,-(a) The word 'prastava' has been used in the sense of 'story,' 'account' etc. in Kriyayogasara 6. 125 (sulocanāyāḥ prastāvaṃ kathayāmāsa bhūtale). It should be mentioned here that this word is found to be used in the above-mentioned sense in Eastern Bengal only. (b) The word 'nıkaţa' has been used in the sense of 'to' or 'near' in Kriyayogasara 5. 121 (gatva tannıkate) and 160 (asau duḥkhāgatā kanyā varasya nikaṭe 'dhunā). (c) The word 'sādhu' has been used in the sense of 'merchant' in Kriyāyogasāra 4.50 (tām sādhu-patnīm ādāya yayuh...). This word has been used in the above-mentioned sense in the Hitopadesa, which is, in all probability, a work of Bengal. (d) The word 'kallola' has been used in the sense of 'rinsing' in Kriyayogasara 10.21 (kuryad dvadaśa viprendra kallolanı jalan budhah) and 22. 90 (kallolan mukha-suddhim tu kuryād dvādaśabhir budhah). This word seems to be the Sanskritised form of the word 'कुलकृति' as used in Eastern Bengal to mean 'rinsing.' It has also some resemblance with the word 'क्रचि' (meaning 'rinsing') used in western and other parts of Bengal. (e) The root 'ni' has been used in the sense of 'grah' (to take) in Kriyayogasara 6. 148 (vipattyām yena hastena nayet pāda-rajaļi klialu/śiraļi kṛntati tenaiva svāminali prāpya sampadam //). (9) Some expressions have been formed in imitation of those in Bengali. As an instance we may cite Kriyayogasara 6. 100-101-kanyaya düşanam nasti nasti vidyadharasya vā/, mamaiva dūṣaṇaṃ sarvaṃ yato hīnasya sangabhāk// (Cf. Bengali-कन्यार दोष नाइ, श्रामारइ सब दोष). (10) The method of carrying water in pitchers, as referred to in the verse ityalocya vararoha savyakacche ghațam tatali/ krtva palayane bhitya manas cakre sarovarat// (5.28), is very common with the women of Bengal.

The Kriyāyogasāra is not a very early work. It is quite familiar with the names of the zodiacal signs, 19 praises the Tulasī plant on many occasions, mentions the Buddha incarnation in two places, 20 and recommends the study of the Rāmāyaṇa, the Mahābhārata (bhāratam vyāsa-bhāṣitam) and the Bhāgavata-p. 21 In chap. 17 it contains a story which is clearly an imitation of that of Bilvamangala. Hence the Kriyāyogasāra cannot be dated earlier than 700 A.D. Again, a

Ms of this work is dated 1556 Saka²²; and the Brhaddharma-p., which was written in Bengal either in the latter half of the thirteenth or in the former half of the fourteenth century A.D.,²³ mentions the Kriyāyogasāra in its list of Upapurāṇas and thus recognises this work as highly authoritative. Hence the Kriyāyogasāra must have been written at least two centuries earlier, i.e. not later than the eleventh century A.D. The facts that the Kriyāyogasāra has very little Tantric influence and that, unlike the Mahābhāgavata and the Brhaddharma-p, it pays no attention to Tantric Sāktism, show that it is to be dated earlier than the Mahābhāgavata²⁴ also. It is highly probable that this work was written towards the end of the ninth or the beginning of the tenth century A.D.

The mention of 'Yavana' in the line 'ahanan nisitaih khadgair nisāyām yavanopamah' (7.62) need not be taken to assign the Kriyāyogasāra to a date posterior to that of Muhammadan conquest of Bengal. As there is no second mention of Yavanas in this work, it seems that the Muhammadans were still outside Bengal and that the author of the Kriyāyogasāra had no direct knowledge of the evils of Muhammadan rule.

A study of the Kriyāyogasāra shows that at the time of composition of this work there was a great spread of the 'Pāṣanḍas' who disregarded Viṣṇu² 5 and encouraged people to neglect the Vedas and the Purānas, 25 to dispossess Brahmins of their landed property, 27 to punish honest men,28 and to do various other acts of violence. It should be mentioned here that by the term 'Pāṣaṇḍa' the Kriyāyogasāra means those people, especially the red-robed Buddhists, who were regardless of the Vedic injunctions and followed the non-Vedic rites and customs.29 As the spread of these Pasandas was unfavourable to the Varņāśramadharma and Viṣṇu-worship, the Kriyāyogasāra advised people not even to speak with these Pasandasao, It decried those who took beef,31 and preached the Vedic rites as lawful (dharmya).22 It prescribed the use of only the Vedic and the Puranic mantras, 33 encouraged the study of the Vedas and the Puranas, praised the performance of the 'five great sacrifices' (pañca-mahayajña), 31 and added great importance to the observance of the Vedic rules of castes and orders of life. It should be noted that in trying to popularise his religious faith as well as to establish the Vedic rules of life and conduct, the author of the Kriyayogasara, like those of the Mahābhāgavata and the Brhaddharma-p., utilised the river Gangā, which he regarded as much sacred as Visnu.34 Although this river played a very prominent part in the religious and cultural life of the Hindus, no importance was attached to it by the followers of the heresies. Aryadeva's Cittavisuddhi-prakarana clearly shows how much the Buddhists denounced the Brahmanical practice of bathing in the first four are found neither in the Ms of the Adi-p. noticed by R. L. Mitta nor in those described by H. P. Shastri and Eggeling. It ends with the chapter on yamalarjuna-bhanga (breaking of the pair of Arjuna trees), an exploit of the infant Krsna at Vrndavana. A comparison of this printed Adi-p. with Shastri and Eggeling's Mss shows that the former does not represent the entire Adi-p. but contains only a part of it. This fragmentary character of the printed edition is also shown by its chap. 6 which mentions the different incidents connected with Krsna's life from his birth to his exploits at Mathura and Dvāravatī. It is highly probable that Shastri and Eggeling's Mss also do not comprise the whole work known under the title 'Adi-p.', because these Mss end with Krsna's exploits at Mathura and record none of the incidents at Dvaravati, and in the second of the two complete Mss of the Adi-p. described by H. P. Shastri, the final colophon ends with the words 'samāpta's cāyam pūrva-khandah'. Of the Uttara-khanda of the Adı-p. we know nothing at present. It seems to have dealt with Krsna's exploits at Dvaravati.

2. THE ADI-PURANA

An Adya- or Adi-purāna is mentioned in most of the lists of eighteen Upapurānas and has been drawn upon extensively by almost all the Nibandha-writers. We have also got an Adi-purāna preserved in Mss³⁷ and published by the Venkateśvara Press, Bombay, and by Navīna-krsna Lāhā (with a Bengali translation), Calcutta. We shall see below that these two Adi-purānas are quite distinct in character and belong to different dates.

36 In the Cittavisuddhi-prakarana Āryadeva says "If salvation could be attained by means of Ganges water, then fishermen would all attain salvation, and more particularly the fishes, which are in the Ganges day and night." (Winternitz, History of Indian Literature, Vol. II, p. 351).

The printed Adi-p., which calls itself the essence of all the Purānas, ⁸⁸ begins with the verse 'rajojuṣe janmani sattva-vṛttaye', the first two quarters of which are the same as those of the first introductory verse of Bānabhatṭa's Kādambarī. This introductory verse as well as a few others which follow it contains salutations to Viṣṇu and Vyāsa, of whom the former is described as 'cinmātra-rūpa' and 'paramātma-rūpin' and is called Brahma, when consisting of pure consciousness, and Māyeśvara, when taking the human form, ⁸⁹ while the latter, who is a form of Viṣnu, is said to have divided the original Veda and given it to his disciples, to have composed a Purāna-saṃhitā after collecting the anecdotes (itihāsa) from the Veda, and to have written the Brahma-sūtra in order to elucidate the meaning of this Purāna-saṃhitā, the Bhāgavata-p. as a commentary on the Brahma-sūtra, and the present Adı-p. to embody the essence of all these works.40 Next, after praising the Naimisa forest as the Visnu-vana (forest of Visnu) and the best of all holy places, this Purana states that once Sūta came to the hermitage of Saunaka in this forest during a twelve-year sacrifice instituted by the latter and was duly received by the sages. (-Chap. 1). When Sūta took his seat, Saunaka praised his presence as productive of immense good, asked him to take rest, and retired to the fire-sanctuary (agni-grha) to perform his own evening duties. (-Chap. 2). When, after taking rest, Suta returned to Saunaka in company with the sages, the latter described the evils of the Kali age41 and requested the former to tell them how people could get rid of these evils and to describe, in connection with Kṛṣṇa 'the lord of cowherdesses', the essence of the Puranas, Itihasa, Dharmasastras and the work of Badarayana (i.e. the Brahmasūtta). (-Chap. 3). The other sages also requested Sūta to speak on the way of attaining devotion to Hari. Consequently, Sūta saluted Kṛṣṇa (whom he described as 'cidanandamaya' and 'trimurtika') and Vyasa, and consented to reproduce the Adi-purana which he had heard from his teacher Vyāsa and which was the essence of all Sastras. (-Chap. 4).

In chap. 5 we are told that Vyāsa heard from Nārada this Ādi-p. which was proclaimed originally by Sanatkumāra. It is said that once, in course of his wanderings, Nārada came to Vyāsa's hermitage on the bank of the Sarasvatī and was warmly received there by Vyāsa's pupils, and that being requested by these pupils to speak on the means of getting rid of Viṣnu-māyā which steeps the whole creation in nescience, Nārada spoke about Kṛṣṇa, who is one of the incarnations of Viṣṇu and of whom he had heard from Kumāra. 43

⁴¹ Speaking of the bad effects of the Kalı age the Adı-p, says that people will become non-believers and look upon the Salagrama as a piece of stone meant for measurement of weight, and that one's wife's brothers will be one's best advisers (Adi-p. 3. 7 and 19).

⁴³ Adi-p. 5. 3-13.

Thus the topics of the present Adi-p. have been introduced in the printed edition. The Mss of the Adi-p., on the other hand, make no mention of Sūta or Vyāsa but simply say that once, in course of his wanderings, Nārada came to Naimiṣāraṇya in order to see Saunaka and others and had a warm reception from the sages living there. It was at their request to speak on the means of getting rid of Visnumāyā that Nārada narrated the contents of the present Ādi-p.

That the present beginning of the printed edition is due to a change made at a later date by the addition of its first four chapters, is shown not only by Shastri and Eggeling's Mss of the Adi-p. but also by the mention of Nārada and Saunaka as interlocutors in the colophons of all the chapters from chap. 5 of the printed edition. It is to be noted that in chap. 5 of the printed edition Nārada speaks to Vyāsa and his pupils, and not Saunaka.

Though the beginning of the printed Adi-p. is different from those of the Mss, it deals, like chaps. 1-25 of the latter, mainly with the story of Krsna—the legendary account of the birth of Krsna as well as of Baladeva, Vasudeva's eulogy of Krsna and his removing of the newborn child to Nanda's house, the merry-makings in Nanda's house on the occasion of Kṛṣṇa's birth, the ceremony of naming Kṛṣṇa and Baladeva as performed by Garga, and the incidents connected with Krsna's infancy, viz., his killing of the demoness Putana and of the demon Trnavarta, his breaking of a cart, his childish sports with his foster-mother Yasoda as well as with other cowherdesses (such as those of his stealing milk, curd and butter and sharing these with his associates, his breaking of utensils, his escape on more occasions than one from the midst of cowherdesses who tried to capture him, his passing the night with all the gopikas separately in their respective houses, and so on), his defeat in a wrestling competition with Baladeva, and his breaking of a pair of Arjuna trees when he was tied by Yasoda to a mortar.

In connection with this story, the following topics have been dealt with in the printed editions:—The benefits of worshipping Kṛṣṇa by forsaking all contact with women; characteristics of the devotees of Hari; description and praise of Mathurā-mandala, in which Vṛṇdāvana is situated, praise of Vṛṇdāvana, which is called the most favourite place and the eternal abode of Kṛṣṇa and in which Kṛṣṇa's sports and exploits are always to be experienced through love and devotion, characteristics of a love-messenger (dūtī); description of the Kali age; a summary of the Rāmāyaṇa; and Yaśodā's seeing the universe in Kṛṣṇa's mouth.

In order to glorify Kṛṣṇa, a few subsidiary stories have been introduced; viz., Nārada's meeting with Viṣṇu in Sveta-dvīpa and the latter's narration of the story of ten sages who meditated on Kṛṣṇa (the delighter of gopikās-gopikā-ramaņa) of Vindavana in order to experience his sports; Nārada's bath in the Mānasa lake, his consequent attainment of an extremely beautiful female form, and his experience of Kṛṣṇa's allaying the jealous anger of Rādhā as well as of his Rāsa-līlā and other sports at Vrndavana with the gopis, especially with Rādhā, the daughter of Vṛṣabhānu; Nārada's attainment of a male body by bathing in the Kṛṣṇa-gangā and his experience of Kṛṣṇa's Vraja-līlā, which is 'nıtya' (permanent) and in which Kṛṣṇa tends cattle with his friends and associates and is received in the evening by his foster-mother and other cowherdesses; Visnu's narration to Brahmā of the story of his taking the form of a bee and describing the love-sport (prema-līlā) of the love-smitten (śṛṇgāra-rasa-vihvala-mānasa) Kṛṣṇa at Vṛndāvana with innumerable gopīs who are called the images of his own image (viz., Rādhā)44, with the mention of the lineage of Nanda and Radha45 as well as the names of the eight principal female friends of Rādhā, the principal gopīs46 who attend upon Kṛṣṇa, and Kṛṣna's associates (including Rādhā's four brothers named Vrsavrdhnu, Manahsaukhya, Stokakṛṣna and Sudāman) who play and tend cattle with him and never grow old or die; rebirth of Carumati, daughter of the sage

⁴⁵ Nanda, the foster-father of Krsna, is said to be the youngest son of Citrasena, who, again, was the youngest son of Kālamedu, the great-grandson of Ābhīrabhānu, the lord of gopas, of Mahāvana. Rādhikā was born of Mānavī by Vrsabhānu, the great-grandson of Āsisena (Ārstisena?), the Mahāgopa, of the village Ārstigrāma (See Ādi-p, chap 12).

⁴⁶ The long list of the names of these principal gopis includes the following —Mālatī, Madālasā, Citrā, Vetravatī, Kalāvatī, Sunandā, Višākhā, Sārikā, Mādhavī, Candrāvalī, Bhadrāvalī, Campāvatī, Tilottamā, Alayā and Tārāvalī.

Kālabhīru, as the demoness Putanā due to the curse of her husband Kakṣīvat, who was offended with Cārumatī on account of her illicit connection with a Sūdra; rebirth, in the form of the demon Tṛnāvarta, of the Bhāgavata king Viśvaratha of Drāvida who gave trouble, under suspicion of thieving, to a Brahmin Vaiṣnava who was returning at night after attending a 'kīrtana,' and so on.

In Shastri and Eggeling's Mss of the Adi-p., the story of Kṛṣṇa further continues up to the killing of Kamsa at Mathurā and includes the following incidents:—Kṛṣṇa's killing of Vatsāsura, Bakāsura, Aghāsura, Dhenuka, Pralamba and others, and his chastisement of the serpent Kālīya, Brahmā's experience of Viṣnu-māyā, Kṛṣṇa's uplifting of the mountain Govardhana, and his Rāsa-krīdā; and so on. In these Mss there are also chapters on the praise of gopīs, the different kinds of nāyakas and nāyikās (including a section on 'svakīya-bheda-varṇana'), the glory of the name of Kṛṣṇa (nāma-māhātmya), the description of the seasons Vasanta, Grīsma, Sarat and Hemanta, and so on. There are also a few subsidiary stories such as that of the previous birth of the demon Dhenuka.

From the contents of the present Adi-p. indicated above, it is clear that this Purāṇa is solely dedicated to the promulgation of faith in Krsna, who, unlike the other gods, is kind to both friends and foes. In this work Kṛṣṇa is regarded not only as an incarnation of Viṣnu but as the Bhagavat himself⁴⁷ and the eternal Brahma. He is the individual and the Supreme Soul,⁴⁸ and is both one and many. Though, in his supreme state, he is formless and has no beginning or end, he manifests himself in different forms through guṇa. Being 'raṣākrṣta,' he sports permanently, at Vṛṇdāvana with gopīs, especially with Rādhā who is called his Parā Vidyā, Parā Sakti, and Hlādinī Sakti⁴⁰ and who does not seem to be his wedded wife, but no male can experience these sports unless he turns a female.⁵⁰ Kṛṣṇa's Vṛaja-līlā, on the other hand, is said to be open to his male devotees. People are advised to devote themselves solely to the worship of Kṛṣṇa⁵¹ and to look upon women as obstacles in the way of their spiritual development. They are to practise love and devotion in such a way that they should always be ready to do good to others and should not be affected in the least or try for a remedy, even if they are insulted, oppressed, beaten, or killed by others. According to this Purāṇa, 'bhajana' (i.e. kīrtana), based on prema and bhakti, is the best way of Kṛṣṇa-worship and is superior to yoga, dāna etc.; and all the members of the four castes without distinction of age or sex, as well as Antyajas, Pulkasas and Miecchas are entitled to worship Kṛṣṇa.⁵³

The present Adi-p., as its contents show, can never claim an early origin. On p. 524 of his Haribhaktiviläsa Gopālabhatta quotes from an Ādi-p nine verses on the praise of devotees of Krsna, and on pp. 612, 634, 678 and 683 he quotes from the same source thirteen more verses on Krsna-nāma māhātmya. In quoting some of these verses he uses the words 'ādi-purāne śrikrsnārjuna-samvāde'. But none of these verses occurs in the chapter (viz, chap. 45) on 'nāma-māhātmya' contained in the Mss of the Ādi-p described by Eggeling in his Ind. Off. Cat, VI, pp. 1184-85, Nos 3335-36, and by H. P. Shastri in his ASB Cat., V, pp. 708-9, Nos. 4072-73.

55 The Laghu-bhagavatameta quotes from the 'Adi-p', nine verses in which

and a few other works of the later Vaisnava writers of Bengal a number of verses has been quoted from an 'Adi-p.', and in these quoted verses Krsna speaks to Arjuna on the praise of the name and devotees of Visnu (Krsna). Although some of these verses have been ascribed by Gopālabhatta definitely to a 'Srīkrsnārjuna-samvāda in the Adi-purāna' (adi-purane śrikrsnarjuna-sam vade) and a number of them occurs in the manuscripts of the Visnu-nāma-māhātmya66 consisting of a 'Srīkrsnārjuna-samvada' and claiming to belong to the Adi-p., we are not sure that the Adi-p., of which this Visnu-nama-mahatmya claims to be a part, is the same as that found in the printed editions and the Mss mentioned above. On the other hand, Mitra Miśra, though not quoting any verses from the present Adi-p., must have been quite familiar with this work; because, after giving two lists of Upapurāṇas from the 'Kūrma-p.' and the 'Brahmavaivarta-p.', Mitra Miśra quotes Matsya-p. 53. 59b-63 in support of the view that the Upapurāṇas originated from the major 'Purāṇas', and then exemplifies this view by naming the Nandikeśvara-p., Adi-p. and Devi-p., which, he says, were recognised as Upapuranas by great men (mahajana-parigrhītāni) and of which the first and the third are not mentioned in any of the two lists of Upapurānas given by Mitra Miśra. Hence it is Krsna speaks to Arjuna on the praise of the votaries of Krsna, of the devoted gopikās, and of Vridāvana, and one of which is the same as a verse quoted from the Ādi-p in Haribhaktivilāsa, p. 524.

The Laghu-bhāgavatāmrta, which consists of two Khandas—Pūrva and Uttara named as Krsnāmrta and Bhaktāmrta respectively, must be the same as the 'Bhāgavatāmrta' which Krsnadāsa Kavirāja ascribes to Sanātana and from which he learnt 'bhakti-tattva' and 'krsna-tattva'. See Krsnadāsa Kavirāja's Caitanya-caritāmrta, IIF, p. 111—sanātana kaila grantha bhāgavatāmrte/bhakti-tattva krsna-tattva jāni yāhā haite//). But in the introduction to their edition of the Laghu-bhāgavatāmrta Balai Chand Goswami and Atul Krishna Goswami say that this work was written by Rūpa Gosvāmin sure that the 'Ādī-p.' also (which Mītra Mīśra recognised as an Upapurāṇa, because it was recognised as such by great men) must be different from the first Upapurāṇa which is mentioned in the lists with the words 'ādyam sanatkumāroktam,' and 'ādyam sanatkumāram ca' respectively. A comparison between the printed Ādī-p and the present Brahmavaivarta-p. shows that the story of Kṛṣṇa, as given in the latter work, is decidedly of a later date. On the other hand, the present Ādī-p. holds the Tulasī plant in high esteem and seems to have known the tyranny of the Muhammadans in India.⁵⁷ Hence this Purāṇa should be dated between 1203 and 1525 A.D.

Though a late work, the printed Adi-p. does not attach itself as a part to any Mahāpurāṇa, but claims to be the same as the earlier Adi-p. which was spoken out by Sanatkumāra. It is needless to say that this claim is wholly untenable. Even the verse, in which this claim has been put forth by the printed editions, occurs in Shastri and Eggeling's Mss in a quite different form without any mention of Sanatkumāra or of the earlier Adi-p.

In the present Adi-p, there is mention of the use of bracelets of conch-shell by women, 50 of a proverb in the line 'adau ca sakhi hitva gam vinayo na virajate', 60 of the word 'gali' used in the sense of 'reproach' on several occasions, 61 of marking a child on the forehead with collyrium for saving it from the harmful effect of others' sight, and of tying a tiger-nail and a hymn of Rama to a child's neck for saving it from the influence of evil spirits. 62 These, as well as the fact that some of the ideas and practices⁶³ of Chitanya of Navadvīpa and tenets of Chitanyaism are found mentioned in the present Ādi-p., tend to create the impression that this Purāṇa, like the chapters on Mathurāmāhātmya of the Varāha-p., was written in Bengal by a disciple of Chitanya; but we have already seen that the Haribhaktivilāsa and the Laghu-bhāgavatāmīta quote verses from a part claiming to belong to an 'Ādi-p.' which cannot be said definitely to be different from the present Ādi.

(II). Quite different from our present Ādi-p. was the earlier Ādya- or Ādi-p. which is mentioned in most of the lists of eighteen Upapurānas and in which Sanatkumāra was the speaker. It seems that Sanatkumāra reported to a king, most probably to Yudhisthira, what he had heard from Vyāsa. That the earlier Ādya p. and Ādi-p. were identical, is shown by the following facts: (1) the Brhaddharma-p. (1. 25. 23) names the first Upapurāna as 'Ādi-p.', (2) while enumerating the works used in writing his Dānasāgara and Adbhutasāgara Vallālasena names an 'Ādya Purāna', 4 but when this Purāṇa is referred to or drawn upon by him. it is mentioned as 'Ādi-p.'; (3) in a particular work the same verses are sometimes found ascribed to the 'Ādi-p.' in some Mss and to the 'Ādya-p.' in others; (4) in some of the long citations from the 'Ādi-p.' in the Caturvarga-cintāmani, Sanatkumāra appears as the speaker; and (5) in their commentaries on Raghinandana's Malamāsa-tattva Kāśīrāma Vācaspati and Rādhāramana

Gosvāmi-bhaṭṭācārya take the 'Ādya Sanatkumārokta' (Purāṇa), mentioned in a list of Upapurāṇas derived by Raghunandana from the 'Kaurma', to mean the 'Ādi-p.'¹¹ This Ādya- (or Ādi-) purāna was also called 'Sanatkumāra'⁷², 'Sānatkumāra'⁷³ and 'Sanatkumārīya'¹⁴ and also perhaps 'Sanatkumārokta'¹⁵ or 'Sanatkumāra-prokta'¹⁶ from the name of its chief interlocutor.

The eatlier Ādya- (or Ādi-) purāṇa occupied a very exalted position among the Upapurāṇas, so much so that it is assigned the first place in almost all the lists of eighteen Upapurānas as well as in that list of eighteen 'Purānas' which Alberūnī committed to writing from dictation.²⁷ Alberūnī's list (which consists partly of Mahāpurāṇas and partly of Upapurāṇas, viz., Ādi, Narasiṃha, Nanda, Āditya etc.) shows that by the end of the tenth century A. D. the Ādi-p. not only attained the position of being included in the list of eighteen 'Puranas' but also became prominent enough to be named first of all. Hence the Adi-p. must have preceded Alberuni by a fairly long time. The Vayu-p. (chap. 104) mentions an 'Adika-p.' in a list of eighteen Puranas including the Brahma-p. (which also is sometimes called Adı-p), Gangadhara, in his commentary on the Dharma-samhita, quotes from 'Padma-purāna, chapter 19' a metrical line which includes the Saiva, Adi-p. and Devi-bhagavata among the Upapuranas;78 and the present Saura-p. is said in its chap. 9 as well as in the Reva-khanda and the Reva-mahatmya to have formed the latter part of a complete work, of which the former part was declared by Sanatkumāra?" and which was, according to the Revä-kh. and the Revä-mähātmya, also widely known under the title 'Sanatkumāra'. These, as well as the first position of the Adya- (or Adi-) purana in all the comparatively early lists of eighteen Upapuranas, point to a still earlier origin of this Purana. Hence this Adya- (or Adi-) purana must be dated earlier than 700 A.D. As in some of the verses quoted from the earlier Adi-p. there is mention of the law-giver Manu, as well as of the names of rāsis and week-days, et this Purāna should not be placed before 500 A.D. It is probable that this work was written during the sixth century A. D. This early origin of the Adi-p. is supported by its non-Tantric character which is unmistakably indicated by the quotations made from it in the different Smṛti Nibandhas on vrata, pūjā, dana, etc.

It is to be noted that in the great majority of the lists of eighteen Upapurānas the first Upapurāna is the 'Ādya declared by Sanatkumāra'.

A 'Sanatkumāropapurāņa' is drawn upon in the Sivārcana-dīpikā which is later than the first half of the seventeenth century A.D. (See Shastn, ASB Cat., III, p. 866, No 2853)

As not even a single Ms of the earlier Adya- (or Adi-) purana has been found up to the present time, we shall try to give here some idea of its Smrti contents on the basis of the verses quoted from it in the commentaries and Nibandhas. An examination of these verses shows that this Purana dealt, among other topics, with the following:—

Selection of countries which are habitable to the members of the four castes; good customs and usages; marriage; cremation; funeral ceremony; periods of impurity due to miscarriage, births and deaths; methods of purification; donations; Vratas; and omina and portenta.

In his Smrti-candrika, I, pp. 18-23 Devanabhatta quotes from the earlier Adi-p. fifteen verses on the selection of a habitable tract of land. These verses show that this Purana spoke of two kinds of countries,dharma-deśa and adharma-deśa. The former was distinguished by the presence of antelopes, batley and Kuśa grass as well as of the four castes and orders of life and was to be resorted to by the wise, while the latter was to be shunned by them, because the twice-born could derive no benefit even by performing hundreds of sacrifices there; but the tract of land which lay along the banks of the Ganges was the most sacred of all. A person born in Aryavarta, no matter whether he was a twice-born man or not, was not allowed to go beyond the rivers Narmadā (in the south), Sindhu (in the north and west) and Karatoyā (in the east).82 Any twice-born man, who crossed the boundary of Āryāvarta for reasons other than visiting the holy places, was to purify himself by observing the Candrayana-vrata. The people of Kañci, Kośala, Saurāstra and Devarāstra, of the two countries known by the name Kaccha,83 and of Sauvīra and Konkana were very much condemned (nindità bhṛśam); and an Ārya was advised not to reside permanently in those tracts of land which were watered by the five rivers' and were known by the name Atatta. People, who went beyond the Narmada, Sindhu and Kasisa and to the western side of

The Karatoya is a river in Northern Bengal and flows through the districts of Rangpur, Dinajpur and Bogra,

84 The text of the 'Adı-p.', as given by Devanabhatta in his Smrticandrikā, I, p. 22, reads 'narmadā-sindhu-kāśinām pāram padmasya paścimam', Though we know that 'Kāśi' was the name of the country, of which Benares was Padma (? pāram padmasya paścimam) and lived there for a period longer than that required for visiting the holy places, were sure to visit the hells after death. No marriage or funeral ceremony, nor any sacrifice was to be performed in Anga, Vanga, Kalinga, Vindhya and Mālavaka, in the countries lying on the south of the Narmadā, as well as in those on the north of the Sindhu, and in Paundra, Surāṣṭra, Caidya, Kerala and Magadha. If a twice-born man chanced to go, out of his own accord and not for visiting holy places, to Saurāṣṭra, Sindhu, Sauvīra, Āvantya, Dakṣiṇāpatha, Kalinga or other bordering countries, he was excommunicated and was to be purified by sacraments. These and other impious countries (pāpa-deśāh) were inhabited by impious people; so, a twice-born man, who went to these countries, became equally impious.

Going to deal with good customs and usages which were to be followed by the people, this Purāṇa said that the people of the Kali age, being given to sinful acts, were not fit for practising that dharma (law and custom) which was meant for the people of the Kṛta age. Hence a twice-born man of the Kali age was to avoid the following:— Practice of celibacy (as a student) for a long period, carrying a kamandalu (as a forest-hermit or as a wandering mendicant), slaughter of cows (in sacrifices), performance of human and horse sacrifices, drinking of wine, sexual union with his own brother's wife, division of paternal property by allotting the largest share to the eldest son, and marriage with a girl belonging to the same gotra as that of himself or having sapinda relationship with his mother or married to another person before. the capital, it seems that the original reading for ''kāśinām' was ''kośinām'. The river Kośi or Kauśiki formed the western boundary of Paundravardhana Cf the verse 'himavat-kauśikam vindhyam pāram padmasya paścimam/ tirthayātrām vinā gatvā punah samskāram arhati//'quoted from the 'Ādi-p.' in Smrticandrikā, I, p. 23.

85 For the relevant verses of the Adi-p, see Smrti-candrikā, I, pp. 29 and 221. The verse 'ūdhāyāh punar udvāham jyesthāmśam govadham tathā/ kalau pańca na kurvīta bhrātr-jāyām kamandalum//' is ascribed to the 'Ādi-p.' in Smrti-candrikā, I, p. 221 but to the 'Āditya-p.' in Mādhavācārya's com on the Parāśara-smrti, I ii, p 91 of the poor blood-relations on his father's and mother's side and of other helpless persons living under his care. In taking his meal he was to observe certain rules, so viz., he was not to take his meal by sitting or lying on his bed, or from a different seat, or in the morning, midday or evening, or with wet clothes on, or with the wet head, or without the sacred thread, or with his feet placed on a machine (yantra), or with his wife, or in a deserted house, a temple or a fire-sanctuary. A Brahmin might take his meal with his Brahmin wife on his way (to a distant place), but if he took his meal with his wife of a lower caste, he was degraded from his caste. If, at a dinner party, any of the persons rinsed his mouth without leaving his seat, others were to leave their meals at once and wash their hands and mouths. A Brahmin was advised not to take his meal by taking his seat in the same line with other Brahmins or even with his own relatives, because he could not be sure that the latter were not guilty of patakas.

As regards marriage, 88 It has already been said that the earlier Adi-p. disallowed the remarriage of a girl, no matter whether she was a widow or not. A person, who had such a girl as his wife, was always considered impure. This Purana was of opinion that the father, who allowed his daughter to be married according to the Gandharva form or who married his daughter to a suitable bridegroom by accepting money from the latter, attained the region of the Gandharvas after death.89

These two verses are ascribed to the Adı-p. in Dana-kaumudi, p 80, but to the Adıtya-p. in Varşa-kaumudi, p. 575.

A large number of verses on cremation of a dead body has been quoted in Antruddha-bhatta's Hāralatā, Aparārka's commentary on the Yājnavalkya-smrti, Devanabhatta's Smrti-candrikā (Part V), Govindānanda's Suddhi-kaumudī, and Raghunandana's Smrti-tattva. These verses state that when a twice-born man was on the point of death, he was taken out of the house in which he was lying. He was then bathed, dressed with a sacred piece of cloth, and laid down on the ground with his head turned towards the south. The place, at which he was thus laid, was already strewn over with Kusa grass. When he breathed his last, his body was bathed, dressed with a piece of cloth, adorned with flowers, garlands etc., scented with perfumes, and furnished with a piece of bell-metal, gold, gem or coral placed in its mouth. It was then taken out of the house by its eastern, northern or western gate according as the deceased person was a Brahmin, a Ksatriya, or a Vaisya, and carried by the deceased person's relatives or other twice-born people to the burning ground, which was generally situated on the bank of a river, or near water. But if there was no water or snow near the burning ground, the persons accompanying the dead body were to talk about water or call out 'Snow, snow'. While the dead body was carried to the burning ground, a great noise was produced by means of four kinds of musical instruments. 90 At the burning ground the dead body was laid down with care, bathed, covered with a piece of cloth, and placed on a funeral pile by the deceased person's blood-relations on his father's side or by his kinsmen or other relatives, with its feet turned towards the south.91 In the case of a male, the dead body was placed on the funeral pile with its face turned downwards, but in the case of a female, it was placed on its back. It was then set on fire by the proper person. When the dead body was mostly consumed by fire and only a small portion of it remained unburnt, the person, who set fire to it, took in his hand seven pieces of fuel of prescribed lengths, went seven times round the fire by keeping it to his right, and threw those pieces of fuel, one by one, into the fire after each complete circumambulation. He, as well as each of his companions, then gave with an axe seven strokes on the burning fuel by pronouncing the mantra 'kravyadaya namas tubhyam etc.' After that, all of them went to the adjoining river without looking to the funeral pyre, took their bath there, and offered libations of water to the departed soul by facing the south. They then returned to the village and waited outside the house until the person who set fire to the dead body went to a neighbouring pool with a club in his hand, 92 took his bath, brought water in an earthen pot, cooked rice with it in the north-eastern side of the house, and offered balls of rice in the prescribed manner to the departed soul at the gate of the house. The person, who thus offered pindas (balls of rice) to the deceased person on the first day of his death, was to offer these in the same way during the remaining nine days also.

If an ahitagni twice-born man went abroad after leaving his wife in charge of his fire and died there, his body was preserved until it was brought home and cremated with his own fire. If his body was lagudam grhitveti agragāmi-purusāntara-hastena lagudam grhitvetyarthaḥ/ 'toyārtham tu tato gacched grhitvā puruṣam puraḥ/ grhita-lagudam yatnāt sarva-duṣtanɪvāraṇam//' iti govindarāja-likhita-vrddhapracetovacanāt/ tena laguḍa-hastam puruṣam agre krtvā pinḍārtham mrnmaya-bhāndena jalam ānetavyam/ (Hāralatā, p. 166).

So, according to Amruddhabhatta the club was borne not by the person who was to fetch water from a neighbouring pool for offering pindas to the departed soul but by another member of the party who was to lead the former to the pool.

not available, his bones were brought home, soaked with ghee, covered with wool, and burnt in the above-mentioned manner along with his implements of sacrifice. In the absence of bones, an effigy was made with leaves of Sara (reed) and Paläsa, covered with an antelopeskin, tied with a thread of wool, besmeared with finely powdered barley mixed with water, and burnt. If a person, whose effigy was thus burnt by his relatives by taking him to be dead, returned home, he was to kindle the sacred fire afresh and a sacrifice was to be performed for giving him a long life. If a piece of bone was received after his effigy had been burnt, it was burnt with the fire produced by means of those half-burnt pieces of fuel which remained after the burning of the effigy. If no such fuel was available, the piece of bone was thrown into deep water. If, of a twice-born couple who maintained the sacred fire, one died before the other, the body of the former was burnt with the three kinds of fire, viz., Srauta, Smarta and Laukika, while that of the latter was cremated with the Laukika fire only.95

The bones of a dead person were collected from the burning ground generally on the fourth, fifth or sixth day according as this person was a Brahmin, a Kṣatriya, or a Vaiśya. According to local customs, his bones could be collected earlier by a day. But if the period of impurity consisted only of three days, the bones could be collected on the second day, and in case of impurity ending immediately (sadyah-śauca), the collection could be made just after the

If, of a twice-born couple who maintained the sacred fire, the husband died before his wife, his body was cremated with the three kinds of fire, viz., Srauta, Smārta and Laukika, and the wife, who died after her husband, was burnt with the Laukika fire only. But if the wife died before her husband, she was burnt with the three kinds of fire, and the husband was to kindle the sacred fire afresh. If he did so, he was burnt with the three kinds of fire after his death. But if he died before kindling the sacred fire afresh, his body was cremated with the Laukika fire only. (See Hāralatā, pp. 143-4) butning of the dead body. During this rite of collection of bones (asthi-samcayana) Samkara and the carnivorous deities residing in the burning ground were worshipped in the prescribed manner with the offer of various kinds of food, drinks, fruits, scents, flowers etc. The bones of the head were then taken by means of pieces of branches of a sacrificial tree, sprinkled with the five products of a cow (panca-gavya), covered with a piece of silk-cloth, placed in an earthen vessel furnished with a lid, and buried at a sacred place in a forest or at the root of a tree. In opportune times these bones were taken out, placed in a lump of earth together with a piece of gold as well as with honey, ghee and sesamum, and thrown into the Ganges by the deceased person's descendants or by his relations on his father's or mother's side.

In case of death of a child aged less than two years, the dead body was adorned by its relatives with ornaments, flowers, scents, garlands etc., placed in an earthen pot, and buried underground in a sacred place outside the village.

In the case of a dying Sūdra, removal from the house was not compulsory even when he was breathing his last. But when, after his death, the dead body was taken out, all the earthen wares of the house in which he died were thrown away. The dead body of a Sūdra was to be removed to the burning ground through the southern gate of the house. As Sūdras had no Srauta fire to maintain, the method of cremation was necessarily simpler in their case. No Brahmin was allowed to burn a Sūdra, even if the latter was his friend, and if he did so through mistake, he was to purify himself by taking his bath, touching fire, drinking ghee, and observing fast for three consecutive nights. The rite of collection of bones of a Sūdra was to be performed after the tenth day. It might also be performed on the tenth day, if local customs demanded so.

Regarding the methods of disposing of the dead body as prevailing among the Magas and Daradas of those days, there are a few lines quoted in Aniruddhabhatta's Hāralatā. These lines inform us that the Magas buried their corpses underground. The Daradas, on the other hand, kept their dead bodies suspended from the branches of such trees as stood far away from human habitations and were leafy enough to protect these dead bodies from rain. After the expiry of a complete year these dried up corpses were brought down from those trees, bathed with the waters of the Ganges, and burnt. 95

A large number of verses of the earlier Adi-p. is found quoted in the Nibandhas in connection with the determination of the period of impurity to be observed by the deceased person's relatives and others. The periods of impurity were determined by various factors such as the nature of relation of the persons with the deceased, their occupation, their caste, their motive in cremating a dead body, the caste, age, sex or character of the deceased person, the nature of death, the nature of help the person to be deemed impure rendered in cremating the dead body, acceptance of remuneration for carrying the dead body or cremating it, and so on. Even if a Brahmin, who was not a relative of a deceased Brahmin, lamented with the latter's relatives before the rite of collection of bones had been performed, he was to take his bath and sip water after the performance of the rite; if he did so for a Ksatriya or a Vaisya, he was to bathe with all his garments on and became pure on the second day; but by lamenting for a Sūdra, he was to bathe with his clothes on and remain impure for three days. Lamentation for a deceased person after the collection of his bones caused impurity to a Brahmin for a day and a night. In the case of the members of other castes, lamentation necessitated bath with all the garments on, if this lamentation was made before the collection of bones, but if it was made after the collection, they required simple bath for attaining purity.86

The numerous verses quoted from the 'Adr-p.' in the Smrti Nibandhas in connection with śrāddha show that this Purāņa dealt elaborately with the various points connected with this topic, viz., persons eligible for performing it under different circumstances, the method of its performance, the method of offering pindas, the number of Brahmins to be fed on this occasion, the proper day for performing the śrāddha ceremony of those who committed suicide by starting on a long journey, or fasting, or hanging, or by means of a weapon, fire or poison, enumeration of persons who deserved no śraddha ceremony (viz., those who were killed by others while abducting the latter's wives or were killed in a fight with the Candalas or such other people, or administered poison, or set fire to others' houses, or were Pasandas, or committed suicide out of anger, and so on), the method of performing the śrāddha ceremony at Gayā, and sımılar other matters. A Brahmin was forbidden to perform the śrāddha ceremony of persons of lower castes, even if the latter were his own sons. If he did so out of passion, greed, fear or affection, he was degraded to the caste of that person whose śrāddha ceremony he performed. Sons, born of Kşatriya, Vaisya or Sudra mothers, were advised to perform the staddha ceremony of their deceased Brahmin father. In case of death of these sons, their own mothers were to perform their śrāddha ceremony, and vice

Though the verses quoted from the 'Adi-p.' in connection with donations are not many, or this Purana was certainly not very poor in this topic. In his Danasagara Vallalasena says that various kinds of donations were dealt with in the Adi-p. according to their subdivisions (or, in accordance with the divisions of the year in which these were to be made?), and that in his Dānasāgara he quoted from this Putāṇa only a few verses on donations because he fully utilised its sections on dāna in his Ācārasāgara.⁹⁰

The earlier Adi-p. contained chapters on Vratas and festivals also. In Smṛti-tattva, I, p. 47 two verses on Kṛṣṇa-janmāṣṭamī are quoted from the earlier Adi-p. In his Caturvarga-cintāmaṇi, II. 11, p. 518 Hemādri quotes nine metrical lines on Yugādi-vidhi (which required the gift of barley and the performance of homa and Viṣṇu-worship with it), and on pp. 763-8 he quotes 30 verses on pradīpa-vidhi. According to these last-mentioned verses the pradīpa-vidhi was observed for one month from Aśvina-paurṇamāsī to Kārttika-paurnamāsī. At the end of this period, the Dīpa-mahotsava was performed for three days, during which lamps were lighted in the evening in the houses of the poor as well as in other places, viz., burning grounds, temples, banks of rivers, roads, castyas etc. Gifts of gold, silver, land, cows, paddy, fruits, beds etc. were also made to Brahmins on this occasion.

For the large number of verses on tīrthas (especially Gayā and Vṛddha-tīrtha) see Smrti-candrikā, V, pp. 194-201. Mādhavācārya's com. on the Parāśara-smrti, I. 11, pp. 307-8, and Aparārka's com. on the Yāj., pp. 878-9. The chapters on Gayā of the earlier Ādi-p. seem to have formed the basis of chaps. 105-112 (on Gayā-māhātmya) of the present Vāyu-p. 11 which Sanatkumāra speaks to Nārada on Gayā and which mentions an Ādika-p. 11 chap. 104 and has retained a few verses from the former. 100

Ten verses on omens and portents have been ascribed to the Adip. in Adbhutasāgara, pp. 546, 548, 550 and 552-6. Of these, one (in Adbhutasāgara, p. 546) is ascribed to the Aditya-p. in many of the Mss of the Adbhutasāgara. The remaining nine verses also might have been taken from the Aditya-p. At least the metrical similarity between these verses and those quoted from the Aditya-p. in the Adbhuta-sāgara tends to create such an impression.

It should be mentioned here that a good number of verses of the Adi-p. has been wrongly ascribed to the Aditya-p., or vice versa, For instance, in Caturvarga-cintămani, II. ii, pp. 348-9 Hemādri ascribes to the 'Aditya-p.' an extract of 29 lines dealing with Sukhasupti-vrata101 and Dyūta-pratipad and having Sanatkumāra as the speaker; the verse 'sanmasabhyantaram yavat' is ascribed to the Adi-p. ın Suddhi-kaumudī, p. 43 and Kullūkabhatta's com. on Manu-Smrti V. 66, but to the Aditya-p. in Smrti-tattva, II, p. 260, the verse 'vivāha-yajñayor madhye' is ascribed to the Adi-p. in Suddhi-kaumudī, p. 67 and Hāralatā, pp. 105-6, but to the Aditya-p. in Kālasāra, p. 272; and so on. On the other hand, the verse 'madhukam ramatham cawa' is ascribed to the Aditya-p. in Aparatka's com., p. 554, Smrti-candrikā, IV, p. 205, Mādhavācārya's com. on the Patāsarasmṛri, I. 11, p. 370, Śrāddha-kaumudī, p. 18, and Smrti-tattva, I, p. 226, but to the Adı-p. in Madana-pārijāta, p. 552 and Mādhavācarya's com. on the Parasara-smrti, I. ii, p. 373; the verse api dātṛ-grahitroś ca' is ascribed to the Aditya-p. in Nityācāra-pradīpa, I, p. 105 and Kalasara, pp. 255 and 271 but to the Adi-p. in Suddhi-

Kārtrikī Amāvāsyā, were the following:—Fast at day-time (in case the worshipper was not a child or an invalid); worship of Laksmi in the evening, illumination at temples, crossings of roads, burning grounds, pastures, etc., decoration of market-places with light, clothes, flowers, etc., feeding of Brahmins and the poor; dining with friends and relatives after wearing new clothes and ornaments, and so on On the Kārttikī Sukla-pratipad the worshipper was to play at dice in the morning, dine with friends at noon, hear songs and musical concerts after nearing ornaments and using perfumes, decorate the bedroom with light, garlands etc., pass the night with beloved women, and in the morning honour Brahmins, friends and relatives with new clothes.

kaumudi, p. 68, and so on. Even in the same work a particular verse is ascribed to the Adi-p. in some Mss and to the Aditya-p. in others 102

The earlier Adi-p. must have been a Vaisnava work. In a verse ascribed to the Adi-p. in Smrti-tattva, II, p. 512, all-pervading Viṣṇu is said to have made a rule, according to which the gods did not reside in their respective images under certain conditions, ¹⁰³ Aparärka and Govindānanda quote from the Adi-p. a verse which states that the donor of land of the measurement of even a go-carma becomes free from all his sins and attains the region of Viṣnu. ¹⁰⁴ Viṣnu is mentioned on many occasions ¹⁰⁵ and Viṣnu-worship is prescribed in many of the quoted verses; ¹⁰⁶ Saṃkara is spoken of in a verse as a deity residing in the burning ground; ¹⁰⁷ and so on.

events. As a matter of fact, it describes the deeds of Visnu to be performed at the close of the Kali-yuga, when he will be born as Kalki, son of Visnuyasas and Sumati of Sambhalagrama. It is divided into three Amsas or parts, of which the first two consist of seven chapters each and the third of twenty-one chapters. The contents of these chapters are as follows.

Amśa I.

Chap. 1.—Salutation to Vighnesa, who is adored first of all in the Vedic, Tantric and other scriptures. Invocation of Kalki, who is Hari himself.

Saunaka and others of Naimiṣāraṇya requested Sūta to speak on the origin and exploits of Kali. Consequently, Sūta referred to the tradition of inheritance of the Bhāgavata-dharma and narrated how he had heard that portion of the topics of the Bhāgavata-p. which Suka had spoken out to Mārkaṇḍeya and others after the death of king Viṣṇurāta (Parīkṣit) and which was concerned with future events. He then spoke on the following topics:—

Brahma's creation of Adharma from his back. Adharma's descendants. Birth of Kali in the family of Adharma. Description of Kali. Kali's descendants. Degradation of people during the reign of Kali. Gods' approach with the Earth to Brahma for redress.

Chap. 2.—Brahmā's approach to Viṣṇu, and the latter's assurance that he would manifest himself in the house of Viṣṇuyaśas at Śaṃbhala and that Laksmi would be born as Padma, daughter of king Brhadratha of Ceylon. Visnu's request to the gods to be born on earth.

Visnu's birth and assumption of a two-handed form. Naming of new-born Visnu as Kalki. Kalki's determination to free the earth from the influence of Kali.

Chap. 3.—Kalki's study of the Vedas and the various sciences (including Dhanurveda) with Bhārgava Rāma. His worship and eulogy of Bilvodakeśvara-śiva, with the result that he received a horse, a Suka bird and a sword from the latter. His return to Saṃbhala-grāma, establishment of Varnāśrama-dharma, and meeting with Viśākhayūpa, king of Māhismatī.

Chap. 4.—Kalki's speech to king Viśākhayūpa on the origin of the universe from himself as well as on the characteristics of Brahmins (who should practise Varnāśrama-dharma and have Tilaka marks).

Return of the Suka bird from Simhala with the information that Padmävatī, daughter of king Brhadratha, received a boon from Siva that she would have Nārāyana as her husband.

Chap. 5.—The Suka's further statement that the kings who attended the 'svayamvara-sabhā' arranged by Brhadratha, turned females as soon as they looked amorously at Padmāvatī, and became her attendants.

Amsa II.

The Suka's return to Kalki, who then met Padmavati in Simhala and married her.

The transformed kings' regaining of malehood by bathing in the river Reva. Their eulogy of Visnu by mentioning the names of his ten incarnations including the Buddha.

Chaps. 4-5.—Kalkı's instructions to the kings on Varna-śrama-dharma.

Appearance of sage Ananta before the kings at Kalki's wish. Ananta's description of his own experience of Viṣṇu-māyā at Putu-sottama; and his praise of Kalki as being capable of giving 'nirvāṇa'.

Chap. 6.—Kalki's return to Sambhala with Padmāvatī and living in a house built for him by Viśvakarman. Birth of two sons, named Jaya and Vijaya, to Kalki. Kalki's going to the city of Kīkaṭa with a huge army for chastising the Buddha; and his meeting with the 'Jina' who came out of the city with a large number of his followers.

Chap. 7.—Kalki's fight with the Bauddhas led by the 'Jina'. The Jina's defeat and death in the fight. The Biuddhas' futile attempt to defeat Kalki with the help of the Mlecchas.

Amsa III.

Chap. 1.—Kalki's victory over the Bauddhas and the Mlecchas, and his instructions on bhakts-yoga, karma-yoga and jñāna-yoga to the latter's wives, who were up in arms against him.

Chap. 2.—Kalki's return from Kīkaţa and meeting with the Bālakhilya sages at Cakra-tīrtha. His going to the Himālaya at the request of these sages and killing of the demoness Kuthodarī and her son Vikañja.

Story of the birth and deeds of Rāma, son of Dasaratha.

Chap. 4.—Names of Rāma's descendants including Maru, who was also called Budha and Sumitta and who was waiting at Kalāpagrāma for Viṣṇu's incarnation at the close of the Kali age.

Devāpi's mention of the names of the kings of the Lunar race from Budha downwards. Kalki's determination to place Maru and Devāpi on the thrones of Ayodhyā and Hastināpura respectively after killing the Mlecchas and the Pukkasas of those places. His advice to these two kings to marry the daughters of Viśākhayūpa and Rucirāśva respectively and help him in re-establishing the Kṛta-yuga. His giving of two divine chariots to Maru and Devāpi.

Chap. 5.—Krta-yuga's arrival in the form of a 'maskarin'. His account of the fourteen Manvantaras. Kalki's decision to fight with Kali in the city of Visasana.

Chaps. 6-7.—Kalki's start with Maru, Devāpi and others in his train, and meeting with Dharma, who was driven out of Viśasana by Kali. His decisive war against Kali and his allies, viz., Khaśas, Kāmbojas, Savaras, Varvaras, Cīnas, Pulindas, Colas, Niṣādas and others. Kali's defeat and escape to another varṣa. Kalki's killing of Koha and Vikoka.

Chaps. 8-13.—Kalki's arrival at Bhallāta-nagara which was ruled by a Vaiṣṇava king named Saśidhvaja. Saśidhvaja's conversation with his wife Suśāntā, in which he justified his decision for war by referring to the dvaitādvaita system of philosophy. Saśidhvaja's fight with Kalki; and his capturing the latter in an unconscious state to his own house. Suśāntā's eulogy of Kalki. Saśidhvaja's giving his daughter Ramā in marriage to Kalki. Story of Saśidhvaja and his wife's previous birth as vultures. Method of Viṣṇu-worship. Discourses on Viṣnu-bhakti. Saśidhvaja's narration of the story of Dvivida, who attained liberation by being killed by Balarāma. Saśidhvaja's mention of some exploits of Kṛṣṇa.

Chaps. 14-15.—Other deeds of Kalki, viz., his liberating the poison-girl at Kāńcanapurī, his installing of his followers on the thrones of Ayodhyā, Mathurā, Vāranāvata, Pundra, Aṅga, Vaṅga, Kīkata etc., his return to Sambhala and introduction of the Krta-yuga, and his liberating Saśidhvaja who eulogised Māyā at Kokāmukha.

Chap 16.—Performance of Rājasūya and other sacrifices by Viṣṇuyaśas. Nārada's instructions to Viṣṇuyaśas on the nature of Māyā and the glory of Kalki. Arrival of Paraśurāma at Saṃbhala.

Chap. 17.—Description of the method of performing the Rukminī-vrata, which Rāma performed for a son at Paraśurāma's advice. Praise of this Vrata by means of the story of Sarmisthā and Devayānī.

Chaps. 18-19.—Kalki's amorous sports with his wives. Brahmā and others' arrival at Sambhala, and Kalki's passing to heaven.

Chaps. 20-21.—Eulogy of Gangā. Contents of the Kalki-p., which is said to consist of six thousand and one hundred verses, praise of studying this work. Conclusion.

The Kalki-p., as its contents show, is purely a Vaiṣṇava work, its philosophic standpoint being 'dvaitādvaita'. It knows Visnu's ten incarnations including Balabhadra and the Buddha, and seems to regard Kṛṣṇa as the Bhagavat himself. It mentions the Tulasī plant once and the 'Tantras' on several occasions. By its statement that Kalki defeated the Buddha and his followers and carried on dig-vijaya for the establishment of dharma, this work seems to betray its knowledge of Saṃkarācārya's activities. That it is a late work is shown definitely by the fact that it is not referred to or drawn upon by any of the numerous Smṛti-writers known to us. It is, however, not to be dated later than the beginning of the eighteenth century A. D. One of its Mss was copied in Saka 1726.

The Kalki-p. must have been written in Bengal. Almost all its Mss, hitherto discovered, are written in Bengali script; and in Amsa I, chap. 2 (verses 38 and 41) it speaks of 'ten sacraments' (dasa samskārāh) for Brahmins.

4. THE PURUSOTTAMA-PURĂŅA

This Upapurāṇa has not yet been printed, but a Ms of a work entitled Puruṣottama-p. has been mentioned in Buhler's Catalogue of Sanskrit Mss in the Private Libraries of Gujarāṭ, Kāṭhiāwāḍ, Kachehh, Sindh and Khandeś (2. 14). We do not know of any other Ms of this Upapurāṇa, nor does its title occur in any of the lists of Upapurāṇas known to us.

Of the numerous commentaries, Nibandhas and various other works examined by us in this connection it is only the Kālasāra of Gadādhara which ascribes a verse to the 'Puruṣottama-p.' This quoted verse and the title of its source show that the 'Puruṣottama-p.', as known to Gadādhra, was a Vaiṣṇava work dealing with the glorification of Purusottama-ksetra (Puri) as well as with the method and praise of the worship of Krsna, Balarāma and Subhadrā there. As this quoted verse, in which Krsna himself seems to be the speaker, is found neither in the chapters on Purusottama-ksetra of the present Brahma-p. nor in the Purusottama-māhātmya¹¹¹ of the Visnu-khanda of the Skanda-p., the 'Purusottama-p.' drawn upon by Gadādhara must have been a distinct work. Gadādhara's quotation from this work shows that it was written not later than 1200 A.D.

As the above-mentioned Ms of the Purusottama-p., lying far beyond our reach, could not be examined, it is not possible for us to say whether or how far this Upapurana is the same as that used by Gadadhara in his Kalasara.

5. THE BRHANNARADIYA-PURANA

This work, which was printed on more occasions than one, is can hardly claim to have had a very early origin. Yet it attained consider-

112 So far as I know, this work was published twice by the Vangavāsī Press, Calcutta (the second edition having appeared in 1316 B.S.) and once by the Asiatic Society, Calcutta, in 1891A.D

Both these editions consist of 38 chapters and have generally the same text, although there are occasional variations in readings and numbers of verses in the corresponding chapters

The Vanga, ed. is printed in Bengali characters. Yet, to avoid confusion in references, I have used it in the present work, because in my Purānic Records also I used it (in discussing its date and relation with the present Nāradīya-p.) in preference to the ASB ed, in which the verses have not in all cases been properly numbered. For instance, verses 80.85 of chap 13 have been numbered in this edition simply as '80/81' without any demarcation, and verses 26-47 of chap. 24 have been wrongly numbered as 16-37. However, in using the Vanga ad I have always taken particular care to compare its readings with those of the able popularity as an interesting handbook of religious and ethical value, and this is evident from the discovery of its Mss¹¹² (written in different characters) from different parts of India.

Being meant exclusively for the Vaisnavas it begins with a salutation, in two verses, to Upendra (Kṛṣṇa) of Vṛndāvana, who is said to be the original deity (ādi-deva) consisting of pure consciousness and also appearing in parts as Brahmā, Visnu, Mahesa and others for the sake of creation. It then introduces its topics by narrating the story of Saunaka as follows:

Saunaka and many other sages practised austerities and worshipped Visnu with great devotion in the Naimisa forest, some of them trying to please the god by austere practices, some by following the path of knowledge (jūāna), and some by cultivating the highest type of Bhakti. Once these and innumerable other sages met in a conference to find out the best means of attaining the four ends of life, viz., Dharma, Artha, Kāma and Mokṣa. Finding that the sages were about to put to him questions as to what the sacred places and the Tirthas were, how people could attain final liberation and unswerving devotion to Hari, and in what way the three kinds of actions bore fruit, Saunaka referred them to Sūta, the best Pautāņika, who was engaged in worshipping Janārdana by vatious sacrifices at Siddhāśrama. Saunaka said that Sūra, son of Lomaharṣaṇa, was a pupil of Vyāsa and, being instructed by the latter in all the Sastras, used to speak out in the Purānas the essence of the Vedas, Vedāngas and other works and that with the decrease of Dharma in the different Yugas Madhusüdana appeared as Vyasa and divided the Veda. Being thus informed of Sūta's learning and wisdom, the sages thanked Saunaka and went to Siddhāśrama where Sūta had undertaken to perform the Agnistoma sacrifice for the pleasure of Nārāyana. After Sūta had taken his holy bath at the conclusion of the sacrifice, the sages requested him to speak to them on the source and nature of creation, preservation and destruction of the universe, the method of pleasing Visnu by worship, the practice of Varnasrama-dharma, the right way of receiving guests, the means of attaining final liberation, and the nature of Bhakti and its attainments. Consequently, Sūta proposed to speak out 'the extensive (brhat) Purāna named Nāradīya' (or, 'the Brhannārada Purāṇa')114 in which Narada spoke to Sanatkumara and which contained topics on Nārāyana and was imbued with the Vedic ideas. He praised this work in high terms as yielding all the ends of life and decried and condemned to hell those who found in the Purāṇas nothing but 'arthavāda'. 115 (-Chap. 1). Being asked as to how and where Nārada met Sanatkumāra and what the former spoke to the latter, Sūta said that once Sanatkumāra and the other sons of Brahmā went to the peak of the mountain Meru and prepared to take their holy bath in the Ganges known by the name of Sītā, when Nārada arrived there singing the names of Hari and eulogising the sacred river. Sanatkumāra praised Nārada as the best devotee of Hari and requested him to speak on a number of religious topics including the origin of the universe. In compliance with this request Nārada began by eulogising Hari with the mention of his ten incarnations including Rāma (the carrier of the ploughshare), Īśāna, and another not expressly named but appearing from his description to be none but Kalki. (-Chap. 2).

Thus the contents of the Brhannaradiya-p. have been introduced in chaps. 1-2. The remaining chapters deal with the following topics:

The process of origin of the universe from Mahāviṣṇu (also called Nārāyaṇa) who assumes the forms of Prajāpati, Viṣṇu and Rudra by taking to the three Gunas (Rajas, Sattva and Tamas respectively), and also appears as Prakṛti, Puruṣa and Kāla for the sake of creation. Description of Viṣnu's Parā Sakti, which is differentiated into Vidyā and Avidyā and is said to permeate the whole world and to effect its creation, preservation and destruction. People's naming of this Sakti variously as Umā, Lakṣmī, Bhāratī, Gitijā, Ambikā, Durgā, Bhadrakālī, Candī, Vaiṣnavī, Brāhmī, Māheśvarī, Kaumārī etc. and as Māyā (or

Names of the seven upper worlds (Bhūḥ, Bhuvah etc.) and the seven lower worlds (Atala, Vitala etc.). Geography of the earth;—position of the mountains Meru and Lokaloka which bound the seven oceans and of which the former is situated at the middle of the earth and forms the resort of all the gods and the latter lies at the farthest end of land, 116 division of the earth into seven continents (dvīpas, viz., Jambu, Plakṣa etc.); names of the oceans surrounding these continents; relative position and extents of the continents and the oceans, position of Bhāratavarṣa, which is said to be lying on the north of the saltocean and on the south of the Himādri. Praise of Bhāratavarṣa as the best place for pious work and for Viṣṇu-worship. (-Chap. 3).

Praise of faith (śraddhā) and devotion (bhakti), which form the basis of Dharma and ensure success in all enterprises. Eloquent praise of faithful observance of āśramācāra (customs enjoined by one's order of life), without which neither the Veda nor devotion to Hari or Maheśvara is of any avail to one. Benefits of association with good men, especially with the sincere devotees of the Bhagavat. (-Chap. 4).

Characteristics of the best Bhagavatas, who include those devoutly worshipping Siva, bearing the sectarian mark Tripundra, and putting on Rudraksas. (-Chap. 5).

Praise of reading and hearing the Puranas with devotion.

Mention of persons (including teachers and expounders of the Vedas and the Puranas) who are to be regarded as Gurus; classification and praise of Gurus. (-Chaps. 6 and 9).

Praise of bhumi-dana (11. 120ff.). Qualifications of persons to whom gifts should be made. (-Chap. 12).

Praise of various pious acts which please Visnu and Siva; providing Brahmins with means of livelihood; digging tanks, wells etc.; construction and preservation of temples meant for Visnu or Siva; dedication of orchards, and of flower-gardens meant for the public or for deities¹¹⁷; plantation of Tulasi plants and making arrangements for their preservation; bathing of Visnu or Siva with various articles and on different occasions; worship of these deities with various kinds of flowers and with the offer of different articles (including food materials), gift of cows, food, wealth, virgin girls (in marriage), books etc. to Brahmins, medical treatment of diseased persons, especially of Brahmins; rendering of various kinds of service to Visnu or Siva, their temples, and to Brahmins; and so on. (-Chap. 13).

Names of hells, and description of terrible punishments undergone by the sinners there. Persons to be considered guilty of mahāpātakas, viz., Brahma-hatyā, surā-pāna, svarṇa-steya, etc. Enumeration of sins leading to different hells and deserving different kinds of punishment. (-Chap. 14).

Observance of devotional Vratas on Sukla-dvādaśī and Paurņamāsī Tithis for a year by worshipping Viṣṇu under particular names in the different months from Mārgaśīrṣa (Agrahāyaṇa) and bringing these Vratas to a conclusion after a year by worshipping Viṣṇu in Sarvato-bhadra Maṇḍalas on the full-moon days of the months of Mārgaśīrṣa and Kārttika respectively. Performance of boma, keeping awake at night, and dance and music (both vocal and instrumental) form some of the most essential parts of these Vratas. (-Chaps. 16-17).

Description of other vows, viz., Dhvajāropaṇa-vrata (requiring the hoisting of a flag and the worship of the Sun, Garuḍa and the Moon as well), Hari-pañcaka-vrata (which is to be observed for five days from the Suklaikādaśī Tithi of every month from Mārgaśīrṣa), Māsopavāsa-vrata (i.e. the vow of observing fast for a month), and Ekādaśī-vrata (-Chaps. 18-21).

Elaborate treatment of Varņāśrama-dharma (including śrāddha, prāyaścitta, and tithi-nirṇaya for the efficacy of the Srauta and the sarva-lokopabhogārtham puspārāmam janešvata/ kurvate devatārtham vā tesām puņya-phalam šmu//, Smārta rites), said to have been made in accordance with the prescriptions of Manu and others. (-Chaps. 22-28).

Description of the path of Yama (yama-mārga), which is said to be very pleasant for the virtuous but extremely dangerous and painful for the sinners. Nature of these pleasures and sufferings; and the poius acts (such as gift of various things including betel leaves, service to parents and others, reading of Purānas, and so on) which cause the pleasures. (-Chap 29).

Account (in prose) of the course of rebitth of creatures, first as stationary objects of nature (such as trees, creepers, mountains, etc.) and then as worms, insects, beasts and human beings in succession. Gradual rise in caste, profession, and physical and financial condition of human beings in their successive births. Description of the course of development of the fôetus in the mother's womb. Painful experiences of a human being in the different stages of his life. (-Chap. 30).

Ways of attaining final liberation.—Distinction of yoga into Kriyā-yoga and Jñāna-yoga, detailed treatment of yoga, with the names of thirty kinds of āsanas (modes of sitting for the practice of yoga), characteristics of persons to be regarded as sincerely desirous of final liberation. (-Chap. 31).

Praise of rendering devotional service to Visnu and his temples untiringly by body and mind or even unintentionally on rare occasions. (-Chaps 32-37).

Names and extents of the four Yugas. Conduct of people in the different Yugas, especially in Kali. Praise of reading or hearing the Brhannāradīya-p. (-Chap. 38).

Besides the above contents the Brhannaradiya-p. has a number of stories, which include the following.

Mrkandu's practice of severe austerities at Sālagrāma, and Mārkandeya's birth as his son and practice of the Bhāgavata-dharma at Sālagrāma according to Viṣnu's instructions. (-Chaps. 4-5).

Birth of Sagara in Aurva's hermitage, after the Haihayas and the Tālajanghas had dethroned his proud and jealous father Bāhu, son of Vrka, and administered poison to his mother with the intention of killing him in her womb and Aurva had consoled Sagara's mother and prevented her from burning herself to death 118 after Bāhu's demise in the forest; Sagara's education, military or otherwise, from Aurya, and his crushing defeat of the Sakas, Yavanas and others, whom Vasistha saved from annihilation by Sagara by turning them extra-Vedic and compelling the Parsnikas (Parasikas?) to shave off their heads, the Yavanas to have long hair, and the others to have shaven heads and long beards; 119 Sagara's marriage with Keśinī and Sumati, daughters of a king of the Kausika family of Vidarbha, birth of Asamañjasa to Keśini and of sixty thousand sons to Sumati as a result of Aurva's boon; reproachable conduct of Asamañjasa and the other sons of Sagara, and the tyrannised gods' approach to Kapila for redress, bitth of Amsumat to Asamañjasa; Sagara's performance of a Horse Sacrifice, and Kapila's reducing all the sons of Sagara to ashes for their misbehaviour to him for the sacrificial horse, which was kept in his hermitage by Indra; Amsumat's bringing the horse from Kapila's hermitage, birth of Dilīpa from Amsumat, of Bhagīratha from Dilīpa, and of Sudasa in the family of Bhagiratha, Sudasa's son being Saudasa Mirrasaha.

Dharmarāja's instructions to Bhagīratha to rescue his burnt ancestors from hells by means of the waters of the Gangā; Bhagīratha's consequent worship of Visņu in the Himalayas, and his bringing down the Gangā by propitiating Siva in accordance with the instructions

bālāpatyāś ca garbhinyo hy adrsta-rtavas tathā/ rajasvalā rāja-sute nārohanti citām śubhe// (765)

This verse has been quoted in Srīnāthācārya-cūdāmani's Krtya-tattvārnava (fol. 93b), Govindānanda's Suddhi-kaumudī (p 83), and Raghunandana's Smrtitattva (II, p. 236).

In his commentary (II 1, p. 59) on the Parasara smrtt Madhavacarya also quotes this verse but ascribes it to the 'Naradiya-p.'

(This verse is the same as Nar. I. 7. 52) received from Bhṛgu living on the bank of the Godāvarī. (-Chaps. 7-8 and 13-15).

Saudāsa Mitrasaha's turning a Rāksasa for twelve years as a result of Vasistha's curse brought on him by a Rāksasa who caused Saudāsa to offer human flesh to Vasistha by appearing first in the form of Vasistha and then in that of Saudasa's cook and thus took revenge for Saudāsa's killing, during a hunting expedition in a forest on the bank of the Reva (Narmada), his female mate sporting with him in the form of a tigress. Saudāsa's having the name Kalmāṣapāda for throwing on his own feet the waters with which he was going to curse Vasistha for the mischief done by him. Saudasa's eating up of a Brahmin sage on the bank of the Narmada, and the latter's wife's curse to Saudasa to continue to be a Raksasa for long and to meet death, during sexual enjoyment. Saudāsa's curse to the Brahmin woman to be a Piśācī. Saudāsa and the Brahmin woman's meeting with a Brahma-rākṣasa, who was formerly a Brahmin, named Somadatta, of Magadha; Saudāsa and others' regaining higher states of existence by coming in contact with the waters of the Ganga. (-Chap.9).

Aditi's austerities after the gods' defeat in a war¹²⁰ with Bali, and Visqu's birth to her as Vāmana and redemption of the kingdom of heaven for the gods. Origin of the Gangā from the waters with which Vāmana's feet were washed by Bali. (-Chaps. 10-11).

Unconscious performance of the Dhvajāropaṇa-vrata by a reckless Sūdra named Mātali and a Nisāda woman named Kokilinī, who, after death, passed to the region of Viṣnu and were then reborn respectively as king Sumati of the Lunar race and his queen Satyamati. (-Chap. 18).

King Dharmakīrti's degradation by coming under the influence of the Päsandas, but his rebirth to sage Gālava as his extremely pious son by unconsciously performing the Ekādaśī-vrata. (-Chap. 21).

120 In describing this war the Brhannāradiya-p names a large variety of missiles, which are as follows Drughana, Bhindipāla, Khadga, Paraśu, Tomara, Parigha, Churikā, Danda, Cakra, Sanku, Musala, Ankuśa, Lāngala, Pattiśa, Sakti, Upala, Sataghnī, Prāsa, Ayodanda, Musti, Sūla, Kuthāra, Pāśa, Ksudrayasti (or, Ksudra and Yasti?), Brhacchara, Ayomukha, Tunda, Cakra-danda, Ksudra-pattiśa, Nārāca,—Bnār. 10, 23-27.

Devamāli's repentance after earning a large fortune by unlawful means, his spending half of his wealth in benevolent work, and his attainment of final liberation at Vārāṇasī by worshipping Viṣṇu according to the instructions of a sage named Jānanti. (-Chap. 33).

Sumāli's constant help to his reckless and licentious brother Yajūamāli, and his rescuing the latter from hellish tortutes by offering to him a part of his religious merit. (-Chap. 34).

The above contents of the Brhannaradiya-p, show that it is a Vaisnava work dealing exclusively with the praise and worship of Viṣṇu, who is very often named as Nārāyaṇa and sometimes also as Vasudeva, Hari, Janardana etc., but very rarely as Kṛṣṇa.121 According to this work the highest deity in his supreme state is Mahavisnu (very often called Nārāyaṇa), who is described as 'avyaya', 'ananta', 'sarvavyāpin', 'nırdvandva', 'nırmama', 'māyātīta', 'sadānandaika-vigraha', 'jñāna-svarūpa', 'jagac-caitanya-kāraņa' and so on,122 and said to be existing as one and many.123 It is he who assumes the forms of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Rudra by taking to the three Guṇas and creates the universe by means of his Para Sakti (Supreme Active Power), which is differentiated into Vidyā and Avidyā, the former being the intellect (buddhi) that knows no distinction between the cognisor and the cognisable and makes one perceive the unity of all objects124 and the latter making the universe appear as different from the god and causing miseries and rebirths. 125 The Sakti of Visnu-Nārāyana, which is also called Māyā or Mahāmāyā for creating infacuation of beings and Prakett for effecting the origin of the universe126 and is popularly known by various names such as Umā, Lakṣmī, Bhāratī, Durgā etc, is all-pervading like the god himself; and it is only by means of Yoga that one can perceive the identity of the god with his Māyā or Avidyā Sakti and thus get away from the latter, which is not unreal nor real nor both, resorts to the Indescribable (Being), and creates the sense of diversity of Paramātman. 128

The Brhannāradīya-p. recommends the painting of the sectarian mark Urdhvapaundra on all occasions (except Śrāddha according to some)¹²⁹ but severely denounces as extremely sinful and unfit for Śrauta and Śmārta rites those persons who mark their limbs with the figures of the Śańkha (conch-shell), Cakra (disc) etc. or of the Linga (Phallus) created by the application of heat. It prescribes the use and muttering of the great eight-syllabled Mantra 'om namo nārāya-nāya'¹³¹ said to be eternally expressive of the god. Praises Bhakti with its ten gradations, speaks very highly of serving the god like a servant, 134 and lays special stress on avyabhicāriņī bhakti (unswerving devotion), which arises from pious acts and forms the basis of jūāna yielding final liberation. 135 In its opinion, a Cāṇḍāla who is sincerely devoted to Viṣṇu is superior to a Brahmin, and a Brahmin having no devotion for Viṣṇu is worse than a Cāṇḍāla. 136 It contains a good number of hymns mostly in praise of Viṣṇu-Nārāyaṇa 137 and speaks of innumerable incarnations of the god, of which only the following ten have been named: Matsya, Kūrma, Varāha, Nṛṣiṇha, Vāmana, Jāmadagnya, Rāma Dāśarathi, Rāma (Muṣalī, also called Nandasutāgraja), Iśāna and Kalki. 138

In its discourse on the way of attaining final liberation (mokşa) in chap. 31 the Brhannāradīya-p. deals elaborately with Yoga consisting of Kriyā-yoga and Jñāna-yoga, of which the former requires the worship of all-pervading Viṣṇu in images, twice-born people, the earth, fire, sun, pictures etc. and forms the basis of the latter. As a matter of fact, worship of Viṣnu in images forms the preliminary step to the realisation of the god and is meant for 'ignorant people, who always worship the Lord of the Universe in images of stone etc.' It takes jñāna to be the same as buddhi purified by the total destruction of Going to speak on devotional service to Visnu the Bṛhannāradīya-p. extols the sanctity and efficacy of the waters and mud of the Ganges¹⁴⁴ and urges people to maintain the Tulasī plant in their houses, to salute and worship it with great devotion,¹⁴⁵ and to wear its wood and leaves on their ears.¹⁴⁶ A very small particle of Ganges-water in which a Tulasī-leaf has been placed, is said to purify twenty-one generations (9. 133, 138); gift of land with Tulasī plants in it is highly praised (11. 127), and even Visnu is said to wear a 'Tulasīmālā' (31. 138).

One of the striking features of the Bṛbannāradiya-p. is that it repeatedly praises Siva-worship and declares the unity of Siva and Viṣṇu-Nārāyana. Among the best Bhāgavatas it includes those persons who love and worship Siva, constantly meditate upon him, mutter his five-syllabled Mantra (namaḥ sivāya), offer costly sacrifices to him as well as to Hari with great devotion, utter the names of these two deities, carry the sectarian mark Tripuṇḍra, and wear Rudrāksas (5. 56-61). It gives out Siva to be a form of Viṣṇu-Nārāyana (15. 74) and regards as 'venerable that Brahmin who looks up, without any idea of distinction, to the Lord of gods (deveśa) consisting of Nārāyaṇa and Siva' (3. 63). Severely denouncing those who distinguish between these two gods it says:

"The Phallus (linga) assumes the form of Harr, and Harr bears the form of the Phallus. There is not the slightest difference (between them), (and) one who makes (any) distinction, acquires sin.

"(Only) the sinners merged in the ocean of nescience find distinction in the eternal god designated as Hari and Samkara.

"It is that imperishable god, the Lord of the worlds and the Cause of causes, who devours up the universe at the end of a Yuga by assuming the form of Rudra.

"Rudra protects the entire universe in the form of Viṣṇu; and Hari creates it by assuming the form of Brahmā and (then) devours it himself.

"The man who differentiates between Hari, Samkara and Brahma, suffers in hell as long as the moon and stars exist.

"It is the decided opinion of the holy scriptures that one who looks upon Hara, Hari and Vidhātr as one, attains supreme bliss."

In Brhannāradīya-p. 14. 214-5 Dharmarāja (Kāla) says to king Bhagīratha, "Worship Hara and Viṣṇu, O king, by taking them to be one. The person who distinguishes (between them) becomes guilty of misdeeds of the magnitude of decades of thousands of Brahmin-murder. Siva is (the same as) this Hari in person, (and) it is Hari who is Siva himself. One who makes any distinction between them suffers in crores of hells" (14. 214-215).

We have already seen how the Brhannaradiya-p. extols even a Cāndāla who is sincerely devoted to Visnu-Nārāyana and takes him to be superior to a Brahmin who is not so. But this attitude relates simply to religious fervour and does not mean that the Brhannaradiya-p. has no respect for the Vedas and the Vedic views of life and conduct. On the other hand, it prescribes the study of the Vedas to the members of the higher three castes (22. 20, 23-25), declares these works to be as much superior to other scriptures as Kesava is to the other gods (32.9), repeatedly identifies them with Visnu-Nārāyana, 148 takes Dharma to be rooted in them (4. 17, 27. 64), and urges people to practise, for the satisfaction of Nārāyaṇa, the duties enjoined by these sacred works (3. 80, 27. 64). It includes among the superiors (guravah) those people who study the Vedas and correctly explain their meanings to others, and assigns to them the foremost position among those who are specially venerable (9. 89-90, 98). In its opinion, a teacher of the Vedas is to be saluted first of all (23.35), and one becomes a Sudra and goes to hell by studying scriptures excluding the Vedas (23. 66). It regards Gāyatrī as destructive of all sins and as the mother of the Vedas (6. 61-65), severely denounces those who hate or sell these works,149 and advises people not to invite under any circumstances in a Srāddha ceremony a Brahmin who is 'bereft of the Vedas' (26. 35).

It is very natural that with its high regard for the Vedas the Brhannāradīya-p. should extol 'Smrti' which records Dharma rooted in the Vedas. As a matter of fact, it urges people to follow their own Grhya-sūtras in kindling fire (agnyādhāna) and performing boma and other Grhya rites including the sacraments (22. 10a, 26.5off., 23.9), encourages them to practise Dharma as declared in the Smrtis (24.46), looks upon the sellers of these works as great sinners like those of the Vedas (12.9), and prescribes the observance of Vratas and other religious rites on Tithis determined in accordance with the directions of the Smrtis (27. 63). It firmly believes in caste-system, knows the distinction between the various castes and subcastes, and fully recognises the supremacy of Brahmins in society. It warns with residence in hell those who take, enhance or collect the revenue of a village belonging to a Brahmin and all those who support others in doing so (14. 122-124). In its account of the gradual improvement attained by creatures in their successive births it mentions the following castes, of which each succeeding one is taken to be superior to that immediately preceding it.

¹⁴⁹ Ibid., 4, 17; 12 4-5, 8-9; 14, 49

Carmakāra, Caṇḍāla, Vyādha, Rajaka, Kumbhakāra, Lohakāra, Suvarnakāra, Tantravāya, Vanık, Sıkhājaṭa (?), Dhāvaka, Lekhaka, Bhṛtaka, Sāsanahārın (30. 2).

It assigns the Sūdras and women to a very low position in the social fabric. About these important members of the Hindu society it says:

"A twice-born man who, being invited by a Sūdra, takes his meal, is known as a drinker of wine and thrown outside (the pale of) all (Srauta and Smārta) Dharma (14.39).

"Or, a twice-born man who, being asked by a Sūdra, takes his meal, is known as a drinker of wine and deprived (of the right of performing) all (Srauta and Smārta) work (14. 40).

"A man who bows down to a Linga or (an image of) Viṣṇu worshipped by a Sūdra, has no escape (from sin) even by (practising) decades of thousands of penances (14. 54).

"One who salutes a Linga or (an image of) Hari touched by a Sūdra, undergoes all (kinds of) suffering till the moon and the stars exist (14. 55).

"By saluting a Linga worshipped by an Abhira one goes to hell, O king, even though one may be versed in the Vedas or know the meanings of all Sastras (14. 56b-57).

"One who salutes a Linga or even (an image of) Visnu worshipped by women, lives in Raurava (hell) with a crore of his generations up to the end of a kalpa (14.58).

"A Sūdra or women must not touch a Linga from the time it is established according to (the right) procedure by those versed in the mantras (14.59).

"Neither women nor those invested with the sacred thread, nor the Sūdras, O lord of men, have the right of touching (an image of) Visnu or Saṃkara (14. 60).

"A man who salutes a Linga or (an image of) Visnu consecrated by a Südra, meets with endless miseries in this very world, not to speak of the next one (14. 62).

"One who salutes a Linga or (an image of) Visnu worshipped by an Abhīra, meets with destruction, O lord of men. What is the good of speaking anything more? (14. 63).

"By touching (an image of) Kesava or Siva a Sūdra, one not invested with the sacred thread, women, and a 'fallen' man (patita) suffer in hell (14. 64).

"There is no atonement for those who ... have association with Sūdra women, (and) nourish their body with food received from Sūdras, ... (14. 66-67).

"A man who reads the Vedas in the proximity of women and Súdras, goes to hells successively during thousands of crores of kalpas" (14. 144).

The Brhannaradiya-p. warns students against having any contact with Sūdras (23. 32), and in connection with one's profession in distress it says,

"Even in dire distress a twice-both man must not take to the profession of Sūdras. If an infatuated twice-both man does so, he is looked upon as a Cāṇdāla.

"Brahmins, Kṣatriyas and Vaiśyas (viṣaḥ) are well-known as 'twice-born' people And they have four stages of life, there being no fifth' (23. 31-32).

From the above statements about the Sūdras and women it appears that these members of the Hindu society were seriously influenced by the ideas and practices of the extra-Vedic sectaries, especially the Buddhists and the Tantriks. As a matter of fact, the Brhannāradīya-p. amply testifies to the great spread of Buddhism and Tantricism, which threatened the very basis of the Vatņāśramadharma of the Vedas. It uses the name 'Pāṣaṇḍa' for the Buddhists and the Tantriks and defines it saying:

"As the Bauddhas decry the Vedas, they are called Pāṣandɪns" (14. 70),

"Those who have ceased to perform the sacrifices to the gods and Pitrs and strayed from the Vedic way (of life), are well-known as Pāṣaṇḍas and undergo a multitude of sufferings" (14. 186),

"A Paṣaṇḍa is so called by the wise on account of his forsaking the duties of his own caste" (22. 9),

"One who, after forsaking his own (lawful) work, takes to the work of others, is known as a Pāṣaṇḍa and thrown outside (the pale of) all (Srauta and Smārta) Dharma" (23. 2), and

"That cunning twice-born mortal, who does not perform Samdhyā (i.e. the morning, noon and evening prayer) in times when there is no calamity, is known as a Pāṣaṇḍa and placed outside all (Srauta and Smārta) work" (25. 29).

That in the above passages the name Pāṣaṇḍa was applied for the Tantriks also is shown by the mention at several places of the worship of the Linga or the images of Viṣṇu and Siva by the Pāṣaṇḍas. For instance, in chap, 14 the Bṛhannāradīya-p. says that 'by saluting a Linga worshipped by the Pāṣaṇḍas one is reduced to the state of a Pāṣaṇḍa even though he may be versed in the Vedas and know the meanings of all Sāstras' (verse 56), and that '(a twice-born man) must not worship even in dream (an image of) Viṣṇu or Saṃkara (which has been) worshipped by those who have forsaken the customs and usages (ācāra) of their own orders of life' (verse 61). As these extra-Vedic sectaries did not follow the Vedic way of life and disproved the efficacy of Vedic sacrifices by puzzling argumentation, and as association with them made others acquire their habits (21.53-55), the Bṛhannāradīya-p. repeatedly warns people against talking, or having any other kind of contact, with them. It says:

"One who enters the house of a Bauddha even in great distress, has no escape (from sin) even by (practising) hundreds of penances.

"The Bauddhas are called Pasandins, because they decry the Vedas.

¹⁵⁰ Ibid., 17. 20 (pāṣaṇḍālāpa-varjītal).

So, a twice-born man, if he has (any) regard for the Vedas, must not look at them.

"(One acquires sin), in case one enters the house of a Bauddha knowingly or unknowingly. There is no escape (from sin), (if one does so) knowingly. This is the decision of Sastras". (14. 69-71).

Going to deal with the duties (dharma) of the different castes and orders of life 'as prescribed by Manu and others' (manvādyaiś coditam ca yat—22. 6), the Bṛhannāradīya-p. encourages the due performance of Yuga-dharmas by all the castes¹⁵¹ but names a number of lawful practices which, being considered unfavourable for the attainment of heaven and disliked by the people, have been forbidden by wise men in the Kali age. These practices have been mentioned in the following verses:

"karmaṇā manasā vācā yatnād dharmān samācaret/, asvargyaṃ loka-vidviṣṭaṃ dharmam apy ācaren na tu// samudra-yātrā-svīkāraḥ kamanḍalu-vidhāraṇam/ dvijānām asavarṇāsu kanyāsūpayamas tathā// devarena sutotpattir madhuparke paśor vadhah/, māṃsa-dānaṃ tathā śrāddhe vānaprasthāśramas tathā// dattāksatāyāh kanyāyāh punar-dānaṃ parasya ca/ dītgha-kālam brahmacaryaṃ naramedhāśvamedhakau// mahāprasthāna-gamanaṃ gomedhaṃ ca tathā makham/, imān dharmān kals-yuge varīyān āhur manīṣiṇaḥ//" (22.12-16).

"One should carefully practise dharma (lawful duty) by work, mind and word, but one should not perform an act which, though legal, is unfavourable for (the attainment of) heaven and is disliked by the people.

"Undertaking of sea voyage, carrying of a kamandalu; marriage of twice-born people with girls of other castes.

"Raising of issue by the husband's brother, killing of an animal in Madhuparka; offering of meat in Srāddha, the stage of a forest-hermit.

151 lbid , 22 11a—yuga-dharmāh pangrāhyā varnair etair yathocitam girl whose marriage was not consummated; celibacy (i.e. studentship) for a long period; (performance of) human sacrifice and horse sacrifice.

"Starting on a great journey; and cow sacrifice.—These lawful acts have been declared by the wise as forbidden in the Kali age."

As to the Ācāras (customs and usages) deserving practice, the Bṛhannāradīya-p. attaches much importance to those enjoined by one's caste and order of life and decries wilful negligence of these saying:

"One who gives himself up to devotion to Hari without transgressing one's own ācāra, goes to the abode of Viṣṇu which is seen by gods.

"O powerful sage, one who, while performing the duties declared by the Vedas and required by one's own order of life, engages himself in meditation on Hari, attains final beatitude.

"Dharma arises from ācāra, and Acyuta is the lord of Dharma. Being worshipped by one who is engaged in (the practice of) ācāra enjoined by one's stage of life Hari gives everything.

"He who, though being a master of Vedanta together with the Angas, falls from his own acara, is known as 'patita' (fallen from his caste), because he is outside (the pale of Srauta and Smarta) work.

"He who deviates from acara enjoined by his own order of life, is said to be 'patita', no matter whether he is given to devotion to Hari or engaged in meditation on him.

"O best of the twice-born, neither the Veda nor devotion to Hari or Maheśvara purifies that fool who has fallen from acara.

"Neither visit to holy places, O Brahman, nor residence in sacred Tirthas, nor performance of various sacrifices saves one who has discarded acara.

"Heaven is attained by (the practice of) ācāra, happiness is attained by (the practice of) ācāra, and final release is attained by (the practice of) ācāra. What is not attained by (the practice of) ācāra?" 152

The Brhannaradiya-p. further adds:

"Vișnu is not satisfied with one who sticks only to Bhakti after giving up (all religious) works, because he is to be worshipped with acara.

"In all sacred scriptures acara has the first consideration. Dherma arises from acara, (and) Acyuta is the lord of Dharma.

"Hence such devotion to Hari is to be practised as does not go against one's own Dharma. Dharma and Artha do not yield happiness to those who do not follow sadācāra (practice of good men)."159

Feeling that faithful practice of ācāra may not be possible for all under all circumstances this work says:

"sva-grāme pūrnam ācāram pathy ardham muni-sattamāh // āture niyamo nāsti mahāpadi tathaiva ca //i" (25. 16).

"Complete ācāra (1s to be practised) in (one's) own village, half (of the same) on the way (during a journey), O best of sages, and there is no rule in times of illness as well as in great distress."

But it does not attach the same importance to all kinds of ācāra. It recommends 'vṛddhācāra' (practice of old men) as acceptable (vrd-dhācārah parigrāhyaḥ—24. 45) and says that 'grāmācāra' (peculiar practices of villages) may be followed without going against the prescriptions of Smrtis. As regards 'deśācāra' (1. c. the peculiar practices of different countries) this work says:

"deśācārāh parigrāhyās tat-tad-deśīyajair naraiḥ/, anyathā patito jūcyaḥ sarva-dharma-bahiṣkrtah//" (22. 17).

"The (peculiar) practices of (different) countries should be followed by the people born in those particular countries. Otherwise, one is known as 'fallen' (patita) and externed from all (Srauta and Smārta) Dharma."

Among the peculiar customs then prevailing in the Hindu society the Bṛhannāradīya-p. mentions the following: difference of opinion as regards right for upanayana (investiture with the sacred thread) of the Kuṇdas, Golakas, idiots and others, or of their sons; 155 a householder's weating of two sacrificial threads with an upper garment, 158 two golden ear-ornaments (called kuṇḍala), a turban (uṣṇṣṣa), and footwears of wood and leather (pāduke cāpy upānahau); 167 prohibition to a householder against weating a single piece of cloth and keeping his hair loose during worship, ācamana, bath, etc. (24, 25), against riding camels or cars drawn by these animals (24, 26), against touching the shade of a lamp, a beadstead, and one's body, and also a piece of cloth used for tying the hair, and dusts of goats and cats, 158 and against passing by a cow, a horse, an assembly, a crossway and a temple by keeping them to the left; 159 covering the earth with grass and carrying in hand a piece of wood at the time of passing stool or making water (25.4), and so on.

As to the position of certain members of the Hindu society the Brhannaradiya-p. gives us interesting information. According to this work the following persons were looked down upon for their profession: a Nakṣatra-pāṭhaka (also called Nakṣatra-pāṭha-jīvin), i.e. one studying the stars; a Devalaka (temple-priest); a Grāma-yājaka (one serving as a priest for a village); a Loka-yājaka (public priest); a Bhisak or Bhisak-śastropajivin (physician); a Gayaka (singer), and a Kavya-karer (composer of poems). About these persons the Brhannaradiya-p. makes the following statements: A gift made to a Naksatra-pathaka becomes sutile (12.6), and he does not deserve salutation (23.38) or invitation in a Śrāddha ceremony (26.11), taking of food offered by a Devalaka is equal to the drinking of wine (14.38); a Grāma-yājaka does not deserve salutation (23.37) or invitation in a Städdha ceremony (26.12), the Brhannaradiya-p. should not be read to a Loka-yajaka (1.48); one should bathe with one's garments at the sight of a Bhisak (24.30); and a Gayaka, a Kavya-kattr and a Bhisak-sastropajivin should not be invited in a Srāddha ceremony (26.17).

In connection with penance (prayascitta) treated of in chap. 28 the Brhannaradiya-p. names three varieties of wine (sura)-gaudi, mādhvī and paistī (28.25) and eleven varieties of liquor (madya), viz., tāla, pānasa, drākṣa, kharjura-sambhava, mādhūka, śaila, ävisṭa, maireya, nārikelaja, gaudī and mādhvī (28.32-33). It declares all kinds of wine as untouchable and undrinkable to the members of the four castes, both male and female, and says that by taking wine (surā) as medicine for curing a disease one has to undergo two courses of Candrayana and to be invested with the sacred thread again (28.30). that food coming in contact with wine, water kept in a jar which contained wine, and articles of food soaked with wine, are to be considered as equal to wine itself (28.31), and that one guilty of adultery with the Sudra wife of one's teacher (guru), must practise the Prājāpatya Vrata for three years (28.68). Like the Pāńcarātra Samhitas, the Brhannatadiya-p. prescribes the performance of Prāṇāyāma or the muttering of the Gāyatrī as atonement for sin caused by certain acts, viz., stealing of small quantities of gold (of the weights of a trasarenu, a niska, a rājasarṣapa, a gosarṣapa, and a yava),160 touching of certain persons (viz., a woman in her monthly courses, a Candala, one guilty of a Mahapataka or heinous crime, a recently delivered woman, an outcast, and such washermen and others as have not washed their hands and mouths after taking food), 161 and hearing their voice in the course of a Vrata, etc. (28.92). According to this work the weight of a suvarna is as follows: 8 trasareņus=1 niṣka, 3 niskas=1 rājasarṣapa, 3 rājasarṣapas=1 gosarsapa, 6 gosarṣapas = 1 yava, 3 yavas = 1 kṛṣṇala, 5 kṛṣṇalas = 1 māsa, 16 māsas = r suvarņa. 162

In describing Yuga-dharma in chap. 38 the Brhannaradiya-p. says that no division of the Veda was made in the Krta-yuga (38. 8), that Nārāyaṇa was white in the Kṛta-yuga, red in Tretā, yellow in Dvāpara, and black in Kali, 163 and that the Veda was divided in the Dvāpara age (38. 17). As regards the conduct of the people of the Kali age this work makes, in the forms of prophecies, a number of interesting statements, some of which are as follows:

165 This line (sudrā dharman pravaksyanti etc.) occurs not in the Nanga, ed, but in the ASB ed, of the Brhannaradiya-p

"At that time the vile Sūdras, bearing the signs of mendicancy, will not serve the twice-born people, nor will they practise their own dharma (38. 55).

"The Sūdras, skilled in puzzling argumentation, will instruct dharma (38. 56).

"The wicked Sudras will have unholy mental tendencies, turn wandering mendicants, and subsist on food prepared by others (38.57)

"Living on bribe and being given to heinous crimes they will become Pāṣaṇḍas, Kāpālas and Bhikṣus (38. 58).

"O best of Brahmins, the Sūdras, bearing the signs of mendicancy, will instruct dharma to the twice-born men habituated to its destruction (38.59).

"In the Kali age, O best of Brahmins, these and many other Brahmins, Kşatrıyas and Vaisyas will become Pāṣaṇḍas (38. 60).

"After the Kali age comes up, the Brahmins given to song and instrumental music but averse to the Vedas and the gods, will set themselves to the path of the Sūdras (38. 61).

"(They will become) faithless and slanderous about the Vedas, gods and twice-born (men), utter unrefined speech, and be engaged in hostility with many (people) (38. 64).

"After the Kali age comes up, persons belonging to the Mleccha tribes will become kings (38, 74b).

"Being given to the denouncement of the Vedas and decrying the Dharma-śāstras, the twice-born (people) will live by (following) the profession of the Sūdras deserving residence in hells (38. 79).

"Being afraid of theires etc. the majority of people in cities and villages will set machines of wood in walls (or ramparts) (38. 86).

"Being very much affected by the sufferings caused by famine and taxation people will feel distressed and migrate to countries rich in wheat and barley-food (38.87).

"When, being bound by a multitude of sins, the twice-born people will associate with the extra-Vedic people (pāṣanda-jana), then Kali will grow (in power) (38. 91)."

From the above statements it is evident that at the time when the Bṛhannāradīya-p. was composed there was a great spread of the extra-Vedic faiths, especially Buddhism and Tantricism, which seriously affected the social discipline required for the Dharma rooted in the Vedas.

Following the Bhagavad-gītā the Bṛhannāradīya-p. (3.78ff.) encourages selfless work, which is to be done only for the satisfaction of Visnu and not with a desire for the reward. It advises people to work untiringly and to dedicate all their actions to Visnu in case they desire to enjoy their fruits in the next world (3.77). Like many other Purānas this work has a pessimistic view of life and takes the body to be 'rooted in sin' and 'engaged in doing sinful acts' (31.6). In chap. 29 it gives an account of the sufferings of the sinners in the path of Yama and describes Citra-gupta, an officer of Yama, thus

"pralayāmbudhi-nirghosaḥ añjanādri-sama-prabhah/ vidyut-prabhāyudhair bhīmo dvāviṃśad-bhuja-samyutah//j yojana-traya-vistāro raktākṣo dīrgha-nāsikah/j daṃstrā-karāla-vadano vāpī-tulya-vilocanaḥ//, mrtyu-jvarādibhir yuktaś citragupto vibhīṣaṇaḥ/" (29.50-52a).

"Having a thundering voice like the roar of the ocean at the dissolution (of the universe), possessing splendour like that of a mountain of collyrium, looking dreadful with weapons shining like lightning, and having twenty-two hands, an extent of three yojanas, red and well-like eyes, a long nose, and a mouth made dreadful by large teeth, Citragupta, attended by Death, Fever and others, looks extremely terrible."

We shall now discuss the date of composition of the present Brhannāradīya-p.

From the analysis of the contents of this work given above it is evident that it is a purely sectarian work lacking all the characteristics of a Mahāpurāṇa. Its title 'Brhannārada' or 'Bṛhannāradīya', occurring in the body of the chapters¹⁸⁷ as well as in the colophons, indicates that it is not the original Nāradīya-p., the words 'bṛhat,' 'vrddha' etc. being found to be prefixed to the titles of comparatively late works only. As the present Nāradīya-p. incorporates all the chapters of the Bṛhannāradīya,¹⁸⁸ we cannot agree with Winternitz in holding that the Bṛhannāradīya-p. 'is generally so called to distinguish it from the Nārada - or Nāradīya- Upapurāṇa'.¹⁶⁸ That this work is merely an Upapurāṇa and not the same as the genuine Nāradīya-p., is shown definitely by the Matsya, Skanda and Agni-p., of which the first describes the Nāradīya-p. as follows:

"yatrāha nārado dharmān brhat-kalpāśrayāṇi ca/ pañcaviṃśat-sahasrāni nāradīyaṃ tad ucyate//." (Mat. 53.23)

"That (Purāṇa,) in which Nārada proclaims the (religious) dunes as well as (other matters) connected with the Bṛhat Kalpa and (which contains) 25000 (verses), is called Nāradīya".

167 See Bnār. 1. 36 and 66, and 38 132. See also foot-note 114 above, 168 The chapters of the Brhannāradiya-p., as occurring in the Nāradiya-p., are as follows:

The Skanda (VII. 1.2.43) and the Agni-p. (272.8), which do not differ materially from the Matsya in laying down the characteristics of the Nāradīya-p., describe this work thus:

"yatrāha nārado dharmān brhat-kalpāśrayāms tv iha (Agni-p.—brhat-kalpāśritān iha)/ pañcavimśat-sahasrāni (Agni-p.—pañcaviṃśa-sahasrāṇi)
nāradīyam tad ucyate//,"

"That (Purāna.) in which Nārada proclaims such (religious) duties in this world as were connected with the Brhat Kalpa and (which contains) 25000 (verses), is called Nāradīya".

From these descriptions it is evident that the Nāradīya-p., as known to the Matsya, Skanda and Agni-p., had Nārada as the principal speaker, described the (religious) duties connected with the Bṛhat Kalpa, and contained 25000 verses. But in the Bṛhannāradīya-p., though Nārada is said to have spoken to Sanatkumāra on various kinds of (religious) duties, there is no mention of the Bṛhat Kalpa, and the number of verses is only about 3600. Moreover, the Ekāmra-p. and the Brhaddharma-p. clearly distinguish the Brhannāradīya from the Nāradīya-p., naming both of them side by side in their lists of Upapurāṇas, 120 and the manner in which the Smṛṭi-writers refer to and quote verses from this Upapurāna as well as from the Nāradīya, shows that it was known to them under the title Bṛhannāradīya-p. and not as Nāradīya. So, there is little scope for doubt that our Bṛhannāradīya is an Upapurāna quite distinct from the Nāradīya-p.

This work names the Rāśis (zodiacal signs) and the week-days on more occasions than one,¹⁷¹ and betrays its knowledge of the Mārkandeya-p. in the following verse:

¹⁷⁰ For these lists see Chap I (pp. 13 and 10) above.

¹⁷¹ For the names of the Rāsis see Bnār. 631, 6.39, and 27, 22-25, and for those of the week-days see 1bid, 13, 80, 88, 89 and 91 (Bhānu-vāra, Soma-vāra, Indu-vāra).

No work preceding the Yajñavalkya-smrts betrays any knowledge of the "Being propitiated by the wise Mārkandeya, Acyuta, the lord of the world, granted (him) a boon to compile a Purana-samhita".

A comparison of the description of the conduct of the people and the activities of the Pasandas in the Kali age, as given in Brhannaradiya-p., chap. 38, with that occurring in Visnudharma, chap. 105, shows that the account of the former work is clearly based on that of the latter, from which it derives a good number of peculiar verses. 172 It is cognisant of Visnu's Sakti and says that this Sakti permeates the whole world and effects its creation, preservation and destruction, and that she is identical with Uma, Laksmi, Durga and others and also with Prakṛti and Māyā (or Mahāmāyā) which subjects all creatures to rebirths. Thus, the Brhannaradiya-p. records a developed Sakti theory, which points to a date posterior to that of the Jayakhyasamhitāzza and not earlier than about 550 A.D. By its statements that even Ajāmila, a sinner and drunkard, earned freedom from sins and attained the highest region by simply uttering the name 'Nārāyaṇa'174 (which was given to his youngest son) and that the great elephant (gajendra) got free from the clutch of the crocodile by praising the god Viṣṇu-Nārāyaṇa,175 the Brhannātadīya-p. cleatly

Rāsis, which, therefore, appear to have been unknown to the Indians down to the beginning of the second century A D.

The earliest dated mention of a week-day has been traced in the Eran inscription of 484 A.D (See Fleet, Gupta Inscriptions, pp 88-89)

172 See, for instance, Bnār. 38 52, 54-58, 64b, etc., for which, as occurring in the Visnudharma, see foot-note 108 on pp. 149-150 above.

We have already seen that the date of composition of the Visnudharma is to be placed between 200 and 300 A.D. (See p. 143 above).

173 This Samhitā is dated about 450 A.D., and in it Laksmi, Jayā, Kiru and Māyā are called Visnu's Šakti but are not said to play any part in creation.

refers to Bhāgavata-p. VI. 1-2 and VIII.2-4 respectively. It knows Bhāravi's Kirātārjunīya and Bhaṭti's Rāvana-vadha (alsas Bhatṭi-kāvya), some of the expressions of which it imitates here and there. It derives a complete verse It from Bhartṭhari's Nīti-śataka and composes two others It in imitation of a verse of his Vairāgya-śataka. It speaks very highly of the Tulasī plant and, unlike other early works, deifies it and inculcates its worship. So, this Upapurāna cannot be dated earlier than about the last quarter of the seventh century A. D. The doctrine of nonduality and illusion, summarily referred to in Bnār. 31. 57ff., shows that it could not have been written much earlier than Saṃkarācārya.

Mss, tallying fully with that given by the printed editions, the Brhannaradiya-p. cannot be dated later than the middle of the fifteenth century A. D. As Bhaskara (or Bhairava)182 draws upon chap. 13 of the Brhannaradiya-p. in his Acara-nirnaya-bhaskara-samgraha, Mitta Miśra upon chaps. 2, 4, 11, 13, 24 and 25 in his Viramitrodaya, Anantabhatta upon chaps. 13, 14 and 22-24 in his Vidhana-pārijāta, Sūra Miśra upon chap. 25 in his Jagannātha-prakāśa,188 Gopāla-bhatta upon chaps. 1-6, 11, 13, 18, 21, 23, 28, 32, 34, 35, 37 and 38 in his Haribhakti-vilāsa, Raghunandana upon chaps. 7, 14, 22 and 24 in his Smrti-tattva, Ganapati (of Mithila) upon chaps. 14 and 15 in his Gangā-bhaktı-tarangınī, Govindānanda Kavikankanācārya upon chaps. 7, 14 and 25-27 in his Varşa-kaumudī, Srāddha-kaumudī and Suddhi-kaumudī, and Srīnāthācārya-cūḍāmaņi upon chaps. 7, 14 and 24 in his Krtya-tattvārņava, 184 and as Sūlapāņi refers definitely to and quotes a line from chap. 16 with the mention of the title Brhannāradīya' in his Vrata-kāla-viveka,185 the Bṛhannāradīya-p. can by no means be placed later than 1300 A.D. It has already been said that the Brhaddharma-p., which was written in Bengal most probably in the last half of the thirteenth century A. D., 186 names both the 182 In the ASB Ms (No 5946) of the Acara-nirnaya-bhaskara-samgraha, which is the only Ms of this work hitherto discovered, the name of the author has been given as Bhairava in the second introductory verse and as Bhaskara in the final colophon. But unfortunately both the introductory verses and the final colophon were added in a later hand.

As the name 'Bhaskara' occurs in the title of the work, we have preferred it to 'Bhairava' given in the second introductory verse.

183 This is an extensive Smrti work composed at Indraprastha (Delhi) in Samvat 1654 (= 1598 A.D.) under the patronage of Jagannatha, a scion of the Solar dynasty, who was born in Samvat 1603 (=1547 AD.)

of the present work.

The quoted line is much the same as Bnār. 16. 4.

186 A detailed discussion on the date and provenance of the Brhaddharma-p, will be made in a subsequent Volume of the present work. See,

Brhannāradīya and the Nāradīya-p. in its list of Upapurānas. The Uttara-khanda (of the Bengal Siva-p.), which was composed in Bengal not later than the twelfth century A. D., 187 names a 'Nāradīya' Purāna called 'Bṛhannārada' and distinguishes it from the major Purāṇa called Nāradīya, saying:

"nāradoktam purānam tu nāradīyam pracaksate/ tasmād anyan nāradīyam bṛhannārada-samjñakam//,"188 "But the Purāna spoken out by Nārada (people) call Nāradīya. The Nāradīya other than that (Purāna) is named Bṛhannārada".

Like the Brhaddharma-p., the Ekāmra-p. also names both the Brhannāradiya and the Nāradīya-p. in its list of Upapurānas, and we shall see afterwards that the Ekāmra-p. was written in Orissa some time during the tenth or eleventh century A.D. So, the Brhannāradīya-p. has to be dated not later than the middle of the tenth century A.D.

Here we should like to examine the mutual relation between the Brhannāradīya-p. and the present Nāradīya and see whether this relation renders us any help in making a nearer approach to the date of composition of the former work.

We have already seen how the present Năradīya-p. incorporates all the chapters of the Brhannāradīya with the exception of a few verses. There is no doubt that it is the Nāradīya-p. which borrows these chapters from the Bṛhannāradīya. As a matter of fact, the present Nāradīya-p. is practically an Upapurāṇa in which there is no mention of the Bṛhat Kalpa and Nārada appears not as a speaker anywhere in its two Parts (called Pūrva-bhāga and Uttara-bhāga) but as a hearer, to whom Sanaka, Sanandana, Sanatkumāta and Sanātana speak respectively in the four sections (Pāda) of the First Part (Pūrvabhaga) only. Now, the question arises as to when the Natadiya-p. incorporated the Brhannaradiya to form the first section of its First Part. An Examination of the Smrti commentaries and Nibandhas shows that several hundreds of verses on Sraddha, Tithi-nimaya, Gangā-māhātmya, Gangā-snāna, etc. have been quoted from the 'Nāradīya-p.' or 'Nāradīya' in Devaņabhaṭta's Smṛri-candrikā, Hemā. dri's Caturvarga-cintāmaņi, Bhāguri's Smṛti-sāra-samuccaya (fol. 41b), Srīdatta Upādhyāya's Samaya-pradīpa (fol. 10a), Caṇḍeśvara Ṭhakkura's Kṛtya-ratnākara (p. 637) and Tithi-nirnaya (fol. 12a), Mādhavācārya's commentary on the Parāśara-smṛti, Madanapāla's Madanapārijāta (pp. 265, 507, 539), Vidyāpati Upādhyāya's Gangā-vākyāvali, Rudradhara Upādhyāya's Varṣa-kṛtya (pp. 157-158), Kṛsṇānanda Agamavāgīśa's Tantrasāra (I, p. 47), Vācaspati-miśra's Tīrtha-cintāmaņi, Raghunandana's Smṛti-tattva, Gopāla-bhaṭṭa's Haribhakti-vilāsa, Gadādhara's Kālasāra, Mitra Miśra's Vīramitrodaya, Sūra Miśra's Jagannātha-prakāśa (fols. 74b, 78b, 79a), and many other works, Most of these quoted verses occur in the Uttara-bhaga of the present Nāradīya-p., 190 but only a very few lines 191 can be traced in Pūrva-bhāga, chaps. 1-41 (which, as we have already seen, are very much the same as Brhannaradiya-p., chaps. 1-38), although among these chapters there are some which deal elaborately with the said topics (viz., Śrāddha, Tithi-nitṇaya, Gangā-māhātmya, Gangā-snāna, etc.). is particularly remarkable that of the numerous verses ascribed to the 'Nāradīya-p.' or 'Nāradīya' in Devaņabhatta's Smrti-candrikā, Vidyāpatı Upādhyāya's Gangā-vākyāvalī, Gopāla-bhatta's Harıbhaktı-vılāsa, Ganapati's Ganga-bhakti-tarangini and Sūra Miśra's Jagannathaprakāśa, not a single occurs in the first section (comprising chaps. 1-41) of Nāradīya-p., Pūrva-bhaga, and that, of more than a century of verses quoted by Hemadri from the same work, only nine lines (quoted in Caturvarga-cintamani II. 1, p. 995, III. 1, p. 255, and III. 11, p. 153) agree with Naradiya-p. I. 23. 8 and I. 25. 52b-55. Similar is the case with Raghunandana, Gadadhara and several others, very few of whose quotations from the 'Naradiya-p' are traceable in the first section of Nāradīya-p., Pūrva-bhāga. This shows that the 'Nāradīya-p.', known to Devanabhaṭta, Hemādri and many others, constitutes a part of the Uttara-bhaga of the present Nāradīya-p. and did not comprise the Brhannāradīya. The rare coincidences between the verses ascribed by these writers to the 'Nāradīya-p.', on the one hand, and those of chaps. 1-41 of Nāradīya-p., Pūrva-bhāga, on the other, must be explained by saying that these particular verses occurred in the original Nāradīya-p. now lost to us, and that they have been retained in the Brhannaradiya-p. but lost from the 'Nāradīya-p.' known to Devaņabhatta, Hemādri and others. As a matter of fact, the Uttara-bhaga of the present Naradiya-p. begins abruptly without introducing the interlocutors Vasistha and Mandhatt or explaining the occasion for Vasistha's narration of the Purana topics. This shows that the 'Naradiya-p.' known to Devanabhatta, Hemādri and others has not been preserved completely in the Uttarabhaga of the present Naradiya.

the period of incorporation of the Brhannaradiya-p. into the present Nāradīya is useless for any chronological deduction with respect to the former work. We are, therefore, obliged to place the date of its composition between 750 and 900 A.D. As this work does not appear to to have any major interpolation, this date may safely be taken to be that of all its parts.

Though being a comparatively late work and having its origin in a society which saw a great spread of Buddhism and Tantricism, the Brhannaradiya-p. is entirely free from Tantric influence. It recommends the drawing of the Sarvatobhadra-mandala and its painting with various hues in certain religious rites192 but does not include the Tantric Yantra among the mediums of worship,193 nor does it prescribe any Tantric Mantra or symbol or recognise the authority of the Tantric works.

Although we have got no correct knowledge about the provenance of the Brhannaradiya-p., there is little doubt about the fact that it was composed somewhere in Northern India. It repeatedly mentions and praises Prayaga and the confluence of the Ganga and the Yamuna,104 and especially Vārāṇasī and the Siva-linga there,195 refers, on one occasion, to the use of cars drawn by camels (ustra-yana-Bnar. 24. 26), and names the following twelve rivers as specially sacred: Godavari, Bhīmarathī, Kṛṣṇā, Revā, Sarasvatī, Tungabhadrā, Kāverī, Kālındī, Bāhudā, Vetravatī, Tāmraparnī and Satadru198 (most of them belonging to Southern India). On the other hand, it is the Ekamra-p. (written in Orissa) which is the carliest work to name the Brhannaradiya-p. and to recognise it as an authoritative Upapuraņa. Following the Ekāmra-p., two Purānic works of Bengal, viz., the Uttara-khanda (of the Bengal Siva-p.) and the Brhaddharma-p., recognise the authority of the Brhannaradiya-p. without a shade of doubt. Among the Smrttwriters it is Sulapani of Bengal who is the first to draw upon this work; and it is remarkable that the comparatively early Smrti-writers recognising the authority of the Bṛhannāradīya-p. belong mostly to Bengal and very rarely to Mithilā, that this work came to be accepted as an authority on Dharma in other parts of Northern India much later, and that it was unknown in Southern India to a still later period. So, it seems that some person from the land about the Narmadā or Vārānasī migrated to the eastern part of Orissa or the western part of Bengal and wrote the Bṛhannāradīya-p. immediately after settling there. It is perhaps for this reason that this work refers very often to the use and gift of betel-leaves¹⁰ and denounces the stealing of betelnuts (14. 43) and makes no mention of the rivers and holy places of Bengal, Orissa or Mithilā.

- (a) saśańkali sarvadā duḥkhī niliśankali sarvadā sukhī/ sarva-bliūta-hito dānto niliśańkali sarvadaiva hi// (4.74).
- (b) yasya mātā grhe nāsti bhāryā cāpriya-vādinī/ araņyam tena gantavyam yathāranyam tathā grham// (1044).
- (c) yasya mātā gṛhe nāsti putrā dharma-parāyanāh/ sādhvī ca strī pati-prāṇā yātavyaṃ tena vai vanam// (10 48).
- (d) ātma-buddhiḥ śubhakarī guru-buddhir viśesatah/, para-buddhir vināśāya strī-buddhih pralayaṃkarī// (11.93).
- (c) tyaja durjana-saṃsargaṃ bhaja sādhu-samāgamam/, kuru punyam ahorātram smara viṣṇum sanātanam// (15. 17).
- (f) na jātu kāmaḥ kāmānām upabhogena śāmyatı (31. 99).
- (g) picumardalı plialadliyo 'pi kakair evelia bhujyate (34. 13).
- (h) sujano na yātī vairam para-hita-buddhir vināśa-kale 'pi/ 'chede 'pi candana-tarur vāsayatī mukham kuṭhārasya/(35.34) 198

The great popularity of the verses (b) and (d) in Bengal seems to point to this province as the place of origin of the Brhannāradīya-p., which belongs to the Bhāgavatas.

197 See ibid., 13. 142 (on praise of tāmbūla-dāna), 19. 8 (on offer of tāmbūla to Visnu in Haripaficaka-vrata), 24. 36 (prohibition to take tāmbūla in an impure state), 26. 3 (tāmbūla—not to be taken by one performing Śrāddha), 26. 78 (offer of tāmbūla to the Brahmins fed in a Śrāddha ceremony), 29. 33 (pleasure enjoyed by, a giver of tāmbūla).

198 This verse has been ascribed to Ravigupta in Särngadhara-paddhati, p. 38 (No. 237), but quoted anonymously in Vallabhadeva's Subhäsitävali, p. 38 (No. 241).

CHAPTER V

SOME LOST SAURA AND VAISNAVA UPAPURĀŅAS

For more than two thousand years the Puranas have constituted a living literature in India, being intended to guide the common people in their religious and social life in different ages and also sometimes in different localities. The political changes and religious movements, which ancient and mediaeval India experienced not infrequently, could not be expected to allow the life of the people to remain static, but great care was taken by the Brahmins to preserve as far as possible the Vedic basis of religion and society under changed circumstances. As it was not possible for these leaders of the Hindu society to ignore totally the environments and the influence of the age, they had often to make a compromise between the old and the new life, and this spirit of compromise was responsible for the total extinction of some of the Puranic works and for changes and modifications in others. Among the principal Puranas the genuine Brahma, Brahmavarivatta and Garuda-purana are still untraceable, the present Puranas of the same titles being spurious works of later dates. The loss sustained by the Upapurana literature also is not negligible, and this will be evident from the number and nature of the extinct works treated of in the following pages and in the other Volumes of the present work. Of these extinct Upapuranas, not a single is now found to exist in manuscripts or printed forms. Isolated verses or extracts from some of these Upapuranas have been preserved as quotations in the Smrti Nibandhas, but the rest are known merely by name either from the lists of Upapuranas contained in the Puranic and other works, or from the treatises on Vrata, Māhātmya, etc. which claim to be parts of these. It is, however, not quite impossible that manuscripts will be discovered some day of one or more of these Upapuranas which we now take to be extinct.

Our highly imperfect knowledge of the vast area of India and the literary activities of her people in the different ages of her history, stands seriously in the way of our preparing an exhaustive list of the lost Upapurānas. So, we have been compelled to limit our treatment of these lost works only to those few Upapurānas which have been named, described or drawn upon in various works, especially in those of the Purāna and the Smṛṭi literature. Of these few works, again, we supply information, in the following pages, only about those which have been known to have belonged definitely to the Sauras and the Vaisnavas. The former sectaries, as the Bhavisya-p. indicates, began their literary activity quite early, but their output was very scanty unlike that of the Vaisnavas, whose numerical strength has been balanced by their zealous literary activity in all ages.

We shall now record our information about the extinct Saura and Vaisnava Upapurānas separately in two groups (A) and (B).

1. THE SAURADHARMA

This work has been mentioned in the Bhavisya-p.¹ together with the 'eighteen Purānas', 'the Biography of Rāma' (i.e. the Rāmāyaṇa), the Mahābhārata, the Viṣnudharma, the Sivadharma and other sacred works which are to be known by the technical term 'Jaya'. So, according to the Bhavisya-p. it was an early work dealing with the duties of the Sauras. But unfortunately its title has not been included in any of the lists of Upapurānas known to us. Yet we have taken it to be an Upapurāna for two reasons. Firstly, it appears to have

See Bhav. I. 4. 87b-89—

 saurā dharmāś ca rājendra nāradoktā mahīpate/

jayeti nāma etesām pravadanti manīsinah //

(The printed ed wrongly reads 'frautāh' for 'saurāh' in the fourth line, Cf. Bhav. I. 216. 36-37 quoted on p. 113 above).

The above verses, as quoted in Laksmidhara's Krtya-kalpataru (I, p 25), Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmaņi (II 1, pp. 19-20), Candeśvara's Krtya-ratnākara (p. 30), Raghunandana's Smrti-tattva (I, p 71), Narasimha Vājapeyin's Nityācāra-pradipa (I, p. 22), and Mitra Miśra's Vicamitrodaya, Paribhāsā-prakāśa (p. 17), read the second line as 'visnudharmādi śāstrāni śivadharmāś ca bhārata' and the fourth line as 'saurāś ca dharmā rājendra mānavoktā mahīpate' had the form and contents of a Purāņic work; and secondly, the Viṣṇudhatma, Viṣṇudhatmottara, Sivadhatma and Sivadhatmottara have been regarded as minor Purāṇas by various authorities.

The Sauradharma has been drawn upon in Ananta-blatta's Vidhüna-pārijāta (II, p. 696), Gadādhara's Kālasāra (p. 129), Gopālabhatta's Haribhakti-vilāsa (p. 773), Gaṇapati's Gaṇgā-bhakti-taraṅginī (fols. 30b and 31a-b), Raghunandada's Smṛti-tattva (I, p. 142, and II, pp. 41 and 48), Srīnāthācārya-cūdāmaṇi's Kṛtya-tattvārṇava (fols. 77b-78a), Vācaspati-miśra's Kṛtya-cintāmaṇi (p. 2), Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmaṇi (II. i, p. 1000, II. ii, pp. 552-7, and III. ii, pp. 114, 150, 179), Sūlapāṇi's Vrata-kāla-viveka (p. 18), and in the Saṃvatsara-pradīpa (fol. 39a). So, this work cannot be dated later than 1000 A.D. We shall see below that the Sauradharma must bave been written later than the Sauradharma must bave been written earlier than 800 A.D.

We cannot push the above date farther up, because we are not sure that the Sauradharma, drawn upon by the Smrti-writers, was the same as the 'Saura Dharma' mentioned in Bhav. I.4.89 and I. 216, 37. Some of the verses, ascribed to the Sauradharma in the Smrti Nibandhas, show that in this work, as known to the Smrti-writers, Vasistha spoke to king Māndhātr at least in some of its parts, but according to the Bhavisya-p. Nārada (or Mānava) spoke out the 'Saura Dharmas' or 'the (religious) duties of the Sun-worshippers'.

As the Visnudharma and the Swadharma, mentioned in the Bhavisya-p., belonged to the Vaisnavas and the Saivas respectively, there can be little doubt about the fact that the 'Saura Dharma', known to the Bhavisya, must have dealt principally, if not entirely, with the duties of the Sun-worshippers. From the evidence of the quoted verses also we understand that the Sauradharma, as known to the Smṛṭi-writers, was a work of the Sauras and that at least in some parts of this work Sūta reported what he had heard from Vyāsa on the interlocution between Vasiṣṭha and Māndhāṭṛ. Most of these quoted.

verses relate to fasting on the Ekādasī Tithi, two to the religious duties in the month of Māgha (māgha-krtyāni), and one to the entables in the Kāmya-vrata; and there is one long extract, quoted in Caturvarga-cintāmani, II. ii, pp. 552-7, which deals with the Sūrya-vrata to be performed every month from Mārgasīrṣa by placing a golden image of the Sun in a silver chariot. In the verses ascribed to the Sauridharma in the Vidhāna-pārijāta and the Caturvarga-cintāmani there is mention of the Tulasī plant, of which three leaves are to be eaten up by the persons observing the Kāmya-vrata and the Sūrya-varta every month from Mārgasīrṣa.

2. THE SAURADHARMOTTARA

This work also, like the Sauradharma mentioned above, should be regarded as an Upapurāna, although no writer has called it so. It has been drawn upon in Gopāla bhatta's Haribhakti vilāsa (pp. 776, 808), Raghunandana's Smrti tittva (II. p. 50), Candeśvara's Tithi nirņaya (fols. 122, 132, 13b), Hemādri's Caturvarga cintāmaņi (III. ii, p. 249) and Jimūtavāhana's Kālaviveka (pp. 4323, 443, 444, 447). So, it must have been written not later than 900 A. D.

The Sauradharmottara does not seem to have been rich in Smṛti materials. Only a few verses have been quoted from it in the Smṛti works, and all these verses relate to Ekādaši-upavāsa.

3. THE SORYA-PURANA

In his Tuhi-nimaya (fol. 2a) Candeśvara quotes a verse (saṃkrāntyām ravi-vāre ca tathā cendu-pariksaye, etc.), which he ascribes to the 'Sūrya-purāna'; Weber describes a Ms of the 'Kṛṣṇa-pañcami-śrāddha-vidhi' which claims to belong to the 'Sūrya-purāna'a; and in the Berlin Ms of the Bhavisyottara there is a chapter on Putea-Lāma Lesna-pañcami-veata which, in its colophon, names the 'Sūrya-purāna' as its source. As neither the said verse quoted by Candeśvara nor the chapters on Kṛṣṇa-pañcami-śrāddha-vidhi and Putra-kāmakṛṣṇa-pañcamī-vrata occur in the present Sāmba-p. and as no other writer is found to refer to or draw upon the Sāmba-p. under the title 'Sūrya-p.', there is little scope for doubt that the Sūrya-p. was a distinct work. Its title as well as its mention in the Bhavisya-p. as the source of the said chapter on Putra-kāma-kṛṣṇa-pañcamī-vrata shows that the Sūrya p. belonged to the Sauras and was an early work. But unfortunately none of its Mss has come down to us.

According to D. R. Bhandarkar, a Sūrya-p. quite distinct from the Bhavişya-p. is known to the Brahmins, called Sevaks, living round about Jodhpur. As no Ms of this work is known to have been discovered as yet, we are in complete darkness about its nature and contents. The fact that the Sevaks, who call themselves Sākadvīpa Brāhmaṇas, 'know that their story is told in the Nāmagrantha of the Sūrya-purāṇa and also in the Bhaviṣya-purāṇa', shows clearly that this Sūrya-p. was a Saura work. It may be mentioned in this connection that in his Tithi-nirṇaya Caṇdeśvara quotes a few verses by expressly naming the Bhaviṣya-p. as their source and that the verse of the 'Sūrya-p', quoted in Caṇdeśvara's Tithi-nirṇaya occurs neither in the present Bhaviṣya-p, nor in the Bhaviṣyottara.

1. THE ADI-PURANA

This work, which was also called Adya-purāṇa, Sanatkumāra, Sānatkumāra, Sanatkumāra, Sanatkumārīya, Sanatkumārokta and Sanatkumāra-prokta, was quite distinct from the present Adi-p. published from Calcutta (with a Bengali translation) by Navīna-kṛṣṇa Lāhā in 1891 and from Bombay by the Venkaṭeśvara Press in Saka 1829 and preserved in Mss in all parts of India. It occupied a very exalted position among the Upapurāṇas and was a Vaiṣṇava work composed between 500 and 700 A.D. and probably during the sixth century.

2. THE ANGIRASA-UPAPURANA

The title of this work is found included in none of the lists of eighteen Upapurānas except that given in the Ekāmra-p., one does any comparatively early Smṛṭi-writer, except Gopāla-bhaṭṭa, draw upon or refer to it in his work. The only verse, which Gopāla-bhaṭṭa quotes from it in his Haribhakti-vilāsa, p 677, says that if, being afraid of rebirths, any one pronounces the name 'Vāsudeva', he is sure to become free from these and attain the region of Visnu.

The title of this work and the quoted verse mentioned above indicate that this Upapurāņa was narrated by the sage Angiras and that it dealt primarily with the praise of Visnu-Vāsudeva.

Gopāla-bhaṭṭa's quotation from this Upapurāṇa and the mention of its title in the Ekāmra-p.⁸ (which is drawn upon by Gadādhara in his Kālasāta and mentioned in the Uttara-khaṇḍa of the Bengal Śiva-p.⁹) show that it was written earlier than 1000 A.D., most probably in Western Bengal or Orissa. But as it is not mentioned in any other list of eighteen Upapurānas, and as none of the comparatively early Nibandha-writers is found to draw upon or refer to this work, it must have been composed at a date not much earlier than 900 A.D.

3. THE BRHAD-VĀMANA-PURĀŅA

A 'Vāmana' Upapurāņa is mentioned in some of the lists of Upapurānas, but there is not a single list which mentions the Bṛhadvāmana-purāṇa. None of the comparatively early authors is found to draw upon or refer to this work. It is only in the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta that six verses have been ascribed to the 'Bṛhad-vāmana'. In the first of these quoted verses Krsṇa refers to his indescribable mental condition at the remembrance of his Rāsa-līlāto, and in the remaining five, Brahmā speaks to 'Bhṛgu and others' on the glory of the Gopīs of Vṛndāvana, for the dusts of whose feet Brahmā practised austerities for sixty thousand years. From these quoted verses we understand that this Upapurāṇa was a Vaiṣṇava work and dealt primarily with the sports of the cowherd Kṛṣṇa at Vṛndāvana.

As the present Vāmana-p. does not contain any of these quoted verses or deal with any topic connected with the cowherd Kṛṣṇa, it cannot be the same as the Bṛhad-vāmana. The Vāmana-upapurāṇa also, if there were any Upapurāṇa of this title, must have been different from the Bṛhad-vāmana. The latter, as evidenced by its non-mention in any comparatively early work, must have been written at a late date.

4. THE BRHAD-VISNUDHARMA

This work has not been mentioned in any of the lists known to us, but about eight verses have been quoted from it in Jimūtavāhana's Kālaviveka, p. 460. As in his Kālaviveka Jīmūtavāhana has drawn upon the Viṣṇudharmottara and the Viṣṇudharmottarāmṛta also, the Bṛhad-viṣṇudharma must be a separate work. It must have been based Jīmūtavāhana's quotations from the Brhad-viṣnudharma show that it must have been written not later than 900A.D. As it was based on the Viṣṇudharmottara, it cannot be dated earlier than 600A.D.

5 THE BRHAD-VISNU-PURÂNA

This work is mentioned as 'Brhad-vaisnava' in the list of Upapurāṇas given in the Ekāmra-p.¹² and is drawn upon under the title 'Brhad-visnu-purāna' in the Caturvarga-cintāmani (III. 1, pp. 704, 711, 726-7), Haribhakti-vilāsa (pp. 449, 495, 658, 661, 685), (Gopālabhaṭta's) Satkriyā-sāra-dīpikā (pp. 45, 46, 98, 108), (Sanātana Gosvāmin's commentaries) Bṛhat-tosinī and Vaiṣṇava-toṣinī^{12a} (on Bhāg. X. 21. 10), (Sanātana-Gosvāmin's) Laghubhāgavatāmṛta (p. 147—I, No. 397, and pp. 163-4—I, No. 471), and (Ratnākara Miśra's) Prāyaścitta-sāra-samgraha¹³. In the Laghubhāgavatāmṛta this Upapurāṇa is also named as 'Bṛhad-vaisnava'.

Hemādri's knowledge of the Brhad-visņu-p. shows that this work must have been written not later than 1000 A.D. We do not know whether this Bṛhad-viṣnu-p. was the same as the spurious 'Vaisṇava Purāna' known to Vallālasena. This 'Vaisnava Purāṇa' contained 23000 verses and was, therefore, an extensive (brhat) work.

The Brhad-visnu-p. was undoubtedly a Vaisnava work dealing with the praise and worship of Viṣṇu. In his Haribhakti-vilāsa Gopāla-bhaṭṭa quotes from this work seven verses which say that the water, which is placed before the eyes of Keśava and is mixed with Tulasī leaves, or with which the Sālagrāma stone has been bathed, is extremely sanctifying, that no twice-born man should hesitate to partake of the food and drink offered to Viṣṇu, because such food and drink are never affected by anybody's touch, that the mention of Viṣṇu's name is highly sanctifying and beneficial and is able to destroy much more sin than a sinner can commit, and that the muttering of the word 'vāsudeva' can give one final emancipation. In the Laghubhāgavatāmṛta Viṣṇu is called 'nityāvatāra', 'nitya-mūrti', 'nitya-rūpa', 'nityaisvarya-sukhānubhū' etc. and Kṛṣṇa's exploits at Vraja are said to have been described elaborately in the Brhad-vișnu-purăna.19 According to the verse20 quoted from the Brhad-visnu-purana' in Sanātana Gosvāmin's commentaries Brhat-toşinī and Vaisnava-toşinī (on Bhag. X. 21. 10), Nanda's wife had two names, Yasoda and Devaki, and it was for this reason that she had friendship with Devakī, wife of Sauri (Vasudeva). That the Brhad-visnu-p. dealt also with penance, funeral ceremony etc., is evidenced by its verses quoted in the Prayaścitta-sāra-saṃgraha and the Caturvarga-cintāmaņi. Of these two works the latter has 30 metrical lines on gifts of umbrellas, chowries, mirrors, combs, young cows with calves, female buffaloes, bulls, camels, goats, sheep etc. to the departed forefathers, the recipients of all these gifts being the Brahmins.21 In the Satkriyā-sāra-dīpikā (pp. 45, 46, 98, 108) five verses have been ascribed to the 'Brhad-visnu-purana'. In one of these verses the Satvatas have been advised neither to worship the Pitrs and the gods other than Visnu nor to do any other kamya karman; 22 one verse prescribes the worship of the gods and Pitrs to those persons who are not Satvatas; in one verse the sanctifying power of the Candrayana-vrata and the Dvadasa-varşika-vrata has been put forth; and in the remaining two, Visnu has been described as the cause of all kinds of bliss. It is to be noted that in the verse ascribed to the 'Brhad-visnu-p.' in Satkriyā-sāra-dīpikā, p. 46, the word 'rajendra' has been used in the Vocative Case and that in explaining this verse Gopala-bhatta takes this word to mean 'Yudhisthira'. So, in the Brhad-viṣṇu-p. somebody spoke to Yudhiṣṭhira on the topics mentioned above.

In his Notices of Sanskrit Mss, II, pp. 68-69 (No. 635) R. L. Mitra describes a Ms of the Karma-vipāka which, in its colophon, claims to be an extract from the Bhrgu-samhitā belonging to the Brhadviṣṇu-p. The date of this Ms is 1687 Saka (= 1765 A. D.), and in it Bhrgu speaks to Bharata, son of Sakuntalā, on the diseases and other evils resulting in this life from sins committed in a previous one, as well as on the expatiations meet for their removal.

6. THE BRHANNARASIMHA-PURĀŅA

We have said above²³ that the Ekāmra-p. clearly distinguishes between the 'Nārasiṃha' and the 'Bṛhannārasiṃha' by including the former among the principal Purāṇas and the latter among the Upapurānas. In his Haribhakti-vilāsa Gopālabhaṭṭa is found to ascribe about a century of verses to the Narasiṃha-p. and 63 verses (on Narasiṃha-caturdaśī-vrata) to the Bṛhannarasiṃha-p. So, according to Gopāla-bhaṭṭa also, the Brhannarasiṃha-p. was distinct from the Narasiṃha-p. But as the 63 verses, quoted by Gopālabhaṭṭa from the 'Bṛhannarasiṃha-p.', have been ascribed to the 'Narasiṃha-p.' in Hemādri's Caturvarga-cintāmaṇi, II. ii, pp. 41-49, it is probable that either Hemādri took these two Purānic works to be identical, or the extract on the Narasiṃha-caturdaśī-vrata occurred in both these works. It should be mentioned here that none of the 63 verses, mentioned above, is found in the present text of the Narasiṃha-p.

As the Brhannarasimha-p. is mentioned in the Ekamta-p., it must be dated earlier than the eleventh century A.D.

7. THE DAURVASASA-UPAPURĀŅA (alias ĀSCARYA-UPAPURĀNA)

This work is mentioned in all the lists of Upapurāņas except those contained in the Ekāmra-p. and the Bṛhaddharma-p.²⁴ In some of these lists it is named as 'Durvāsasokta'; the Saura-saṃhitā of the Skanda-p. calls it 'Durvāsaḥ-saṃprokta'; and Narasiṃha Vājapeyin names it as 'Durvāsah-purāṇa'. In the lists of Upapurāṇas contained in the Kūrma-p., Garuḍa-p, and Skanda-p. VII (Prabhāsa-khaṇḍa) as well as in those lists which are ascribed to the Kūrma-p. in the Malamāsa-tattva, Vīramītrodaya, Caturvarga-cintāmaṇi and Sabda-kalpadruma, this Upapurāṇa is described as 'durvāsasoktam āścaryam.'

²⁴ For these lists see Chap. I above,

We are not sure whether the word 'āścarya' is the title of the Upapurāna 'narrated by Durvāsas', or it is merely an adjective denoting the nature of this Upapurāna. Rādhāramaṇa Gosvāmi-bhatṭācārya, in his commentary on the Malamāsa-tattva, takes the word 'āścarya' to be the title of the Upapurāṇa 'narrated by Durvāsas'. 25

According to the Revā-khaṇda (of the Skanda-p.) and the Revā-māhātmya the 'Daurvāsasa' Upapurāṇa belonged to the 'Bhāgavata' Purāna. 26 So, this Upapurāṇa must have been a work of the Vaiṣnavas.

The mention of this Upapurāṇa in all the comparatively early lists of Upapurānas shows that it must have been written before 800 A.D. and that it attained great popularity at an early date. As no Ms of this Upapurāṇa or of any tract on Vrata, Māhātmya etc. claiming to belong to it, has been discovered as yet, and as none of the commentators and Nibandha-writers is found to draw upon or refer to this work, it is not possible to say anything about its contents. It seems that this work became extinct even before the tenth century A.D.

8. THE KAUSIKA- (OR KAUSIKI-) PURĀNA

This work has been mentioned in Bhavānanda's Hari-vaṃśa², a popular work composed in Bengali verses in the district of Sylhet or Tipperah some time between the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries A.D. According to Bhavānanda, the Kausika-p. (also called Kauṣikī-p. in some of the Mss of the Hari-vaṃśa)²⁸ contamed the following story.²⁹

When descending to the earth with the purpose of relieving her of her burden, god Nārāyaṇa asked Garuḍa which form he would assume to accompany him to the land of mortals. Garuḍa was not willing to change his form during such a dangerous period. So, he assured

Nārāyaṇa that he would present himself to serve as a mount as soon as Nārāyaṇa would remember him in times of his need. But Nārāyana did not like to remain separated from Garuḍa for a long time. He said to Garuḍa:

"Hear, Oh eater of snakes, hear now the wish of my heart, When I shall be passing some time at Gokula as a child, a part of yours will remain with me. You will be born as a cuckoo, [and] I shall constantly hear [your] high, sweet note. When, after my killing of Kamsa by going to Mathurā, king Jarāsandha will challenge me to war, I shall remember you on that very day. As you do not agree to accompany me by forsaking this body [of youts], the cuckoo will give up its life without finding me, and all its energy and strength will pass into you".

Now, Nārāyaṇa was born on earth as Kṛṣṇa, and a part of Garuda became a cuckoo. In course of time, when Kṛṣṇa was away in Mathurā and Rādhā was pining for him, the cuckoo, being unable to bear his separation, searched for him in all possible places and at last went to Rādhā's house with the hope of finding him there. But due disappointment was in store for the cuckoo. It gave up its life as a result of the rude shock, and its soul passed to Vaikunṭha and enterd the body of Garuḍa.

From the mention of Rādhā in the above story as given by Bhavānanda it appears that the Kauṣika- (or Kauṣikī-) purāṇa, known to him, was a Vaiṣṇava work written at a comparatively late period. The total absence of any mention of this Purāṇa in any work other than Bhavānanda's Hari-vaṃśa shows that it was a work of local origin and highly limited recognition.

9. THE LAGHU-BHĀGAVATA-PURĀŅA

It is only the Ekämra-p. which includes the name of this work in its list of Upapurāṇas. In his Haribhaktı-vılāsa (pp. 657, 660, 667, 685) Gopāla-bhaṭṭa quotes from this work six verses on the praise of pronouncing the name of Govinda (or Hari). So, this work must have been written in Western Bengal or Orissa not later than 1000 A.D. but most probably not before 800 A.D. Its ritle as well as the quoted verses shows that it was a work of the Vaiṣṇavas. In the verse from it in Haribhakti-vilasa, p. 685 the word 'nṛpa' has been used in the Vocative Case. So, in this Upapurana somebody, whose name is unknown to us, spoke to a king (whose name also we do not know) on the benefits of pronouncing the name of Hari.

10. THE MĀGHA-PURĀNA

A Purāṇic work of this name has been mentioned in the colophon of a Ms of the Bāla-gopāla-stuti ascribed to 'Śrī-paramahamsa-parivrājaka-śrīpāda-Bilvamangala'.³⁰ The words 'iti māgha-purāṇe bhagavad-vākyam', used in this colophon, tend to indicate that the Māgha-p. had the Bhagavat (Visnu or Kṛṣna) as one of its speakers. As we have not yet met with any second mention of this Purāna anywhere, we are in complete darkness about its nature and contents and do not know whether it was the same as the "Māgha-smṛti" mentioned by Jīva Gosvāmin in his commentary on the Bhāgavata-p. It is, however, sure that this Magha-p. is not the same as the Māgha-māhātmya belonging to the Padma-p., Uttara-khaṇḍa.

11. THE PRABHĀSA-PURĀŅĀ

This Upapurāṇa is mentioned as 'Prabhāsaka' in the list of Upapurāṇas contained in the Ekāmra-p,; and from this work Sanātana Gosvāmin quotes one metrical line on the praise of the name of Kṛṣna in his commentary Vaisnava-toṣinī, 31 and Gopāla-bhaṭṭa has a complete verse on the same topic in his Haribhakti-vilāsa. 32 So, this Prabhāsa-p. must have been written earlier than 1000 A.D. Its non-mention in the other lists shows that it was a comparatively late work.

From the title of this Upapurāņa as well as from Sanātana Gosvāmin

- 30 For information about this Ms see O. C. Ganguly in Malaviya Commemoration Volume, 1932, pp. 285-9.

and Gopāla-bhaṭṭa's quotations from this work we understand that it was a Vaiṣṇava work dealing with the praise of Kṛṣṇa and Prabhāsa-kṣetra, and that in it Nārada narrated to (king) Kuśadhvaja what he had heard from Kṛṣṇa. Beyond this we have got no further information about this Upapurāṇa.

The Prabhasa-p. must not be taken to be the same as the Prabhasa-khanda of the Skanda-p. In the latter work, the lines, ascribed by Sanatana Gosvamin and Gopala-bhatta to the 'Prabhasa-purana', are not found, nor is there any interlocution between Narada and Kusadhvaja.

12. THE VIȘŅUDHARMOTTARĀMŖTA

The name of this work is not mentioned in any of the lists of Upapurāṇas known to us, nor is it referred to or drawn upon in any work except Jīmūtavāhana's Kālaviveka, which has two verses from it on p. 464. The absence of these two quoted verses in the Viṣṇudharmottara, shows that the Viṣṇudharmottarāmṛta was a separate work; but its title indicates that it was based on the Viṣṇudharmottara.

The Visnudharmottaramita must have been written later than the Visnudharmottara but a few centuries earlier than Jimūtavāhana. Hence it is to be dated between 600 and 900 A.D.

THE VŖDDHA-PADMA-PURĀŅA

This work has been mentioned as 'Vṛddha-pādma' in Śrī-anantā-cārya's Prapannāmṛta. According to Śrī-anantācārya, this 'Vṛddha-pādma' contained stories about Rāmānuja and the Alwar saints of Southern Indian. So, it seems to have been a late work. It is neither mentioned in any of the lists of Upapurāṇas nor referred to or drawn upon by any of the Smṛti-writers, early or late.

dvādaśi sravanā-yuktā sprśed ekādaśiṃ yadi/

sa eva vaiṣṇavo yogo viṣṇu-śṛṅkhala-saṇinitaḥ//

tasminn uposya vidhivan naraḥ saṃkirṇa-kalmaṣaḥ/
